Milford school board resigns

Says state dodging integration issue

DOVER, Del.—The Delaware State Board of Education Thursday night ordered the Milford High School to reopen next Monday with colored pupils in its classes pending a ruling from the state attorney general.

The entire Milford Board of Education, however, resigned en mass as soon as the state board announced its ruling.

The Milford board, which had asked the state board to approve the admission of the colored pupils to Milford High without reservations, resigned because it felt that in seeking an opinion from the attorney general the state board was, in effect, stradling the issue of integration.

THESE TWO RESULTS of the Thursday night meeting, which was held here 18 miles from Milford in an air of tension, left the little city of Milford, as a city, with a school but no school board and an area of tension which might blow up any minute.

Police Chief Samuel G. Powell of Milford said Thursday that Milford was "a keg of dynamite which might explode any minute" and the results of the meeting did not help to claim the situation in the eyes of this reporter who went back to Milford to spend the night after the board meeting.

The Milford school which had accepted 11 colored pupils for the fall term failed to reopen on Monday after a hostile meeting of citizens was held last Friday night, followed by a mob of 3,000 who showed up at the school on Monday to prevent the attendance of the colored pupils.

—o o o—

THE MILFORD school board, which had admitted the colored pupils, then sought an opinion from the state attorney general as to whether it had acted within the law in admitting the colored pupils.

When the attorney general held that the board had acted within the law, and that it would have violated the law if they had refused the pupils admission, the Milford board then asked the state board to give unqualified approval to its action in admitting the colored pupils.

The six-man state board, however, ordered the Milford board to reopen the school to pupils of both races but refused to give blanket approval to the action, stating that it would seek an opinion from the attorney general of Maryland.

After the meeting, a convoy of cars drove the 18 miles back to Milford, this reporter among them, but at Dover the group dispersed and there was no overt action Thursday night.

Observers in Milford feel that the crucial period will come Monday when the colored pupils try to re-enter the school.

—o o o—

POLICE HAVE been alerted, one meeting of NAACP and school officials has already been held with the governor, daily newspapers are urging calmness in the situation, the radio is making similar appeals and Mayor Edward C. Evans has issued a statement alerting the police and warning them to be on the look out for hate groups who already have tried to increase the tension here.

The National Association For The Advancement of White People circulated hate literature at both of the earlier meetings.

—o o o—

In resigning from the Milford School Board, the members said they could not assume responsibility of reopening the school in such an atmosphere without the complete backing of the state board.

State Board President J. Obrum Small told the AFRO the school will be opened Monday with "as much supervision as possible" being given the school from his offices in Dover.
