Three Helens In His Life

having an affair with the quiet-appearing guard for almost two years, police reported. The subsequent investigation into the practical nurse's brutal death led police to Seeger's wife, Helena, and to his new bride, Helen.

The two "wives" had learned of each other's existence for the first time on the day Miss Smith was killed. The legal Mrs. Seegers said she was afraid. The new bride was wrapped in grief. Here is the word picture of the three women named Helen—and the part they played in Seegers' life, which the AFRO pieced together after lengthy inquiries this week:

Helena Seegers

Choir Singer

The first woman is Mrs. Helena Seegers.

Mrs. Seegers, formerly Miss Helena Jackson, married Lester on March 1, 1942, in the District.

"I had been going with him over a year," she told the AFRO, "and I thought he was a wonderful person."

SHE SAID she and Seegers were "happy" for about five years after their marriage, and "then he began to change."

Although Mrs. Seegers could not describe the "change," in her husband, she said he grew worse when she was expecting their child.

"When I told him about it, he was happy at first," she said, "but later, when he learned about the hospital bills, he seemed angry."

ACCORDING TO a suit for maintenance filed in District Court, Mrs. Seegers charged that her husband deserted her on June 6, 1952, and subsequently failed to support her and the child, who was then seven weeks.

The couple had lived in the 2200 block 12th St., NW, where Mrs. Seegers still resides.

During the year of 1953, a series of complaints were filed by Mrs. Seegers, charging him with non-support.

She stated in a report to the domestic relations commissioner that Seegers was "a moderate drinker, but when drinking becomes abusive and profane."

ONCE, A SOCIAL worker advised Mrs. Seegers to resume residence with her husband, but Mrs. Seegers declared in a petition that "she found him living in a small hall room, passing himself off as a single man."

Seegers' answer to this charge was that he had lived with his wife's parents for more than nine years, and had made an effort to get his wife to live with him.

"My wife is dominated by her mother," Seegers charged, "and this caused our separation." He denied drinking or smoking, and asserted he did not associate with other women.

AT THAT time, Seegers was employed as a porter at the W. W. Chambers Funeral home, and had a part-time job at Bob's Liquor store. Mrs. Seegers was a part-time elevator operator, which is still her present employment.

Failing to answer a court order giving Mrs. Seegers custody of the child, and directing him to pay $22.50 per week for their support, Seegers was arrested on August 13, 1953, for default.

After spending a four-day-period in District jail, Seegers obtained the $292.29 he owed his wife in back payments, and was released from jail.

"I DON'T know where he got the money," Mrs. Seegers said, "but I believe the woman who was later killed gave it to him."

Mrs. Seegers said she had known about Miss Smith before the child was born and prior to the time of her husband's desertion.

"I called her once at the Whitelaw hotel," she said, "and asked her if she knew she was having an affair with a married man."

MRS. SEEGERS said Miss Smith was surprised by the telephone call and told her it was a mistake.

"I don't even know a 'Lester Seegers'," Mrs. Seegers quoted Miss Smith as saying.

She quoted the woman, who was later slain, as saying Seegers had told her his name was "John Smith."

Mrs. Seegers said Miss Smith had seemed "friendly enough" during their first conversation, but had continued seeing her husband.

"After that, things were tense between us," she said.

After Seegers was released from jail, the monthly payments came regularly. Occasionally, he came to see his wife, and daughter, now two years old.

"TWO WEEKS ago, he took both of us shopping, and bought the child a tricycle for Christmas," Mrs. Seegers said. "He kept saying to me, 'one day I'm going to get you and the child back.'"

She continued: "I had a premonition that something was wrong. He always had such a lovely personality —but then he wasn't smiling."

Mrs. Seegers said her husband originally came from Monroe, N.C. and attended Cardozo high school. She is a native of Washington, and sings soprano in the Vermont Avenue Baptist choir.

"MAYBE HE didn't like living here, because I am a Christian woman," Mrs. Seegers said, speaking of the time he deserted her.

On the day Miss Smith was killed, Mrs. Seegers called her in an effort to learn the address of her husband. "He didn't send the allotment last week, and I was worried," she declared.

She stated that Miss Smith told her that Seegers was now living at an address in the 3000 block Warder St., NW.

TELEPHONING THE home, Mrs. Seegers was told her husband did not live there, but a "John Smith" did.

She also learned that Seegers had remarried, and at that point informed the person answering the telephone that 'John Smith," was her own husband "Lester Seegers."

Mrs. Seegers told the AFRO: "Maybe what I did broke up his new home. Ever since I learned his girlfriend who gave me the address was killed, I've been praying.

"SUNDAY NIGHT, I cried in my sleep. It seemed I could hear the singing of hymns and Lester's voice calling me.

"I wouldn't say anything against him, for I have no malice in my heart." Slowly she turned to look through the window. "I live in fear," she said.

Beautician

The second woman was Helen Brown Smith,

Mrs. Smith, 28, was married to Lester Seegers, 45, alias "John Smith" on November 13, 1954.

THE PASTOR who married them, the Rev. William L. Watts, pastor of Second Union Baptist Church, old the AFRO:

"They seemed like such a happy couple."

The Rev. Mr. Watts said he received a telephone call from a man in early November, asking him if he would perform the wedding ceremonies.

"I didn't know the couple," the Rev. Mr. Watts said, "because they are not members of my church." However, he consented to perform the ceremonies, and later married them at the bride's home in the 3400 block Warder St., NW, before a "huge crowd."

AFTER ONLY two weeks of marriage, Helen Brown was destined to learn the true identity of her husband, whom she had met in July.

