the District of Columbia now before the high court, but also to citizens in any jim-crow state who may obtain the same relief by applying to a Federal District Court.

It was thought this week that President Eisenhower's comment on what his position was in the school segregation cases was out of place, and that the President was telling the Supreme Court what to do.

Mr. Brownell had not intended to file the Justice Department's brief immediately because the court had postponed arguments on the cases from December 6 to sometime in January.

The President's remarks made it advisable that the Brownell brief be submitted at once, and it constitutes the finest Thankgiving Day gift to the nation imaginable.

Snatching at straws

The supporters of ex - State Senator Bernard S. Melnicove are now snatching at loose straws in their efforts to arrest the election of Senator - elect Harry A. Cole.

Now they have brought up the smoke screen of "ghost voting" in the Fourth District as they continue to examine the voters' cards in the offices of the Supervisors of Elections.

Ghost voting exists in situations where voters are either too ill to attend the polls, are out of town or are dead and "ringers" vote from them. It is usually the work of well established crooked political machines. Political novices like those who laibored successfully for the election of Mr. Cole had no knowledge of such machine operations and would not have used them.

No doubt some errors will be found in the voters cards due to oversights of polling officials, but these were in the main inadvertent.

If there is real evidence of illegal "ghost voting" in the district, why doesn't the Pollack machine, the real force behind all the present checking and rechecking, take the matter to the courts for its unpolitical opinion?

Nothing but loose talk from the mouths of disappointed office seekers, say, and if anything, Mr. Melnicove's backers are hoping that when the official election of Mr. Cole is dropped in the laps of the State Legislature, some members will vote against Mr. Cole's being seated because of racial prejudices instead of law.

After all, only three councilmen can be elected to represent the voters in the Fourth District.

PARTING SHOT—Is there any significance to the fact that the small street which will be dug up at the Maryland penitentiary is named "Warden Street"?

Hodge-Podge

By BOB MATTHEWS

Every time I read about some one having 6ix or seven children in school at the same time, I doff the old chapeau and salaam to the East.

Can't help but sympathize with the poor papa if the school children attend is anything like the one where the kids of the menagerie are enrolled.

Seems that every week there's a note for the child to bring something to school. One week it's canned goods, next week, it's cookies for a Halloween party.

* * *

SANDWICHES in between are such requests as old clothes, two heads of lettuce . . . yea, that's what I said—two heads of lettuce.

Didn't even raise a quizzical eyebrow when Number Three child announced that she had to take the lettuce to school.

Thought perhaps they had some rabbits or guinea pigs or something of the sort at the school, and the lettuce was to feed them.

Discovered to my complete amazement that the class was having a Thanksgiving dinner. They did too—complete with turkey and all the trimmings.

* * *

RIGHT AFTER Number Three announced the lettuce blockbuster, Number Two child brought forth the information that she had to take some canned goods to school.

Further questioning elicited a response that her class was getting up baskets for the poor. They were to be given out on Thanksgiving Day. Something she take a can of beans or something.

Didn't object a bit. In fact, encouraged her to take two cans of beans. The way things are going, I'll be in line to get one of those poor baskets myself next year.

POLITICS — Leave us start talking right now about the upcoming city primaries for the City Council, for 1955 should be the year when we send a member of the council from the Fourth District after a hiatus of some 20-odd years.

Figures are dull items to read, but nevertheless they sometimes paint the picture where words would fail. For example:

There are 46,346 registered voters in the Fourth District. Of this total, 23,100 are colored. This leaves 23,246 white registered voters. Only 25 more or 146 more white registered voters than colored.

Yet here we are thinking and hoping to elect one of our own to the council after an absence of two decades.

The Fourth Councilmanic District is composed of the 13th, 14th, 15th and 17th wards. Here's a breakdown on how we are registered in these wards:

13th Ward—4,000
14th Ward—5,200
15th Ward—5,900
17th Ward—3,000

Enough to elect a councilman? Of course. Just one word of warning:

Too many cooks in a kitchen have often spoiled the dinner. Let's not have so many entries we can't tell the skim from the whole milk.

After all, only three councilmen can be elected to represent the voters in the Fourth District.

PARTING SHOT—Is there any significance to the fact that the small street which will be dug up at the Maryland penitentiary is named "Warden Street"?

Who will be next?

Maryland's Congress of Industrial Organizations announces it will hold no more annual sessions in Baltimore hotels until their accommodations are available to all members, colored and white.

The CIO thus follows the example of a number of national organizations, including educational and scientific associations, the American Legion, general conferences of the Methodist, United Brethren and Episcopal churches.

