through an honor guard of the Pershing Rifle Co. of Morgan's ROTC unit into Dr. Jenkins' home where the Liberian president held a brief press conference.

The first question asked Mr. Tubman was whether or not he knew what kind of arrangements had been made for his proposed trip to the state of Georgia as a guest of Gov. Talmadge.

"I have no idea of the arrangements," answered Mr. Tubman. The frowns of members of his entourage discouraged any further questioning along this line.

(Editor's Note: When Mr. Tubman arrived in the United States in New York he was questioned on his trip to Georgia. At that time he said he did not know where he would stay during his trip there but stated, "I am responding to the governor of Georgia's invitation to visit."

Mr. Tubman's mother was a native of Atlanta, Ga.

— o — o — o —

DURING HIS press conference, Mr. Tubman was also asked where or not his country had any integration problem.

"I would say those problems are about to be solved," was his reply.

The inference was that the various tribes in Liberia which have in the past been at odds are now meeting on common grounds. Mr. Tubman is known as the only president of the African country who has visited each tribe there personally.

— o — o — o —

AT THE formal exercises in Hurt Gymnasium where the degree of Doctor of Law was conferred upon him, Mr. Tubman was greeted by an enthusiastic ovation by over 1,500 persons.

It was there he made his only formal speech of the day.

"This shrunken world in which we live in this Atomic Age, is too small for any nation or people to dwell in isolation," said Mr. Tubman.

"No nation, no matter how great, powerful and productive, can boast of absolute independence and self-sufficiency.

"Similarly," he continued, "no small nation should be misled into believing that its natural resources or geographical situations are in themselves sufficient to guarantee perpetual existence should it stand alone or aloof."

— o — o — o —

THE HONORARY degree was bestowed on the short, stocky African executive by Dr. Jenkins. Liberia's ambassador to the United States, Clarence L. Simpson, looked on proudly.

Others seated on the platform at the ceremonies were Dr. Murphy, Dean George Grant of Morgan College, and Wilmot A. David, counsel of the Liberian Embassy in Washington.

Among those who spoke at the convocation ceremonies were George H. Dunn, president of the Morgan College Student Council and Dr. Murphy.

"Liberia is a symbol of things to come, a country to lead Africa to the point where it is the land of tomorrow?" said Mr. Outen.

— o — o — o —

DR. MURPHY emphasized the fact that at the moment the honor was being conferred on Mr. Tubman, there was a ship docking in Baltimore's harbor loaded with ore from the Bomi Hills in Liberia.

"Bomi Hills are 45 miles from Monrovia, the capital city of Liberia," said Dr. Murphy.

"There on top of the ground, Liberians will be mining iron for the next 10 years without having to dig below the surface."

— o — o — o —

SCHEDULED TO appear at the convocation ceremonies were both Governor Theodore McKeldin and Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro.

President Jenkins read a telegram of welcome from the Governor explaining that he is busy campaigning for re-election.

He told President Tubman, "I don't know how hot your elections are over there, but they're pretty hot here."

Mayor D'Alesandro attended the dinner meeting and presented a key to the city to Mr. Tubman.

— o — o — o —

FOLLOWING THE ceremonies in Hurt Gymnasium, President Tubman was escorted to Tubman House on the campus—a girl's dormitory, where he enjoyed a cooling drink.

Earlier he had admitted kinship to the woman for whom the building was named.

Leaving Tubman House, the official party was escorted to Truth Hall where the president stood in a receiving line for an hour meeting distinguished citizens of Maryland.

Although during this time he appeared to be tiring, Mr. Tubman stood up under the grueling occasion.

On the receiving line with him were Dr. Jenkins, Dr. Murphy, John F. Simmons, chief of protocol, U.S. State Department; Brig. Gen. Robert Brewer of Liberia; Ambassador Simpson and Brig. Gen. William L. Fagg, U.S. Air Force. President Eisenhower's wife was not present.

