"What's all this talk about the AFRO and a Healthy Baby Contest?"
(Subject is 7-month-old Devearh M. Maddox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Maddox, 408 N. Wolfe St.

—Baby contest

be entered.

SINCE THE Baltimore AFRO-AMERICAN announced this contest proud parents have been rushing in their entries. Nearly 200 have been received. Entries should be mailed to P.O. Box 911, Baltimore, Md.

A panel of prominent, local physicians and civic workers have agreed to serve as judges for the healthiest babies.

They include Dr. H. Maceo Williams, director of the Druid Health Center; Dr. George P. Brown, pediatrician; Mrs. Virlan Alleyne, civic and social worker; Mrs. Edna Redmond, director of the Interdenominational Ministers' Nursery School, and J. Nelson Fortune, advertising manager of the Baltimore AFRO-AMERICAN.

These judges will choose the top six winners on November 30 at a rousing public affair to be held at the Metropolitan Methodist Church, Carrollton Ave. and Lanvale St.

SIMILAR contests to the one being carried out in the Baltimore area are being conducted by the Carnation Milk Co. in 40 other cities throughout the country.

Each contest is local and the AFRO and the Carnation Milk Co. are confident of the benefits that will come from such a project in Baltimore. We expect to establish this contest as a regular annual affair.

It's simple to enter your baby in this contest. The official form is reproduced in the Carnation advertisement which appears elsewhere in this paper. It may be used by entrants in submitting baby's snapshot.

But Mom, Pop: you better hurry and get that snapshot and entry in. Only eleven more days before Nov. 17, the deadline for entries.

$180,000 wall down at plant

Refinery's partition installed during war

A partition to separate white and colored women in the big American Sugar company refinery women's dressing room here, was removed last week after years of union pressure.

Workers had dubbed the partition the "$180,000 wall," — the amount estimated American Sugar saved each year by paying 10 cents an hour less in segregated Baltimore than in its non-segregated Philadelphia plant less than 100 miles away.

The wall in the dressing room was installed during World War II, when the company first hired colored women.

Pressure from Local 392, United Packinghouse Workers of America, CIO, brought removal of the barrier.

BASING their grievance on a contract clause that "neither the company nor the union will discriminate against any employee," the union had gained elimination of racial segregation in the main cafeteria a year ago; but demands that the dressing room be integrated were blocked by company insistence on following the "pattern" in communities where its plants were located.

With the Baltimore "pattern" altered by enforcement of the Supreme Court school segregation decision, unionists stepped-up their demand for a single dressing room. The company finally gave in.

Commenting on the union victory, Mrs. Ruth Shields, Local 392 grievance chairman, said:

"Jim crow walls and low pay go hand in hand. Get rid of the first and you'll get rid of the second."