But the CIO is the first state organization to remove its annual meetings outside the state.

Washington's hotels are superior to those in Baltimore and more numerous.

Washington is closer to the southern and western parts of the state than Baltimore, and since the Bay Bridge is near Annapolis, it is as convenient for Eastern Shore delegates to go to Washington as to go to Baltimore.

Perhaps there are more Maryland and Virginia organizations which will find it advantageous to take their annual conventions to Washington hotels.

Douglass parents

Approximately 100 parents turned out for the monthly meeting of hte Parent-Teacher Association at Douglass High School last week.

If you understand that the

The Cherry Hill School attack

The new Cherry Hill Junior High School came in for some unfair criticism this week and we are wondering why.

The school was blasted by a Baltimore electrical contractor before the Board of Estimates, as an extravagance. The money the city paid for the modern facilities found in the school were said to have been "squandered" by the Department of Education.

Picked out as some examples of extravagance were the stone wall around the school, the auditorium control panel and electrically operated doors in the garage.

The Cherry Hill School is located in an all colored community and is one school in the city which may remain all colored longer than others.

And the cost of building of this particular school was below average for nine other schools in the city and surrounding communities.

These facts are borne out in a report by William E. Lehr, director of the public school facilities, and appear elsewhere in this edition of the AFRO.

The cost of the Cherry Hill School to the city was $2,034,942.

The new Dargenthaler - Vocational - Technical High school cost over six million; the Kenwood Senior High School cost over three million.

Other schools which were built at costs higher than the Cherry Hill School include Woodbourne Junior High, Sollers Point High, Pimlico Junior High, North Point High, and Stemmers Run Junior High.

So why one asks, was the Cherry Hill School picked out as the one example of extravagance?

Mr. Lehr says it was because the electrical contractor, who did some work at the school, was dissatisfied over action by the Department of Education on a bill he had submitted.

We trust that was the sole motive behind the criticism and none other.

Douglass' home-a disgrace

This last dwelling-place of one of the nation's greatest citizens should be a widely-known national shrine, comparable to the homes of other notable figures in U.S. history.

Instead, it is a mecca for tourists who visit the nation's capital — a "must" on the itinerary of every visiting high school group, a place of historical interest which no foreign visitor would want to miss.

INSTEAD, Frederick Douglass' abode on the Anacostia hilltop is a shameful example of neglect and indifference.

The responsibility, we are sorry to say, seems to rest on the shoulders of a board of trustees composed of members of the National Association of Colored Women, but operating independently of NACW.

Whatever internal bickerings may occupy that board, its primary concern should be the responsibility it owes not only to the race but to the nation in seeing that the Frederick Douglass home is given the place of veneration which it deserves.

Patriotic citizens throughout the country would be glad to join in an effort to memorialize Fred Douglass properly. By the date of his next birthday, on February 14, 1955, the house in Anacostia could be a showplace.

The time has come to rise above petty differences on the part of individuals. Let's give Fred Douglass' memory the kind of tribute it deserves.

NEWS ITEM — Supervisors of Elections certified Harry Cole as Maryland senator-elect from the Fourth District. This week, Bernard Melnicove's friends, not yet conceding defeat, were examining 4th District voters signature cards in the Supervisor or Elections' office.

Juveniles
Dear AFRO:

Many recent headlines in the local papers indicate that there is still a great lack of initiative on the part of Baltimore citizens in doing something about the juvenile delinquency problem.

A most horrible crime was recently committed here. This murder might have been avoided if the city had some sort of delinquency prevention bureau, but to date, no agency of this sort has arisen in Baltimore.

Other headlines in the local papers tell of mobs of juveniles running riot in Philadelphia—what is Baltimore doing to prevent the same thing from occurring here?

The answer — we are doing absolutely nothing to start an all-out war on delinquency, even though we are warned that the juvenile population will be 50 per cent greater by 1960.

The cost of crime and delinquency is $15,000,000 annually now. What will it be in 1960 if we don't start planning and acting now in order to be prepared?

In March of 1953, the Commission on Administrative Organization (Schoeloff Commission) called for local governments to organize and set up delinquency prevention programs throughout the state.

An editorial in a local paper at this time concluded with the statement, "The next step becomes a question of who will come forward and take up the challenge."

On the statewide level, Senator Francis X. Dippel of Baltimore City took on this job during the 1953 and 1954 legislative sessions with his efforts culminating in the creation of a Child Services Bureau in the State Department of Welfare.