When the line, which was topped by City Council President Arthur D. Price, broke up, representatives of various schools in Maryland, both white and colored, Mr. Tubman's family, and David Thomas, cultural attache, Liberian Embassy, Jenkins, Adviser Charles Dunbar Sherman, Also Brig. General Robert A. Brewer, Aide de Camp, Under Secretary of Public Work and Utilities, Thomas F. Buchanan, E. Reginald Townsend, press secretary to the President Philip Sandiford, secretary to the President; Dr. Arthur Schnitzer, personal physician; Wilmot David, counselor, Liberian Embassy.

Rudolph Grimes, counselor, Liberian State Department; Kedrick Brown, financial attache, Liberian Embassy; Joseph Coleman, first secretary, Liberian Embassy; Reid Wise, second secretary, Liberian Embassy; David Thomas, cultural attache, Liberian Embassy; Jenkins Cooper, third secretary, Liberian Embassy.

President and Mrs. Eisenhower fete President Tubman at dinner

WASHINGTON

President and Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower opened the social season in Washington, Monday night, with a state dinner honoring the head of the Liberian republic during his four-day visit to D.C.

He was an overnight guest at the White House Monday night and for the remainder of his visit resided at Blair House.

— o — o — o —

THE TWO PRESIDENTS toasted each other at the dinner with expressions of gratification at the friendship which has traditionally existed between the U.S. and Liberia.

Yellow roses and yellow snapdragons adorned the E-shaped candlelit table in the state dining-room at the White House where the dinner took place.

In addition to President Tubman and members of his party, included:

Liberian Ambassador and Mrs. Clarence Simpson, Chief Justice and Mrs. Earl Warren, Secretary of State and Mrs. John Foster Dulles, other cabinet members and their wives, and other top government dignitaries;

Also Dr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Bunche, President Mordecai Johnson of Howard University and Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Carmen C. Marr of the U.S. mission to the UN, President Frederick D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute and Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Jessie Vann and others.

Tubman invites U.S. capital to Liberia

A tempting picture of sympathetic and tax-free investment opportunities for American capital and industry was presented Wednesday afternoon by President William V. S. Tubman of Liberia.

Mr. Tubman spoke as guest of honor at a luncheon staged at the Federal Room of the Hotel Statler by the International Bank of Washington, the International Trust Co. of Liberia, and Liberian Services, Incorporated.

— o — o — o —

THE THREE HOST institutions are credited with responsibility for a great part of the financial, industrial and economic progress made by the African republic within the past few years.

The International Trust Co., a quasi-governmental agency established in 1948, represents, according to President Tubman, "an enlightened experiment in cooperation between government and private capital."

The luncheon was attended by approximately 100 representatives of American shipping, transportation, industrial and financial interests.

— o — o — o —

WITH THE EXCEPTION of newsmen and members of the official party, only two other persons addressed them. They were Dr. W. Stuart Nelson, dean of the School of Religion at Howard University and Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the Methodist District of Washington, who pronounced the blessing.

In introducing President Tubman, George Schaefer, president of the International Trust Co., described him as a man with great power, which he exercises for the good of his country.

"Upon the inscription of the early struggles of the founders of Liberia, Mr. Schaeffer said:

"... THIS COUNTRY, which started from scratch, has never had a foreign war, nor a revolution, nor a coup d'etat. They have paid their debts; they have engaged in that popular national sport of today of juggling their currency.

"In fact, they don't print their own money, but today are using successfully the best currency in the world, the American dollar."

The luncheon guests were also treated to the rare spectacle of a financier praising a government's tax program.

— o — o — o —

STILL SPEAKING of President Tubman, Mr. Schaeffer said: "He is a patriotic Liberian who will have no exploitation of his country by foreigners."

Adding that neither was he obsessed by hatred of foreigners, Mr. Schaeffer continued: "He knows that his country needs foreign capital and foreign abilities and experience. He welcomes them and sees that they are fairly treated."

— o — o — o —

STATING THE official Liberian attitude toward foreign capital, President Tubman said:

"We believe in the Open Door policy. Consequently, I think that the ultimate economic development of our government and country should depend largely upon the extent to which we, after establishing basic roads and other utilities, can continue, in the future, to work more effectively with private investment capital to the broadest possible extent."

