GILBERT CUMMINGS — Flowers his business for half century

Cummings' flowers in every-day reach

If you love flowers, and who doesn't, you can pamper your penchant and still not go broke!

That is what I learned at the J. J. Cummings and Sons Co., 1123-1125 W. Baltimore St. this week.

For instance you may have a beautiful arrangement for a room for $3. You may wear a corsage of gardenias for $2.50; orchids, if you please, for $5.50.

You may send an arrangement to a friend in a hospital for $3. including the container.

— o O o —

YOU CAN HAVE a handsome wedding, with flowers for two bridesmaids, buttonaires for the gentlemen, corsages for the mothers, arrangement for the wedding table, and the bride's bouquet for a modest $35.

This, mind you, in all seasons of the year. The Cummings' prices do not fluctuate with the weather or the holidays. One price the year round, is the custom, I was told.

The Company is a specialist in funeral arrangements, also, with prices beginning at $5 for a simple arrangement and at $25 for the ornate blankets.

Moreover, the Cummings flowers are beautifully fresh, their shipments coming in each day. They gather flowers from all over the country. In winter, gladiolas may come from as far away as Florida, and camelias, from California. Surprisingly enough, Maryland and New Jersey excel in growing orchids.

— o O o —

THE J. J. CUMMINGS AND SONS CO. is headed by Gilbert G. Cummings, who has been associated with the 62-year-old firm, founded by his father, for 50 years.

The plant has refrigeration room in the basement of the W. Baltimore St. site, and a second refrigeration room is now under construction.

Mr. Cummings employs nine persons, four of them colored. The latter include Mrs. Murie West, a part time clerk in the office.

Protect baby against ills

To help your baby have good health and make a good start for a happy, useful life, you will want to do many things for him.

Some of these things are:

See that he has a complete physical check-up at the time of birth and again when he is about a month old.

Take him to a doctor at set times for check-ups and advice.

Start protection against diphtheria when your baby is six to nine months old. Most doctors do this with three shots of toxoid, two or three months apart.

If your baby has not been vaccinated against smallpox; have your doctor vaccinate him. If he has not been vaccinated against whooping cough, ask your doctor about this, too; also diphtheria and tetanus.

— o O o —

MAKE HIS HOME as healthful as you can.

Get him comfortable clothes that will let him be free to grow and to use his powers as they develop.

— o O o —

Praise him when he does new things. But never try to force him ahead faster than he wants to go.

Help him learn to like the food he needs, give him a chance to get plenty of sleep. Play with him. See that he gets sunshine and fresh air as much as you can. Keep him away from all sick people.

Ten tips on how to buy diamonds

It's wonderful to be sentimental—and what girl isn't? But it's still more wonderful to mix sense with the sentiment.

Your engagement ring—or any diamond for that matter—is a lifetime purchase and may go ringing down your family for generations. So learn all details about the diamond you buy.

Granted that your fiance comes first, the jeweler you choose is a close second in importance. The best store in town is not always the most expensive; often it gives you the best value for your money.

If you are a newcomer in town and don't know the jewelers, you can buy a ring of one of the trade - marked brands that are regularly advertised nationally. A well-advertised name gives you pretty good assurance of the quality of the diamond.

— o O o —

HOW MUCH should a diamond cost? Why is a big, clear ring sometimes cheaper than a modest-looking little stone in a simple setting? The answer is in the diamonds themselves. So look for these things:

CARAT. This is the unit of weight used for diamonds. In early times, the seeds of the carob tree were used to balance the gem scales; "carat" comes from the Greek word for these seeds.

Today a carat is 200 milligrams the world over. A carat is divided into 100 points like the cents in a dollar. If your jeweler says that a diamond is "a 25-point stone," that means that it weighs a quarter of a carat. (Do not confuse with "karat,"—the term used to measure the purity of gold).

— o O o —

CUT. This refers to the shape of the stone and the arrangement of facets—those little planes that catch the light and make the diamond sparkle. The most popular cut is round, called the brilliant. The marquise is a boat shape with faceting similar to that on the brilliant.

The emerald cut is oblong or square with facets polished straight along the sides and diagonally across the corners. No one cut is more expensive than another, but the equality of the workmanship affects brilliance and price.

COLOR. The traditional bridal diamond is clear and colorless, like a drop of pure water from a sparkling waterfall. But while colorless in itself, it picks up and reflects every color within its range. Look at your diamond away from the counter in a north light on a clear day against a white paper or cloth, and you'll see its true color.

