REV. DR. S. A. HENRY

Senator Tyding's statement

"November 3, 1970 did not turn out the way I had hoped. I do however want to say a special thank you to Charles G. Tildon, my city co-chairman and all others who worked in my campaign and who voted for me. I shall always remember with gratitude, this help. I recognize and appreciate especially the support that I got from all the readers of the AFRO."

Late night vigil ends in defeat

By PAUL F. EVANS...

What began in the early evening at the Tydings headquarters in the Belvedere Hotel as a victory celebration eventually became a tense situation with sporadic outbursts of cheers for incoming reports which showed that the senior senator from Maryland was at times narrowing the commanding lead which Beall held from the beginning.

As the evening grew on supporters began to settle themselves for a long wait, the outbursts of cheering and groans grew less frequent until none came.

However, many supporters in the room considered themselves "veteran" politicians, "Defeat is not even in the thought process," one worker told the AFRO.

Balck supporters and white talked and joked during the waiting hours, recalling past experiences, meeting workers from across the state who had journeyed to Baltimore for this which was to be the great victory celebration and possible advent of a Tydings' drive for the Vice Presidentcy in 1972.

"The city will carry him, the city will carry him, black people will pull him through," was a cry that began to be heard in the room about 11:30 p.m.

Grasping every hope they could, supporters saw that unless help came from the still unheard from 4th legislative district the citadel of black political muscle in the state the race would indeed be tight and perhaps the unspeakable thought of defeat.

At 1:15 a.m. the Tyding's board showed Beall 235,600 and the incumbent Senator 230-908. Huge cries of applause greeted this count because the entire 4th Legislative district had just been reported. Blacks gave Tydings a total of 24,014 to Beall's 917.

At this point Charles Tildon, director of the Provident Hospital Development Fund, and Tydings's campaign aide said, "Well, we have done our share!, meaning the blacks had delivered when the chips were down."

This final tally could be considered the last hurrah of the evening. After the votes for other districts slowly came in, even the strongest of supporter realized that short of a miracle the end was only a matter of conceding by the Senator.

At 1:30 a.m. a Tydings's aide told the AFRO that based on reports from counts within Tydings's suit upstairs in the hotel he was trailing by only 6,000 votes with 18 per cent of the city vote in. Despite this a national news me- projected a Tydings's defeat at 1:45 a.m. with 82 percent of the vote reported according to network counts.

At 1:50 Milton Allen and his wife entered the hall. The Allen win gave the Tydings's crowd an opportunity to take their minds off the dismal scores on the bulletin board.

At 2:10 am. Tydings's campaign executive, Albert Figinski, told the backers that the evening "would be a long one, We will be here all night, we are going to win."

With this announcement many onlookers either decided to leave or get coffee or find a place to sleep. Many prepared for a wait lasting until morning.

At 2:30 George P. Mahaoney, the primary election loser who had been sitting in the audience announced, My wife and I are here; we are not leaving until the last vote has been counted."

Applause again greeted a winning candidate at the headquarters, when Paul Sarbanes, winner in the 4th Congressional district entered with his wife saying: "The race is not over until the last vote has been counted."

This seemed to be the prelude though to a statement by Tydings. The television cameras began to roll as the sparsely popu- lated room began to fill again.

In walked the Senator, Mrs. Tydings, and other chief camgaign aides and supporters amid a thunderous applause and cheers from the faithful remaining to the bitter end.

At 3 a.m. acknowledging the sustained applause several minutes before speaking, Tydings slowly began, I have been privileged to serve the people of Maryland for the last 15-years. I will be grateful to all the friends and supporters who have been with me.

"We have fought a good race. We have had seven face-to-face debates, my opponent and I, and the people of Maryland have spoken. I am returning to the proactice of law for which I was trained."

Tears of disbelief streamed down many faces of men and women alike. "Camelot has really come to an end," severla people mentioned.

The night air was quite chilly with dampness in the early morning hours as the defeated Senator made his way to the door, embracing men and women as he recognized familiar faces of many who had been with him since his early days in the 1964 campaign.

Crowds followed him to his parked car on Charles St. many still unwilling to admit this was the end of the campaign; so swiftly done.

—Tydings did

ning total of 90,352 votes for state's attorney, 39,515 or 44 percent were cast in AFRO precincts.

What are AFRO precincts?

There are 554 voting precincts in Baltimore City, and in 170 of them there are 75 percent or more black registered voters.

These are designated by this newspaper as AFRO precincts.

There are approximately 128,000 registered voters in these precincts, 92 percent of whom are black.

Over 77 percent of all black voters in the city are registered in these 170 precincts.

AFRO precincts also represent approximately 31 percent of the total registered voters in Baltimore City.

Total black voters in the city represent 37 percent.

Baltimore J-U-G-S to repeat 'Living Ads' charity benefit

with Lula Mackay

Members of the Baltimore chapter of J-U-G-S Inc., have completed plans for their second annual Living Ads Ball. The ball is a benefit for Provident Hospital and the AFRO's Mrs. Santa Claus., and is set for Friday Nov. 20, at Blue Crest North. The evening begins with cocktails at eight, dinner at nine, the presentation of Living Ads, with choreography by Mrs. Zelma Brown, and winds up with dancing to the music of Jimmy Smith and the Rockettes of Rhythm. Living Ads will be youngsters representing business firms and individuals who subscribed to the group's souvenir booklet.