On the day Miss Smith was killed, a woman called the Warder St. home, informing Mrs. George Colbert, Miss Brown's aunt, that she was the legal wife of "John Smith," alias Lester Seegers.

"When I answered the telephone," Mrs. Colbert told the AFRO, "I invited the woman to come to our home and tell her story in Lester Seegers presence."

Mrs. Colbert said the caller identified herself as Mrs. Helen Seegers.

THE IRATE AUNT confronted Seegers, who was in bed, with the story told her by the woman on the telephone.

She said Lester Seegers never waited to be confronted by his legal wife, or the bride he had married under an assumed name.

"He took his clothes and left," she said.

Mrs. Colbert said her niece is originally from Arkansas, and had been living with her and her husband for seven years.

"WE LOVE her like our own child," she sobbed. "Helen has been broken up since the incident."

Mr. Colbert, in a separate interview, echoed his wife's love for their niece. "I think of her as my own flesh and blood," he stated.

He said he had known Lester Seegers only during the brief period he had courted Helen at the Colbert home.

AT THE TIME of his marriage to Helen Brown, Seegers listed his address in the 1800 block 16th St., NW. He had been a guard at the National Geographical Society, but resigned two weeks ago because of "ill health."

"I didn't even know where he worked," Mr. Colbert asserted.

Meanwhile, Mr. Colbert's niece, Helen, said she had no comment to make about the tragedy.

"Leave me alone," she wept silently. "Leave me out of it altogether. That woman they found dead should be written about — not me."

A beautician employed at Lamont Beauty Shop in the 1500 block North Capitol St., NW, Helen asserted she had not seen Lester Seegers since Friday morning — several hours before he left their home after the argument with her aunt.

"I didn't know about either of the other women," she said. "Neither his wife, nor the woman they found dead."

According to the marriage application taken out by Seegers, he swore under oath that he had no previous marriages, and that his name was "John Smith."

The Colberts live in a spacious home in an exclusive section of town. Mrs. Colbert declined to give her employment, but Mr. Colbert is a cab - driver, and was also described as a "businessman."

Practical Nurse

The third woman was Helen Smith, whose mutilated body was found in her room at the Whitelaw Hotel.

Miss Smith, according to reports, had been Seegers' girlfriend approximately two years. This coincides with the legal Mrs. Seegers' statement that she learned of Miss Smith a few weeks before Seeger deserted her and their child two years ago.

B-U-L-L-E-T-I-N-!
An inquest set been set at 12 noon, Friday into the death of Miss Helen Smith, police announced Thursday.

What attracted Miss Smith, a church-going woman to Seegers —a married man?

WHEN THE ill - fated girlfriend met Seegers, she knew nothing of his marital ties, friends report. Her first knowledge that her beloved "John Smith" was none other than Lester Seegers, came when she received the telphone call from the legal wife.

After that, who knows what conflicts tormeted the mind of the girl who had apparently been deceived?

Subsequent events indicate that Miss Smith confronted Seegers, and he admitted his true identity. However, she later continued the relationship with him after he reportedly made promises to divorce and marry her.

ABOUT 18 months ago, Seegers went to the Whitelaw where he took up residence with Miss Smith, police reported.

Up until the time of her death, Miss Smith occupied two rooms leased to her by Robert Jones, who occupied rooms behind her apartment. Mr. Jones told the AFRO Miss Smith repeatedly talked of her coming marriage to Seegers.

"She was as fine a person as you'd want to meet," Mr. Jones said of the practical nurse. "She didn't drink or smoke, and Seegers was her only boyfriend.

"She went to church every Sunday and had a host of women friends," he said.

Mr. Jones said Helen used to tell him occasionally of her troubles with Seegers. "She was upset when she learned he was married," he said, "but then she started looking forward to the divorce.

"SEEGERS IS type of man women would go for. He has looks and the physique of a prize fighter," Jones said.

He described Miss Smith as a "self-made woman." "She didn't have much education, but she went to school to take nursing. People liked her so well, she never had any trouble finding employment. Everybody vied for her services."

Despite her efforts at self-improvement and the purchase of a new car, Helen Smith was destined never to marry Lester Seegers.

It was a blow to her when he abruptly left in early November and married his new bride, Helen Brown.

"MISS SMITH seemed bitter about it," Mr. Jones said, "and later, for some reason she grew afraid. I remember about two weeks ago, she told me she was going to change the lock on her door, but she never did."

Last Friday, Miss Smith received a telephone call from the legal Mrs. Seegers asking the whereabouts of Lester. The despondent nurse gave the legal wife the address and was killed several hours later.

What happened after Miss Smith informed on Seegers to his wife? How did the man react when his legal wife called his new home and revealed his true identity to his in-laws?

Seegers was last seen by police accompanying Miss Smith to her apartment Friday evening, a few hours after he packed his clothes and left his new bride's home under pressure.

MISS SMITH'S body was not discovered until Sunday, when her sister, Mrs. Catherine Hembry, of the 2000 block Warder St., NW, called Mr. Jones and told him Miss Smith did not answer the telephone.

Mr. Jones entered Miss Smith's apartment, and found her lying on the floor covered with blood, and still wearing her white nurse's uniform. Police found a blood-stained hammer in the bureau drawer.

Miss Smith attended Randall Junior High School, and later took courses in nursing at the National Institute.

Funeral services will be held today (Friday) at Friendship Baptist Church, the Rev. D. H. Whiting presiding. Interment is at Woodlawn Cemetery.