Now, a year and a half after his illuminating report was issued, who is going to take up the challenge in Baltimore City?

Mother seeks aid
Dear AFRO:

We have a family of six children ranging in age from one year to 12 years. I'm writing this on Thanksgiving Eve and I am without even a can of cranberry sauce enough to spread on bread for the kids.

Thank God that I'm living to see this Thanksgiving Day.

I'm asking if you will see that I get a basket for Christmas. I read an article in your paper (Nov. 20) stating that Maple-trate Lane is preparing for the Christmas party for the kids at the Royal.

I would love very much if my kids could get tickets to go.

If and when the time should ever come that I find myself picketing for a cause like the Anacostia Neighborhood Improvement Club is fighting for in the eastern district, I hope that I will have as much stamina.

Before a court injunction was slapped on them Wednesday they sailed back and forth in front of a Bond Street grocery store for 21 days.

They don't want liquor sold around their homes and are fighting hard to see that the practice is ended.

Stood and watched them for about an hour the other day and was impressed with their determination.

* * *

WASN'T SURPRISED to discover that some of the parents in the community are not going to cross the picket line. Was surprised though to find that they are sending their children instead.

What can be said about a parent who uses his child as a shield? Heard about such things before. First time I ever witnessed it.

Things are not too neighborly on the upper end of E. Chase St., either. Fellow moved into an all-white neighborhood and has been pestered with eggs and bricks ever since.

As the comedian George Gobel would probably say: now what dirty birds would lay an egg on a working man's front step?

PICKED UP a little book the other day filled with witty sayings. Suddenly decided to drop one off in the final paragraph of this column from time to time. The gem of the week is on chivalry. It's defined as—

Chivalry — the inclination of a man (who thinks he's a knight in shining armor) to defend a woman against every man but himself.

Tidbits

By SHIRLEY KYLE

The case, before Judge Michael J. Manley, of Criminal Court involved Daniel Evans, 31-year-old railroad trackman, who is assailted a Gas and Electric company employee.

The gas company worker, August Kahler, went to Evans home at the 400 block E. Lafayette Ave., to shut off the utility services because Evans had failed to pay his bill.

* * *

AFTER ADMITTING Kahler to the cellar Evans picked a knife on the man, ordered him upstairs, sat him in a chair and took pictures of him.

He then released Kahler who notified the police.

Judge Manley sentenced Evans to two years in the House of Corrections.

In the Jack Benny story, nothing happened because the gas man never returned from the cellar. Seems that the penny-pinching comedian instead of paying his utility bill, was hoarding a polar bear in the cellar.

Jack, like Evans, admitted the employee to the cellar, but in the comic's case, the polar bear did the rest. And Rochester's key line for the rest of the season was, "What happened to the gas man?"

SPEAKING OF Rochester, understand that he was one of the honorary pallbearers at the funeral of Jack Barrymore, noted actor who died recently.

Political sidelite: When Milton Saul, who lost a seat in the House of Delegates for the Fourth District in the Nov. 2 election, filed his letter contesting the election, he thought he would be battling for Emory Cole's place.

News Item: A Laconia, N.H. hunter is boasting that within one week, he collected 600 pounds of meat for his freezer.

On one trip, he shot a 250-pound black female bear. Next time, he got another 250-pounder and then a 200-pound doe.

And if you can't get your meat that way, it is against the law?

A. Well, he didn't show me a warrant, he didn't place me under legal arrest, nor did I consent to the search, so it was illegal.

Q. (The Court) How are the police to enforce the law against carrying concealed weapons unless they search people?

A. Your Honor, I think that's a problem for the Police Department, I don't think they can violate a person's rights just to enforce the law.

Q. (The Court) You ought to, it seems to me, be willing to cooperate with the police.

A. Sir, I am willing to cooperate with the police, but not to the extent they will violate my rights. I also represent the people and I have to see their rights aren't violated too.

Q. (The Court) Don't you think a great many crimes of violence are prevented by searches conducted by the police?

A. Undoubtedly a great many crimes might be prevented, but I also feel that the rights of individuals should not be invaded or intruded on, I mean, for the prevention of crime.

Q. (The Court) When you visit an establishment that has a license from the Liquor Board, you know the licensee may be visited by the police at any time?

A. That's right.

Q. (The Court) And that the police have greater privileges in such establishments than they have in general?

A. I am well aware of that, your Honor, I know they can go through a place and can even conduct a search of persons, but they are not authorized to search individuals.

