Mrs. Margaret T. Wheatley honored upon retirement

with Lula Jones Garrett

Three things they all had in common . . . that sparkling crowd which filled the Baltimore Room of the Sheraton Inn, Tuesday evening.

They loved her. They were indebted to her. They agreed that she is, always has been, the perfect personification "A Lady."

Her friends had gathered to pay tribute to her upon her retirement after 22 years in the Department of Housing and Community Development. They included persons who had worked with and under her. They included members of families who had and still live in housing projects she had supervised. They included clergymen she had aided as young ministers. . . and who as a parishoner, she had inspired by her superb faith. To many there she was just a beloved friend.

Warren W. Weaver, director of the Division of Relocation of the Department of Housing and Community Development, was toastmaster. The Rev. Frank Williams, former pastor of Metropolitan United Methodist Church here, and now pastor of Asbury Methodist Church, Washington, gave the invocation. He also "thanked" her for the inspiration she had given him, spoke of her tender loving care of her mother and her deep concern for her son, the Rev. Edward Carroll, now pastoring in Washington, spoke of the helping hand she gave him in three cities. New Haven, Conn., Marshall, Texas and Baltimore.

Arthur Murphy, of the Governor's staff, brought greetings of his own and a "Distinguished Citizen" award from Governor Marvin Mandel. Van Story Branch, director of the Division of Housing Management, who said that Mrs. Wheatley "always accepted trust willingly and performed faithfully," added that he is always reminded of her as a "lady among ladies."

And then Walden K. Gorsuch, manager of the George B. Murphy Homes, spoke of her radiant way of personifying Christianity, adding that if it become necessary, she didn't hesitate to become militant. Two tenants, Mrs. Juanita Carrington and Mrs. Mary Matthews called her counselor and friend; and in a beautiful, sweet soprano voice without accompaniment, Mrs. Christine Jones, a resident aide at Lexington-Poe Homes, charmed the audience by singing "A Sentimental Journey." There were also kind words from John Meehan, assistant director of the Division of Housing Management.

And then she was gifted with a beautiful charm (a coin framed in gold) for her bracelet.

Said the touched honoree, "I'm grateful to God who has given me you. . .my beautiful friends."

Mrs. Wheatley, who is the widow of Leonard Wheatley, who headed a division of the city recreation department, here, at one time, not only has done a magnificent job in housing. She was responsible for black men being taken into a union in New Haven. . .and initiated the first nurses aides program at Johns Hopkins Hospital. She has also served as counselor for the United States Employment Service.

Greeting her at the dinner party on Tuesday evening were:

Messrs. and Mesdames Charles K. Anderson, Glenwood Eubanks, John Meehan, Beri Foreman, William Gosnell, M. V. Buckley, Lennie Johnson, Lawrende Green, Herman Howard, Lester Norris, John Reid, Clifton Smith, William Smith;

Tau Gamma Deltas mark Founder's Day

MRS. ENOLIA P. McMILLAN

Pi Chapter of Tau Gamma Delta Sorority marked Founder's Day with a luncheon in the Sheraton-Baltimore Saturday afternoon.

The occasion was the observation of the 25th anniversary of the sorority, founded in Detroit, Michigan, by Sorors Clotel Anderson, Kathleen Carter, Corine Dean, Agnes Sams Fischer, Elizabeth W. Parker, Juanita Parnell, Jane H. Smith and the late Ochillus Morgan.

The sorority now has 28 chapters throughout the country.

Speaker for the luncheon was Mrs. Enolia P. McMillan, president of the Baltimore branch of the NAACP who was also recipient of the group's service award Plaque. $50 was given to the NAACP.

"These are serious times," Mrs. McMillan told the group. "Not only is property, but our very existence threatened by war, drugs, racism, illigitimacy and pollution. If we are to survive as a democratic society it is imperative that we get together, and learn to live and act together. we cannot survive in a nation of half rich, half poor, half slave and half free," said the speaker.

Mrs. McMillan urged parents to instill a sense of pride in their children, and stimulate the youth to take advantage of what opportunities are offered.

"Don't kid yourself," she told the young people, "Being black will not make you beautiful unless you are prepared to take your place in a democratic society. Your pride shouldn't be all in your bush. It should be inside your head."

"Be constructive," she urged. Said she "it only takes one match to start a forest fire. One bitter word can start a race riot or break up a family. One untrue statement can destroy confidence, and one stupid vote can put the wrong person in office."

Sorors Florence Middlebrook presided at the affair, the invocation and grace were by Soror Mary Jenkins. Soror Margaret Yound was soloist and the history of the sorority was given by Soror Clutie Ford.

The tribute to the founders was given by Soror Margaret Summerville.

Soror Ruth Salisbury introduced Mrs. McMillan. The presentations were made by Soror Edith Harris. The presentations also included a check to Miss Cassandra Wesley, who has passed the National Merit Scholarship Qualification Examinations, and who is a member of the sorority's youth group, the Tau-Eties.