Last year, the JUGS at their first benefit ball raised $5,000 for the AFRO's Mrs. Santa Claus. Funds were used by AFRO Charities Inc., to help deserving families at Christmas.

This year, the AFRO's Mrs. Santa and Provident Hospital will share equally in the proceeds. The group hopes to purchase equipment for the isolation nursery at the hospital which opens at its new Liberty Heights Avenue location next month.

President of the club is Mrs. Lorna Brice. Other members are Mesdames Jean Chaney, Winifred Ashby, Barbara Owings, Bettye Moss, Mattie Washington, Sallie Eley, Estelle Hughes, Daisy Alston, Sandra Brice, Leanna Webster, Frances Stith and Connie Ward.

Tickets at $15 per are available from members or from the AFRO office and Provident Hospital Development Office in Mondawmin.

And there's another goody in store for the AFRO's Christmas Charity.

For your Thanskgiving holiday entertainment you could choose nothing more exciting than Les Ballets Africans, the new company of 44 exciting young men and women, which will come to the Marris A. Mechanic Theatre from Tuesday, Nov. 24 through Sunday, Nov. 29 . . . not only because the show is extraordinary, the girls very young and pretty, the performers beautifully trained and the magnificent costumes give a chance to brush up on fabulous African garb, but because in the spirit of the season, you have an Morris A. Mechanic Theatre will share its opening night profits on this particular project with three charities: The AFRO's Mrs. Santa Claus, the Morgan State College Overseas Student Association and Saint James' Episcopal Church. The opening night is expected to be star-studded with guests from African Embassies in Washington.

On Saturday afternoon, Agnes Patterson and Mae Parrott entertained the Baltimore Chapter of Girl Friends at luncheon at the Hill Top . . . where between sips and chips; and plans and pride they managed a business session and an accolade to a member . . . all the while looking as if they were staging a miniature fashion show. Those gals wore some of the snarkiest pants ensembles, plus a midi or two that I've seen in a day or so . . . and I've been looking!

The pride thing was arent Mazie Barbour Rea, who the Saturday evening before, had received an award from the Howard University Alumni Federation, not only for service to her Alma Mater and the Alumni but also to her community. Mae Williams, who was there reported, that Mazie was a pure dream, in an Oscar de la Renta original in diamond-patterned brocade with black top, the jewel trim of the deep V repeated on the matching jacket. They even demanded to know and learned that she drew her hair back from her face and into a cascade of big curls at the back. They read her leather-bound citation and inspected her pale mahogany and bronze medal plaque. And then they learned from another snoopy Girl Friend that Maizie is being backed for a seat on the Howard University Trustee Board.

Business items on the agenda included their dinner dance, scheduled for April 23rd; the regional session in Norfolk, Va., on May 7-9; a jaunt to Oregon Ridge on May 19, and even the national conclave a couple or more years hence.

Vera Williams presided in the absence of Catherine Law, who was attending the executive meeting in Boston, Mass. Also at this meeting were Irma Roy and Anita Wheatley.

On hand at the session here were Anne Davis, Ruth Jennifer, Laura Jones, Gwendolyn Lunch, Lula Mackay, Olga Parker, Eliza Robinson, Gaynell Spaulding, Elizabeth Stewart, Doris Wheeler and Theda Wilson.

Lillian Bell and Margaret Armstrong hosted the We Wives at cocktails and dinner, and then the group perked off to the theatre to view "On a Clear Day[illegible] . . . making Saturday a perfectly delightful day.

In this group were Priscilla Lansey, Margaret Hythe, Margery Prout, Mae Dyson, Alice Russell, Verniece Reynolds, Gwendolyn Tarter, Dell Foreman and Ivy Grinnage, who is president this year.

Recently, members of Chesapeake, Point Breeze and Woodlawn Toastmistress Clubs observed National Toastmistress Week with a demonstration meeting in Mondawmin Mall.

Theme of the session was "Toastmistress: The Golden Key." Mrs. Lillie Powell, of the Chesapeake Club, keynoted the ideals and purposes of the late founder, Mrs. Ernestine White, that the organization afford women the opportunity of leadership and speech development through participation and practice.

The program of the group places emphasis upon communication, leadership training and skill in organizational techniques. It welcomes to membership interested adult women without regard to race, religion, citizenship of country of residence.

Speakers for the session were Mrs. Mildred Wolfe, past president of the Point Breeze Club, who discussed "How to make a speech"; and Mrs. Gwendolyn Richardson, past president of Woodlawn Club, who talked on "How much do you know about conducting a meeting."

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Edna B. Farago, of the Alpha Club of Charleston, S.C., and Mrs. Bessie Certain of the Redstone Arsenal Club of Huntsville, Ala. Both visitors were in Baltimore attending a training seminar sponsored by the Department of the Army at Fort Holabird.

In attendance were:

Mesdames Matilda Mirant, Anna Smith and Mildred Wolfe of the Point Breeze Club; Mesdames Lorene Cephas, Regina Hyman and Gwendolyn Richardson of the Woodlawn Club;

And Mesdames Elizabeth Bryan, Katherine Lawrence, Lillie Powell, Ernestine Smith and Doris Payne; and Miss Vivian W. Young of the Chesapeake Club.