Q. (The Court) They have a right to make investigations or make searches in a place that dispenses alcoholic beverages, where in a place that has no such license, they would need a warrant, isn't that true?

A. They have a right to search the place, your Honor, but I doubt whether they have a right to search the individuals in the place that are not connected with the running of the establishment.

Q. (The Court) Well, Mr. Allor testified that he came over and asked you whether in your opinion the police had the right to make the search?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. (The Court) And you told him, no.

A. After they started to search, Mr. Allor came over because he knew I was a lawyer and asked me, do they have a right to make this search and I said, no, they do not.

Q. Were you in any way apprehensive of any bodily harm?

A. Yes, I had observed what had taken place prior to the Sergeant reaching me. I had seen what had happened to Mr. Chester and naturally I didn't anticipate any better treatment from the Sergeant, so I was apprehensive of bodily harm.

Q. When the Sergeant approached you, Mr. Mason, what was your conduct, what were you doing?

A. I had just seated at the table, I had Dr. Woodland and Mr. Carter and--his wife, we were all seated at the table and we remained seated during the conversation and the disturbance.

Q. (The Court) then, so long as the police act with reason and are merely trying to prevent law violations, you have a very serious duty--for cooperating with them?

A. I think we should cooperate with the police but with limitations, as I said before.

Q. (The Court Of course, if they use that as an excuse for unnecessary violence, I think you would be perfectly justified in resisting?

A. Yes, sir, I feel I would be justified in resisting.

The late Judge Smith, after hearing this and other testimony relating to the disking incident, filed a memorandum in favor of the policemen. He said:

"The evidence in this case clearly indicates that the police officers who conducted the search believed they were acting within the limits of their authority and in accordance with the instructions of their superior.

"There is absolutely no evidence of oppressive or violent action to justify the award of damages, and the court can see no reason why people should object to cooperating with the police in the prevention of violent crime, even though that requires a resignation of personal dignity.

"Some forbearance is required, and some retreat from an unqualified insistence on one's individual rights and dignity has to occur. . ."

But, listen to the final word on this matter from the Md. Court of Appeals, the decision being written by Chief Judge Frederick Brune:

"When a peace officer goes beyond the scope of the law, he may become liable civilly and is not shielded by the immunity of the law. —Roddy v. Finnegan, 43 Md., 491.

". . . Though the officers under Code (151) Article 2 B, Section 179, had authority to enter the Club Tijuana and conduct a search of the premises without a warrant, this ACT did not authorize, or purport to authorize, police officers to search the patrons found therein.

"There was some suggestion in a colloquy in the lower court (Judge Smith), that there should be some relinquishment of constitutional guarantees and submission to police search in order to aid in such a campaign against major crime as the police were then conducting.

"To deny recovery in a case such as this to one who refuses to waive his right of immunity from unwarranted search, would be to take the first step down the path leading to the destruction of the right . . ."

. . . For these reasons, the judgment below is reversed and the case remanded with directions to enter judgment for the plaintiffs for nominal damages and costs. . ."

This and that of many things. . .

The Mental Hygiene Society of Baltimore is looking for a club or individual who will make the hospital a gift of such a table.

If you're interested and can help, call or write this column or advise the Society's executive director, Miss Elaine Michaelson, 317 E. 25th St., telephone HOpkins 7-5945.

And if you're not able to help get the pool table, here's something else Crownsville needs — bicycles, plenty of them and all sizes — for children as well as adults.

And if the bikes and pool table are too large for you or your group to handle, here is something else:

The Society is attempting this year to see that every patient at Crownsville has an individually wrapped Christmas package containing six to ten separate articles.

Needed to fill these packages—cigarettes, plenty of them — the more cartons the better; tooth-brushes (new), toothpaste (small size), and small size bath or face soap.

AND, if you can not give money or any of the items listed above, there is still something else you can do—help supply Christmas gift wrapping paper and scotch tape.

The Society needs volunteers who will come to the E. 25th St. office and help wrap Christmas gifts.

Come on, if you've some free time and want to help make some sick youngsters happy, here's a job all cut out for you.

Rookie cab driver robbed; helps trap two suspects

A cab driver on the job only two months was forced to joyride around the city on Saturday evening by two men who robbed him of his night's receipts.

But thanks to his quick thinking, the cab driver, Johnnie Jones of the 1300 block W. North Ave., was able to help police capture his two attackers.

In Eastern police station on Tuesday morning, they pleaded guilty to assault and robbery and were held under $2,500 bail by Magistrate Marshall Levin.