— o — o — o —

THE LIBERIAN Chief Executive cited his country's current policy of allowing an initial period of exemption from certain types of taxes for limited periods in order that a part of initial investment might be recovered.

"We have also sought," he said, "to maintain freedom of capital; there are no restrictions on the transfer or withdrawal of dividends and profits; neither do we believe in confiscatory taxation, constricting restrictions, expropriation or expropriation of foreign capital investments."

Mr. Tubman concluded with the hope that foreign capital would exercise "appropriate business statesmanship," insuring a return at a fair share of the fruits of investment in better health facilities, education and welfare where the investments are made.

Liberia's ability to maintain a balanced budget for the past 10 years was cited by T. Reed Vreeland, president of the International Bank of Washington, who served as toastmaster.

Members of the official Liberian party included: Brig. Gen. Robert A. Brewer, aide de camp to the President; Thomas W. Buchanan, undersecretary of public works; Christian Abayomi Cassell, attorney general.

Nathaniel Massaquoi, assistant secretary of public instruction; Charles Dunbar Sherman, economic advisor to the President; and Dr. Joseph Nagbe Togba, director general, National Public Health Service.

OTHER LIBERIAN dignitaries present were: Reid Wiles, second secretary, Liberian Embassy; David M. Thomas, cultural attache; Clarence L. Simpson, Liberian Ambassador to the United States; Dr. F. A. Price, Liberian consul general, N.Y.

George McShane, deputy commissioner for maritime affairs; Wilmot A. David, counselor, Liberian Embassy; William A. B. Iliff, counselor, Department of State; Joseph S. Oliver Coleman, first secretary, Liberian Embassy, and J. Jenkins Cooper, third secretary.

Tubman reception draws 1,056 capital guests

By AL SWEENEY

WASHINGTON

In a setting that resembled a Cecil B. DeMille Hollywood masterpiece, 1,056 guests attended a reception in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday evening, given by Liberian Ambassador and Mrs. Clarence Simpson.

The reception was in honor of President William V. S. Tubman, Liberian president, whose four-day visit to the capital ended Thursday.

The reception, according to socialites who make a practice of evaluating such affairs, ranked with more lavish parties of the town that is noted for social gatherings.

A 55-foot buffet table, with 53 attendants serving a variety of food that proved satisfying to the most exacting epicure, was the center of attraction.

— o O MO —

RED ROSES, white chrysanthemums and blue delphinium, symbolic of the colors in Laberia's flag leot decor to the table.

First to greet the guests along the reception line was John F. Simmons, chief of protocol, State Department, who introduced the guests to Ambassador Simpson, then President Tubman, then Mrs. Simpson and the other members of the president's party.

Shaking hands with President Tubman were most of the top figures in Washington's society.

— o — o — o —

THEY INCLUDED:

Judges and Mrs. Andrew A. Howard and Armond Scott, municipal court bench; Mr. and Mrs. Scovell Richardson, chairman of the Federal Parole Board; Brig Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., Col. Campbell C. Johnson;

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Pair, Dr. and Mrs. Carl Murphy, George E. C. Hayes, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Cornelly, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Burbridge;

Perry Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Val Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gorvin, Mr and Mrs. George Fleming, the Rev. and Mrs. Smallwood E. Williams;

Miss Roberta Church, Louis B. Toomer, Rep. and Mrs. Adam C. Powell Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Rayford Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Jenkins;

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, Mrs Robert L. Vann, Mr. and Mrs. Hobson R. Reynolds, Dr. Horace Mann Bond, Dr. R. O'Hara Lanier.

— o — o — o —

IN ADDITION to the ambassadors from Ethiopia, Haiti, Chile, Norway, New Zeland, Germany, many city officials including Samuel Spencer, Renah Camalier, and Brig. Gen. Louis Prentiss were there.

Champagne flowed from a fountain, and there was a table with shrimp, rolls, oysters, olives, celery to go with cocktail. There were four bars.

