Carver students believe in helping themselves

When you can't be helped, help yourself. That seems to be the motto of Carver Vocational Technical High School, located at Presstman and Bentalou Streets.

The students and faculty of Carver are helping themselves in the true pioneer tradition. The school has long needed a field house, and for the past five years has been trying to get one.

But, with a backlog of requests, the schoolboard was unable to meet Carver's needs. So Carver is meeting its own needs — partly so anyway — by supplying the manpower and knowhow to construct its own field house near the school's stadium.

Under the guidance of C. Bryant and A. Watson, students from the carpentry and masonry departments are pitching in on the project, using the materials supplied by the school board.

Starting on October 9, the field house foundation has already been laid. When completed, the 20 feet wide, 30 feet long and 12 feet high project will be used to store the school's athletic equipment.

The electrical wiring will be done by students from the electrical department. To date about 46 students have participated in the project 30 from the bricklaying department, 16 from carpentry.

Their grades range from the ninth through the twelth. Plans call for some help to come from night school students. They will work on weekends. As of now the target date for the project's completion is around Thanksgiving.

The school's principal, Henry Johnson, who did much to start this project, is proud, and rightly so, the initiative taken by his students and faculty in beginning the field house.

What the faculty and students are doing at Carver certainly proves that with a little self help, much can be accomplished.

BUDDING MASONRY at it's high school best is being displayed on the athletic field at Carver High School where students in the brick laying class are erecting an all-brick storage structure with their own hands. Assisting and instructing in the building of the structure are construction trade teachers, Anthony Watson, Clyde Bryant and Sumner Clark. When the storage house is complete it will be used by the school to store athletic equipment.

VEC payments already top '69

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — The Virginia Employment Commission paid out $9,127,759 in unemployment insurance benefits during the first half of this year, with the figure being more than that paid during all of 1969.

Last year, the benefits for the entire 12-month period totaled $9,077,337.

The VEC said the high level of unemployment benefits reflectsthe nation's economic slow down.

Benefits paid in the fiscal year 1970 totaled $12,722,731, a 53.3 per cent increase over fiscal 1969's total of $8,297,392.

Bullets back home Thursday

PORTLAND — The Baltimore Bullets return to the Civic Center next Wednesday night, and they are looking forward to the respite this promises.

Following last night's (Thursday) game here, coach Gene Shue and Co., must meet the Rockets at San Diego tonight, then the Lakers in Los Angeles on Monday.

Philadelphia visits the Civic Center on Veterans' Day night.

On Wednesday at San Francisco, guard Jeff Mullins scored 12 of his game-high 35 points in the final period to power the Warriors to a 111-100 NBA victory over Baltimore.

The win was the second of the season without defeat for the Warriers over the Central Division leaders.

High schools seek officials

Football and basketball officials are urgently needed to handle scholastic games for the remainder of the 1970-71 season.

A hassle between the local officials association and the Maryland Scholastic Association (MSA) has created a gap that must be filled as quickly as possible.

Ed Hargaden, veteran athletic director at Loloyla High School, is heading up a program that is designed to uncover a new breed of young arbiters to satisfy the need.

A move in that direction is to be taken Nov. 28, when a basketball officials' clinic will be coducted at Loyola from 9 to 11 a.m., with invitations extended to any youngsters interested in enrolling and developing.

Charlie Eckman, a former NBA official and coach, will be the first instructor.

In addition to football and basketball, officials are being sought for baseball, lacrosse and soccer.

Colts' notes

Linebacker coach Hank Bullough says of Mike Curtis' two-interceptions and 15-tackle performance Sunday:

"We put a particularly heavy burden on Mike Curtis against Bob Griese and he responded with an amazing performance. We figured they would throw short and hoped Mike would pick one off."

• • •

The Green Bay-Baltimore series has been a story of streaks. The Packers won four in a row from 1962-63; Baltimore won the next two then dropped four more in a row and now the Colts are riding a three-game winning streak in the series.

The Packers lead the competition, 16-15.

• • •

John Unitas has thrown touchdown passes in five straight games—all Colt victories. The legendary quarterback, who holds the National Football League record for throwing the TDs in 47 straight games, has tossed eight in that five-game period.

• • •

The Colts haven't allowed a touchdown since the third quarter of the New York Jets' contest three weeks ago. They have played nine straight quarters without allowing a TD and have permitted only three points to be scored on them during that time.

• • •

An example of the stubborness of Baltimore's defense, the Colts have forced their opponents to attempt field goals from outside the 40-yard line 13 times this season and they have only been successful on three of them.

The Baltimore Colts, who intercepted only one pass in the first four games this season, have intercepted 13 in the last three games including three last Sunday against Miami. The highlight of the current success, however, was the six times Baltimore stole the ball from the New York Jets' Joe Namath.