They identified themselves as Leo Feroie, 38, a dishwasher of the 400 block E. 31st St., and Clifford W. McKee, 28, laborer, of the 100 block Forrest St. Both men are white. Leo has a scar on the neck, and McKee a tattoo on the right arm.

* * *

MR. JONES, who drives for the Belle Isle Cab Co., reported that the two men hailed him at Baltimore and Poppleton Sts., at 11 p.m. and said they were just in from a ship.

For the next hour, Mr. Jones said he was ordered to take them first to an address on St. Paul St., later to the ore docks on Key Highway, then to the ore docks at Sparrows Point and then to Eastern Ave.

Just off Eastern Ave., one held a knife to his head while they robbed him of the night's receipts of $17 plus his change, and threatened to kill him if he blinked his lights or sought help.

* * *

AT THEIR direction, Jones said, he was driving up Holiday St. when he was halted by traffic. He jumped from the cab and yelled for help.

Officers Francis Banahan and Francis Murphy who answered the call for help accompanied Jones on a tour of the neighborhood and apprehended the two suspect at Gay and Holliday Sts., that same evening. Sgt. Joseph T. Walsh arraigned the accused suspect several hours later.

Mr. Jones told the AFRO, "I was pretty glad to see the officers. I was scared to death. I have heard about cab drivers being robbed, but this was my first experience."

Hospital celebrates 92nd anniversary

BOSTON—More than 350 doctors, hospital officials and guests of the New England Hospital for Women and Children to admit women interns, attended a dinner celebrating the 92nd anniversary of its founding at the Hotel Somerset last week.

Speakers were Dr. John H. Cauley, Boston health commissioner, and Dr. Eliza Mekton, who pointed out that the hospital was the first in the country to have a school of nursing and that the nation's first trained nurse, Linda Richards, was graduated from it in 1873.

It was also noted that the hospital also celebrates this year the 75th anniversary of the graduation of Mary E. Mahoney, the country's first colored trained nurse.

Injunction issued on picket line

Club group was on duty for 21 days

A temporary injunction, restraining the Adjacent Neighborhood Improvement Club from picketing a grocery store in the 1600 block N. Bond St. for 21 days, was issued Wednesday in Circuit Court.

Members of the club were told by Judge Herman Moser, to remove their picket line until the issues are heard to determine whether or not they have a Constitutional right to picket the store.

On behalf of the owner, Sidney Stein, the injunction was filed last week by Bernard S. Meinicove, attorney.

* * *

The Adjacent Neighborhood Club picketed the establishment for 21 days in an effort to convince Mr. Stein that they did not want package goods sold in the neighborhood.

Last July Mr. Stein appeared before the Liquor Board to ask that he be given a Class "B" beer, wine and liquor permit formerly held by Mrs. Lucile W. Clark at 1701 E. Bond St., and also to have his permit restricted to an "A" classification.

THE PETITION filed by Mr. Melnicove specified that the picket line was unlawful and violated Constitutional guarantees of the merchant thereby causing him great losses.

They say they are complying with the wishes of the community as a whole who are against the sales of liquor in the 16-1700 block N. Bond St.

* * *

They claimed Mr. Stein has disregarded the community's request although other grocerymen in the area have complied with their demand.

All others have been cooperative and have withdrawn their requests for a liquor permit when neighbors protested, the club officers said.

* * *

Through his attorney, Mr. Stein contends that as a result of the picket line, his loss in grocery sales has been heavy.

Within the immediate neighborhood there are two churches, a school, and according to property owners, "enough taverns to take care of two communities."

Members of the club group say they are not protesting the court's decision, but are only exercising their right to inform the community of the owners' attitude.

Many are of the opinion that if Mr. Stein would get rid of his liquor permit he could operate his store in peace.

The community group is being represented by Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitchell and W. A. C. Hughes, attorneys.

* * *

PRECEEDING the temporary injunction, five persons in the area were asked by the AFRO to express their views:

All were asked what their objections were and what they would like the owner to do. They stated the following:

Mrs. William Jones, 1845 N. Bond St.,—"I have one child and if liquor is allowed to be sold in this community who knows what they will have on him.

"For the children's sake if nothing else, I would like for him (Mr. Stein) to stop selling altogether."

Mrs. Inez Mack of the 1700 block N. Bond St., was of the opinion that the liquor has to go there. Whenever our people move into a good neighborhood someone has to come in and mess it up."

I just don't think it should be there. If he's allowed to go out of business completely it would be alright with me," Mrs. Mack is the mother of three children.

