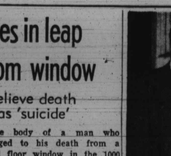
Dies in leap from window



Believe death was 'suicide'

The body of a man who plunged to his death from a third floor window in the 1000 block of Pennsylvania Ave. on tuesday night, lay unclaimed at the city morgue late Wednesday.

The victim was identified as Exper King, 42, and police said his death was an "apparent suicide." His nearest relatives were listed as his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel King of Durham, N.C.

A police report of the death said that King jumped from the window at 11:30 p.m. on Tuesday, and landed on the pavement.

THOMAS BELL, the apartment tenant, said he had given King permission to sleep in the room when he came to his home on November 19 and said that he had no place to stay.

Police identified King as a former inmate of Crownsville and said that when they entered the house to investigate the death, they found the door to his room locked and the window open. They were unable to find any personal effects of the man in the room.

A check of police records shows that on Sept. 21, of this year, King had been sentenced to 60 days in jail as a vagrant, and had given his address as "no. home."

Free housewife in hubby's death

Mrs. Cunningham acquitted by jury

A jury of six men and six women acquitted Mrs. Pearl Cunningham, 100 block Parkin St., 24-year-old housewife, for the June 7 fatal stabbing of her estranged husband, Raymond Cunningham, 31, 800 block Lemmon St.

Her attorney, W. Edgar Rhodes, argued that she acted as a "third party in self defense" in the case, to protect her sister, Mrs. Inez Easley, 800 block Lemon St. who was assaulted by the victim.

M. Peter Moser, assistant State's Attorney contended that Cunningham was too drunk that night and that the stabbing was not necessary to prevent him from harming Mrs. Easley.

TAKING THE stand in her own defense, Mrs. Cunningham, a small, attractive woman, who had been released on $5,000 bail pending the trial said:

"My sister and I were standing in front of my house getting ready to go to a tavern to see the fight, when Raymond came by, jerked me by the arm and started shoving me up the steps for no reason. Inez told him to stop and he turned on her.

"He had a knife in his hand and it dropped to the ground as he began beating my sister. I tried to get him away from her and then P picked up the knife and stabbed him. I ran to the corner store and called police and then threw the knife away."

Police said they never recovered the knife.

MRS. CUNNINGHAM explained she came to Baltimore from Virginia in 1950, and married her husband six months later. She lived with him until 1952, when she went to a state tuberculosis sanitorium.

In Dec. 1953, while home on leave from the hospital she separated from him. She was released from the hospital May 11, 1954, one month before the killing.

Medical reports showed Cunning was stabbed in the chest just above the heart. Spinal fluid showed 30 alcohol content which Dr. William Lovett Jr., assistant medical examiner explained meant the man was in an extreme drunken state.

Hoodlum plaster man's new home with eggs, ink

ANNOYED HOMEOWNER — Pestered by an unknown person or persons who have thrown eggs on his front porch and windows for four consecutive nights, James Gist of the 2700 block E. Chase St., prepares to clean up his property before going to his job at Sparrows Point. Mr. Gist moved into a formerly all-white community last May 24. The following day someone hurled a brick through his bedroom window.

Are there plans in operation to force a new home owner in the 2700 block E. Chase St. to move out of the community in disgust?

That's the question friends of James Gist have been discussing among themselves for the past four days.

Last May 4, Mr. Gist and his wife Laura moved into their attractive home at 2705 E. Chase St. Since then the exterior of their home has been plastered regularly with a combination of eggs and ink.

COMPLAINTS TO the police department have not relieved the Gists' disgust, for no one has been arrested or even seen for that matter.

They are the only colored family in the block and have also been subjected to a brick barrage in addition to having the front of their house plastered.

The second night they were in their home someone hurled a brick through a second floor rear window. That was over six months ago.

FOR FOUR mornings this week, they have had to make their way to work through egg shells on the porch, screen, and windows.

Police have promised that they will keep a lookout on his home from now on.

Mr. and Mrs. Gist are members of Faith Baptist Church and are parents of James R. Washington, a pre-med student at Howard.

prize to be awarded the healthiest baby.

To the winner will go a check for $300 and to the next five winners, the balance of the awards which will make up the total of $500.

FROM AMONG the more than 400 snapshots entered in this contest, 20 infants have been selected and their parents notified to bring them to the scene of final judging.

The five judges, all prominent citizens of Baltimore, will check each one of these tots for healthy appearance, sunny disposition and cute personality.

The final selection will be made and the winners announced on this occasion. Publication of their names and pictures will be carried in the Dec. 4 issue of the Baltimore AFRO-AMERICAN.

THE TREMENDOUS interest in this affair as indicated by the many entries made by readers of this paper make it one of the most successful contests ever run by the Carnation Company of Los Angeles, Calif.

In undertaking this venture, Carnation people told AFRO reporters that it was expected this first "Healthy Baby Contest" would be made an annual event in Baltimore as well as in many other cities throughout the country where similar contests have been conducted during the past six weeks.

CONTESTS ARE not new in Carnation's tremendous operation. But the use of a contest for research purposes is something of an innovation.

The most widely used brand of evaporated milk for infant feeding is the famous Carnation product which has been on the market for over 50 years.

While the benefits of a Carnation formula are known to parents everywhere, the proof of these benefits to doctors and scientists is in the infant themselves, many of whom are being found through "Healthy Baby Contests" such as has just been held here in Baltimore.

RESEARCH PLAYS a major role in the operations of Carnation Company. It follows many avenues to bring forth its findings. Near Seattle, Wash., Carnation maintains a 1,600 - acre farm, which is one of the finest in the world, and is known for dairy farmers everywhere.

Here, experiments on various breeds of cattle have produced some of the finest specimens of all-time, including 16 of the world's greatest butterfat and milk producers.

Such benefits are not only reflected in the quality of the milk available over the Carnation label, but in the herds of farmers the country over whose cattle contain some of these outstanding bloodlines.

CARNATION'S consumer consultants who work in the field among groups everywhere have commented so often about the healthy babies they have seen who were raised on Carnation Milk that such a contest as the current one was recognized for its value in bringing some of these fine examples of healthy Americans to light.

All readers of the Baltimore AFRO-AMERICAN are invited to join with the parents and friends of the infants in attending the final judgings in Carnation's First Annual Hometown "Healthy Baby Contest."