From the buffet table guests had an opportunity to fill their plates from an assortment of Galantine of capon, chicken farcical, cold pheasant in plummage, sliced longue, corned beef, salmon, lobster;

— o — o — o —

ALSO ROAST prime ribs of beef, roast turkey, cold Dominion ham in jelly, wild rice, potatoes rissoles, seafood Newsburg rissoles, seafood Newsburg with rice, green peas, Maryland biscuits, and hot buttered rolls.

For dessert, ice cream, fruit tarts and pastry was provided.

Add the soft music as played by a string ensemble on the balcony, and you get the $35,000 social triumph scored by the Liberian ambassador.

Crownsville's tag campaign now on

The state-wide sale of tags to raise money for the Crownsville State Hospital canteen began this week.

The tags, which sell for 5 cents are being handled by members of the Women's Auxiliary of the hospital. Mrs. Vashti Murphy, chairman of the auxiliary said workers hope to make a full report on Nov 21, which has been designated as Tag Day.

Crownsville's canteen opened two months ago. The funds will be used to purchase needed facilities.

are raising infants on a Carnation Farm of its operations.

Near Seattle, Wash., are the famous Carnation Farms which were established many years ago for experimenting on various breeds of cattle, Carnation also maintains a dairy research laboratory second to none in the world.

IN ADDITION to this research is an extensive program of service conducted by consumer consultants in many large cities.

This is done to acquaint the people in these communities with the benefits of Carnation Evaporated Milk and particularly for one of its major uses, the formula feeding of infants.

A typical consumer consultant, such as Mrs. Madelina Pullen in the Baltimore area, has a broad schedule of duties which include regular household calls, serving as a hostess at various religious, civic and social affairs.

Her message is primarily to explain the benefits of evaporated milk over other forms of milk, and particularly to point out the additional benefits of her product, Carnation Milk.

Her reports to headquarters in Los Angeles, together with those made by other consumer consultants around the country indicate ever-growing use of Carnation Evaporated Milk in helping to build strong and healthier Americans.

— o — o —

FOR THE proud parents who join formula, this contest offers a wonderful opportunity to win as much as $300 simply by entering a snapshot of the child, together with the official entry blank.

Each contest is local and is one of more than 40 being conducted simultaneously throughout the country.

The Carnation Company is confident of the benefits that will come from such a project and is expected to establish this contest as a regular annual affair in each of these communities.

Announcement of winners in the Baltimore area will be made in this newspaper shortly after the close of the contest on November 17.

For further information and entry blanks, readers are advised to contact the editorial offices of the Baltimore AFRO-AMERICAN at 628 N. Eutaw St.

Canning gives jobs to thousands
Canning is an agricultural industry that provides thousands of farmers with an indispensable market for an appreciable part of their production of perishable fruits and vegetables.
Mr. D. L. Anderson, buyer of the American Stores Company, Philadelphia, Pa., has pointed out that the vegetables bought and processed by canners amount to more than half of the total tonnage of all vegetables grown in the United States.
For example, in the period 1949-53, the canning industry bought and packed the production from an average annual 1,760,000 acres of the 11 vegetables for which U. S. Department of Agriculture acreage figures are available.
On Mrs. Acres average, about four-fifths of all tomatoes harvested are canned, about three-fourths of the beets, two-thirds of the sweet corn and peas, and about one-half of the asparagus.
Mr. Anderson asserts that the canning industry also provides a valuable market for perishable fruits. On an average, almost 60 percent of sour cherries are canned, and almost half the peaches, pears and apricots.
In Florida, where the great bulk of U. S. canned citrus originates, 25 percent of the total production of oranges and over 30 percent of the grapefruit go into cans, in the form of heat-sterilized juices and sections.
Together with its allied industries —the manufacturers of canning machinery containers, labels and cartons, and the distributive trades, the canning industry provides employment for hundreds thousands of people.

Marines on hand for Tubman arrival

Two tan marines were among the complement which lined both sides of Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House last Monday as President W. V. S. Tubman of Liberia arrived to visit President Eisenhower.

An Army band played music as spectators waited for a glimpse of the distinguished Liberian visitor.

The tan marines were Pvt. Dudley Patrick of Columbus, Ohio, and Pfc. Frank A. Mack from Berkley W. Va. Both are stationed at Fort Meyer.