The Founder's Day program was arranged by a committee headed by Soror Martha J. Thompson, and included Sorors Edith Harris, Flossie Johnson, Thelma McCoy and Lois Rossdom, co-chairmen.

Their special guests included Soror Jane Smith of Philadelphia, one of the founders; Soror Bessie S. Oliver, of New York City, national anti-basileus; Soror Gladys G. Owens of Washington, Mrs. McMillan and Mrs. Lula Mackay.

Soror Juanita Mills is basileus of Pi Crapter.

Attending the luncheon were: Mesdames Esther S. Fennell, Eunice Brooks, Edythe Smith, Harriet Smith, Margaret Dixon, Naomi W. Smith, Merrie Manning, Fannie Watkins, Hallie Maynor, Betty Johnson, Esther Rudson, Portia B. Johnson, Carolyn Wongus, Daisy Turner, Lois Hecht.

Why Parker Is Top 7th GOP Candidate

By MAX JOHNSON

Facts involve why Peter Parker, people's counsel on the Maryland Public Service Commission, is seen as front-running GOP candidate with integrated party organizational support — though there is a black candidate in the seven-man race Earl Koger.

Black Republican officials helped to pick Mr. Parker — and they think the choice was the best for their party and the district.

The decision-making group included, in addition to Mr. Carl Adair, black G.O.P. District chairman, such persons as John Fulton, George Holley, Thomas Mickle, John Thompson, Mrs. Audrey Taylor, Elmer O. Harris, Edward Prettyman, Samuel Barber, and Archie M. Jones — all ward executives.

Mr. Jones, an insurance executive, is Treasurer of the Republican State Central Committee of Maryland — and the only black person in such a post in the two major parties throughout the country.

Two days before the deadline filing date they decided on Mr. Parker — whom they knew since his earlier days as president of the city's Board of Supervisors of Elections.

"We felt," Mr. Jones later explained to this writer, "that he was the best candidate and more sensitive to the needs of the communities in the 7th District.

"After considerable disoussions with Mr. Parker, we became even more certain and we made the choice.

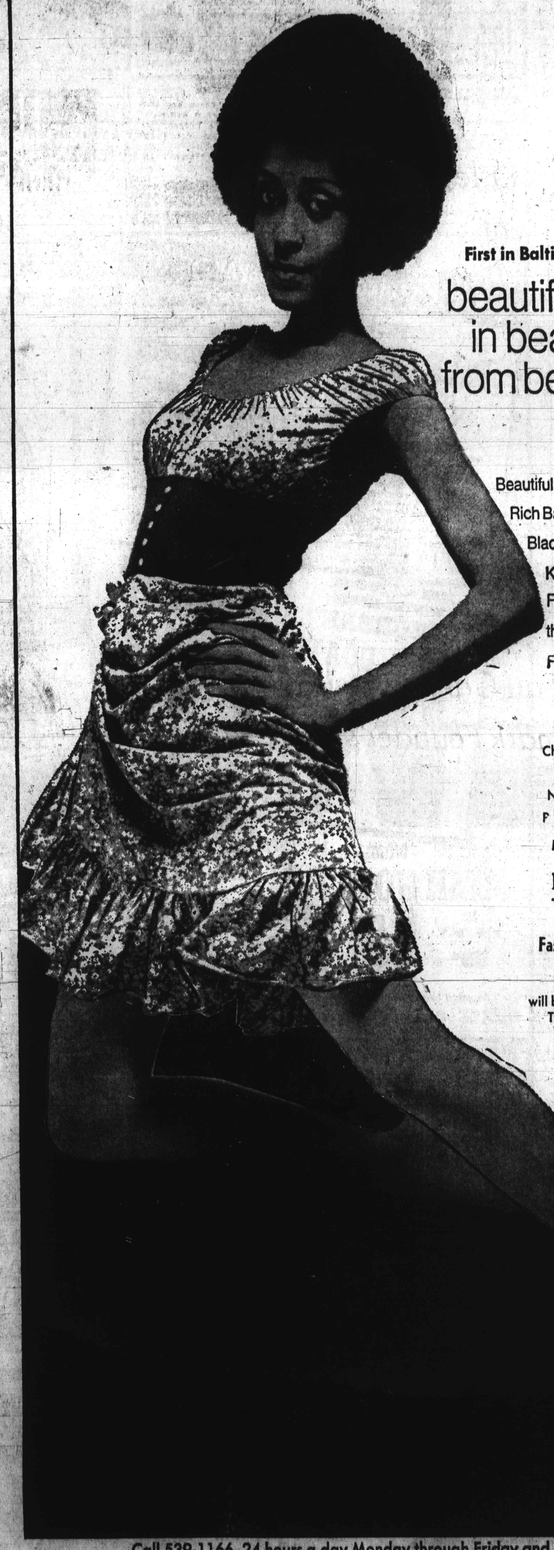

"We are supporting him 100 per cent, because we still feel that way."

The city area 7th District GOP officials want to win during what they consider this an opportune period, and they feel they have the strongest candidate in Mr. Parker.

They see the Parker campaign under the slogan "People Power" more geared to the district — and needs of the district.