Over two hundred shades of white have been identified in diamonds. Because the "whiter" whites are more rare, they command a higher price, but there is brilliant beauty in all of them. For the money you have to spend, you may prefer a larger diamond of less costly color.

CLARITY. This means absence of carbon spots, fissures or other noticeable flaws. Diamonds that show no flaws to an experienced eye under a glass that magnifies ten times are rated perfect and are priced accordingly.

But if your own disposition has its little flaws, don't be too critical of your diamond. Both are products of Nature! A tiny inclusion that can't be seen with the naked eye will have little or no effect on the beauty of your diamond. But will affect the price.

— o O o —

THE SOLITAIRE, or single-stone ring, is the best buy for a given sum. Naturally, you can get a somewhat larger diamond if you buy a single stone rather than one set on each side with small decorative stones. However, the no-called side stones make a more elaborate ring, and maybe that's your style!

The metal is a matter to consider. A diamond looks whiter in a white metal such as platinum or palladium. However, yellow gold is "sweet and sentimental" and matches the traditional plain gold wedding band.

Finally, how does the ring look on your hand? A small stone in a simple setting is pretty for a small, dainty girl. But when the hand is larger, you may want a more elaborate mounting for the diamond.

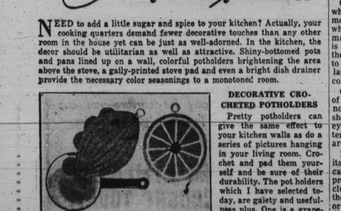
NEED to add a little sugar and spice to your kitchen? Actually, your cooking quarters demand fewer decorative touches than any other room in the house yet can be just as well-adorned. In the kitchen, the decor should be utilitarian as well as attractive. Shiny-bottomed pots and pans lined up on a wall, colorful potholders brightening the area above the stove, a gally-printed stove pad and even a bright dish drainer provide the necessary color seasonings to a monotonoc room.



DECORATIVE CROCHETED POTHOLDERS

Pretty potholders can give the same effect to your kitchen walls as do a series of pictures hanging in your living room. Crochet and pad them yourself and be sure of their durability. The pot holders which I have selected today, are gaiety and usefulness plus. One is a grapefruit which looks almost real with the detail of white membranes crocheted between the yellow sections. You would think it was ready for serving with the vivid red crocheted cherry in the center. The handy potholder is a cheerful striped base—Look at him smile! He's crocheted in two shades of blue to simulate the colors of the scales of real fish.

PAD THEM WELL

When you make your potholders, be sure they are constructed to hold the hottest of pots and pans. So many of the potholders in kitchens today are ill-padded, and a hot, hot pan straight from the oven is felt right through the so-called insulation. For practical paddings, use scraps of wool blanket or several thicknesses of wool fabric. Felt is especially good because of its close weave. The rings you attach to the potholders for easy hanging should be made of bone or metal; plastic rings are apt to burn or melt when in close contact with the flame or heat of the stove.

POTHOLDER CROCHETING DIRECTIONS

I would like to send you the simple directions for crocheting the two potholders pictured above. You will enjoy making them in your spare moments; you'll love using them in your kitchen. Just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Needlework Department of this paper and request Leaflet No. S-359, POTHOLDER CHARM.

Have you ever served egg salad hot, or at least warm? It's a treat treat on toast or toasted English muffins.

Use chopped hard-cooked eggs, a bit of onion juice, snipped parsley, chili sauce, mustard, mayonnaise and seasoning to taste for the salad.

MASHED POTATOES will stay hot more easily if you heat the milk which is added to the potatoes after mashing. It's always easier to beat the mixture to fluffiness when everything's hot.

TO HOLD CONCERT

WILMINGTON, N. C. — Mrs. Eugene Whitley, a worker at St. Luke AMEZ Church, will present her annual variety concert hour Oct. 31, at 4:30 p.m., at the church.

MRS. ROY JONES

Folks travel 50 miles to sample her chicken

BALTIMORE — Folks from as far as 50 miles away think nothing of driving that distance for a song little East Baltimore club, The Hideaway, when they have a ken for fried chicken.

And the "chef" who has made this spot-famous is the proprietor's wife and partner, Mrs. Roy Jones, of 1604 E. Biddle St.

— o O o —

THE HIDEAWAY is located at 1701 Ellsworth St., where for 15 years, Mrs. Jones has been making a specialty of "chicken in the rough." And to insure the quality and fame of their product, she only personally shops for the fowl, but personally cooks every piece served.

Usually connoisseurs are as jealous of their recipes as can be. But Mrs. Jones was generous enough, Maryland and New Jersey excel in growing orchids.