When asked if he was against the sales of liquor near his home and why, Raymond Venson of the 1700 block Bond St., declared: "Oh, my, you know I'm against it.

"I've seen people go in there to get their whiskey and beer and come right out here on the sidewalk and drink and leave the bottles.

"I am the father of 10 children," Mr. Venson said, "and if they are allowed to grow up under these circumstances, there's no telling what will happen.

"The best thing for him to do is turn in his license. I'm not against his grocery store, it's just that liquor. It's something I just don't want around my home and children."

Westleyer Simmons of the 1600 block E. Lafayette St., stated that he was against the store because "I want to do all I can to keep our people out of the slums and that's what this neighborhood will be if bums and drunkards are allowed to move in.

"There are too many taverns and package goods stores around here already and we don't want anymore."

Thomas Curley of the 1700 block N. Bond St., said: "I'm against it because it will cause our property to go down in value. I also have my family to think of."

Pig roast upset by pig squeals

Five men who hoped for a pig roast instead of a turkey dinner, were tricked by the squeals of their intended meal Wednesday night.

And since a park policeman understood pig latin, the men were fined $10 each Thursday morning in Northwestern Police Court by Magistrate E. Everett Lane.

The five men were seized in Leakin Park around 9:30 p.m. Wednesay night when Officer Henry Hoffman of the Park Police, cruising in a patrol car, heard a pig squeal.

* * *

Ralph W. Street, 500 block Hoffman St.

Edward Mason, 500 block Johannsen St.

Herbert Moore, 100 block Pennsylvania Ave.

Charles E. Phillips, no home listed.

Cornell S. Owens, 1100 block Down St.

* * *

POLICE said the men admitted they planned to stage a barbecue with the pig which allegedly lived in Anne Arundel County by Phillips.

The squeal the officer heard erupted when the pig was slugged over the head with a hand axe.

Police said in addition to the axe they found one man with a hammer and another with a butcher knife.

The fines the five men drew were for disorderly conduct.

The pig was later returned to the Anne Arundel county farm from which it originally disappeared, none the worse for wear, charged from the hospital.

Man surrenders in courtroom

Was sought in assault case

The afternoon session at Northwestern police court started off as usual on Monday, but then up jumped a man from his seat in a very agitated mood.

"May I see you judge?" he asked Magistrate E. Everett Lane.

The magistrate told his questioner that he would have to wait until the police cases had been heard and the man sat down. Five minutes later he was back with the same question and received the same answer.

* * *

THREE MINUTES passed and he was back again and this time Magistrate Lane gave him the floor.

"I'm wanted," he said.

"For what?" asked the magistrate, "murder?"

"Could be," he answered.

"Who is it?"

"My wife."

"Knife or gun," asked Magistrate Lane.

"Knife," the man said.

Turning to Sgt. Dominie Roach, the court clerk, Magistrate Lane said, "He's your man."

SURE ENOUGH, Sergeant Roach checked and learned that the man, Raymond J. Johnson, 29, of the 1200 block N. Gilmor St., was wanted in connection with the stabbing of his wife, Mrs. Eva Johnson, 24, a few hours earlier.

Mrs. Johnson was stabbed in the back with a butcher knife. She was taken to Provident Hospital by a friend with the ten-inch knife still in her back. The knife was removed and Mrs. Johnson was admitted to the hospital in a "fair" condition.

The husband has been charged with assault and will receive a hearing when the wife is disappeared, none the worse for wear, charged from the hospital.

She wants to be alone and judge backs her plea

"I want to be alone."

The words came from Miss Arlena Drummond of the 700 block George St., on Tuesday in Northwestern police court, as she told Magistrate E. Everett Lane of her trouble with Rossie Bagby of the 1800 block Moreland Ave.

The trouble with Mr. Bagby, said Miss Drummond, is that "he doesn't know how to behave," as typified by his behavior on Sunday afternoon, when she charged he hit her in the face and destroyed a cocktail table at her home.

* * *

MISS DRUMMOND said she had been "friends" with Bagby but that the romance had cooled down on her part and she had told him "we are not friends anymore."

But, said Miss Drummond, Bagby refused to take this as the final word, and the Sunday episode was the outgrowth of his disapproval of the break. She asked Magistrate Lane to order Bagby to stay away from her home, and uttered the remark: "I want to be alone."

Bagby, however, testified that he had paid several of Miss Drummond's bills and that he visited her home at her request.

Magistrate Lane settled the problem by suspending a 3-day jail sentence for Bagby and warning him to stay away from Miss Drummond.