You can fix it

The easiest and quickest way to deal with a hole in your plaster wall, caused by the pulling out of a nail on which picture has hung, is to fill it with Plastic Wood. This will give your nail, when you drive it in again, a stronger hold than it could have in plaster.

If the diameter of the hole is not greater than that of a pencil, all you need do is press the Plastic Wood firmly into it.

— o O o —

IF THE HOLE is larger, it is a good idea to build in from the sides with several layers of the Plastic Wood, allowing each to dry before the next is applied.

In either event, let the Plastic Wood harden overnight. Then drive in your nail, re-hang your picture, and the job is done.

Plastic Wood will also give a firm hold to screws that won't stay tight because the screw holes become too large.

Fill the holes as already described, and again let harden overnight. By then the filler will have turned into hard, durable wood into which the screws can bite.

Here' how to fight a fire

COLLEGE PARK, Md. —Fire fighting is usually considered a man's job. But when fire breaks out in the home, it's likely to be the housewife who needs to know what to do in a hurry.

It's most important to know that different types of fires need different treatments. For example, water will put our ordinary wood, paper or rubbish fires but may be hazardous in other fires. Water can spread and scatter burning grease or gasoline, and it can cause shock if applied to burning electric equipment.

Check with your local fire department for advice on selecting fire extinguishers for your home. Points about their use are:

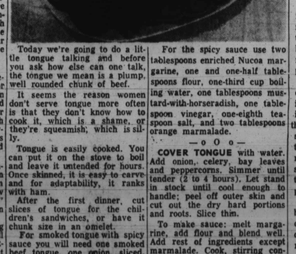
For class A fires — that is, burning paper, cloth, wood or household rubbish. Wet down to remove heat. A five gallon pump tank kept filled with water and in a convenient place is good for quenching such fires. Also recommended is a soda acid extinguisher.

For class B fires — burning oil, grease, paint or gasoline. Foam extinguishers are excellent for this type of fire. If grease gets on fire during cooking, it may be smothered by putting a tight lid on the pan or by scattering or baking soda. Baking soda absorbs grease and gives off carbon dioxide to suffocate the fire. As a safety precaution, keep a package by the kitchen range.

For class C fires — electrical equipment. These call for smothering with some substance that does not conduct electricity. Carbon dioxide extinguishers and dry chemical extinguishers are both excellent for this type of fire.

With winter just ahead, it is well to remember that soda acid and foam extinguishers must be kept where the content will not freeze.

Recipe Of The Week



Today we're going to do a little tongue talking and before you ask how else can one talk the tongue we mean is a plump, well rounded chunk of beef.

It seems the reason women don't serve tongue more often is that they don't know how to cook it, which is a shame, or they're squeamish; which is silly.

Tongue is easily cooked. You can put it on the stove to boil and leave it untended for hours. Once skinned, it is easy to carve and for adaptability, it ranks with ham.

After the first dinner, cut slices of tongue for the children's sandwiches, or have it chunk size in an omelet.

For smoked tongue with spicy sauce you will need one smoked beef tongue, one onion, sliced, one-half cup chopped celery with leaves, three bay leaves, and one teaspoon peppercorns;

For the spicy sauce use two tablespoons enriched Nucoa margarine, one and one-half tablespoons flour, one-third cup boiling water, one tablespoons mustard-with-horseradish, one tablespoon vinegar, one-eighth teaspoon salt, and two tablespoons orange marmalade.

— o O o —

COVER TONGUE with water. Add onion, celery, bay leaves and peppercorns. Simmer until tender (1 to 4 hours). Let stand in stock until cool enough to handle; peel off outer skin and cut out the dry hard portions and roots. Slice thin.

To make sauce: melt margarine, add flour and blend well. Add rest of ingredients except marmalade. Cook, stirring constantly until sauce thickens.

Just before serving, add marmalade. Serve hot. Serves 6.

Residents warned to check furnaces

Now that the heating season is near, the Health Department reminds all residents to check their furnaces and other home-heating units for proper operation and possible leaks of poisonous gas.

Defective furnaces can produce the deadly carbon monoxide which gives no warning of its presence. There is also the the danger of fire or explosion. To prevent accidents of this nature the Health Department advises that all heating systems, coal, oil or gas be thoroughly checked by a competent furnace service man.

Stove pipes and flues should be examined for holes a n d cracks. Soot and ashes which clog outgoing gases should be removed. As a further precaution, those using coal should remember to put the hot ashes in metal containers.
