assistant city solicitor who was also a Fourth District State Senate candidate, but withdrew formally almost to the [illegible] to back Mrs. Welcome, reported expenditures of $350.

Clarence Mitchell 3rd, who won the Democratic nomination for a House of Delegates seat on Mrs. Welcome's ticket of independent candidates, reported contributions of $460, and expenditures of $612.60.

Mr. Mitchell, son of Clarence Mitchell, head of the Washington NAACP, and Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitchell, local attorney, is making his first bid for public office.

Murray Abraham, incumbent House of Delegates member and another winner on Mrs. Welcome's ticket, reported a contribution of $300, and expenditures of $300.

Over in the Fifth District, Mrs. Victorine Adams, prominent businesswoman making her first bid for elective public office, reported contributions totaling $3,164.40 and expenditures of $3,108.31.

Mrs. Adams ran well in her try for a House of Delegates Democratic nomination, though she failed to place among the six nominated. She campaigned as an independent.

Poets Corner

The right to make my dreams come true
I ask, nay, I demand of life,
Nor shall fate's deadly contraband
Impede my steps, nor countermand.
Too long my heart against the ground
Has beat the dusty years around,
And now, at length, I rise, I wake
And stride into the morning break.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION 1962 AFFILIATE MEMBER

—Longshoremen

the chief customs agent reported, that the investigation will go on for several months.

Hot spot of the probe at the moment is piers on Locust Point, where most of the "temptation goods" are unloaded from incoming ships, Mr. Riley said.

He described "temptation goods" as wearing apparel, whiskey, cosmetics, transistor radios, and chinaware.

Before the investigation ends the small army of Federal agents will comb the entire 45-mile water front, it was promised.

THE HOT-CARGO racket is well organized, according to investigators, and a high degree of collusion has been developed, the AFRO was told.

Truckers, checkers, longshoremen, and watchmen are all implicated by evidence dug up by probers, the AFRO learned.

Following a break in the case, where the importer claims he lost more than $175,000 in stolen merchandise alone, the AFRO interviewed several veteran longshoremen to determine how thefts in such proportions could occur without detection.

"TALKING TO a group of dock workers who have been on the waterfront for a total of 125 years, a reporter was told:

That the estimated losses are greatly understated.

There are several types of thefts going on — some individual, some organized on a small scale and others described as "go for broke."

The larcenies are made possible by "cooperation."

THE INFORMANTS, none ever involved in the ring, agreed to talk only if their identity were withheld.

"In my time," said one, "I've seen guys bust open a case and take whatever he wants and hide it until he leaves work."

Asked where the stolen items are hidden, he replied: "Anywhere they can find. On ships, in heaps of trash, trucks, cars, or whatever they can find."

"It got so bad that dock officials don't allow longshoremen to bring their cars in," he said.

WHISKEY, SPORT shirts, perfume, shoes and the like are coveted merchandise for the individual operator," one worker said.

Cooperation by "turning heads" is the method used by the "go-for-broke" operators, it was said.

Truckers, loaders, supervisors, and guards are involved in this phase of the operation, which was termed highly organized.

"A truck driver might come to the pier with an invoice calling for a ton of merchandise," one worker said, adding:

"When he leaves he just might have three or four tons, depending on what's being lifted."

THIS IS only possible if a lot of people agree to turn their heads at the right time, it was pointed out.

"Short check," uncovered by investigators, was also explained by the longshoremen.

This system involves persons who enter an agreement to pilfer pre-selected merchandise.

For instance, a shipment containing 41 pieces of merchandise is eight pieces short when it's unloaded from the ship and placed on the docks.

"The front man gets his going," it was explained.

When the merchandise is loaded from the dock into the trucks, eight more pieces disappear, the middle man getting his.

By the time the shipment arrives at its destination, the driver has claimed his and the merchant gets a "short order."

Many longshoremen have been laid off for several days and some even fired for stealing, the veteran dock men reported.

Asked how long they've seen the racket work, they generally agreed "it's been going on ever since I've been there."

—James

There are other toys belonging to James at the house— a rocking chair, a tricycle and a car—all set to one side in a corner of the room, as if they wait for their owner.

When his mother, Mrs. Essie Edwards, looks at them, she brushes away her tears.

"He was my baby, he was my baby," she kept saying over and over again, when a reporter visited her Wednesday.

"I SURE hope they find him (the motorist) and punish him. It won't do my baby any good, but at least he won't go through life as if he hasn't done anything," said Mr. Edwards.

"Even an animal wouldn't do anything like that. He could have at least stopped," the father added.

Funeral services for James will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, at Zion Baptist Church, Caroline and Lanvale Sts.

In addition to his parents, James is survived by a brother, Robert, 14, and two sisters, Esther, 13, and Pearlie Jean, 10.

the 500 block of Robert St. Wednesday morning.

"He only went to school a half-day. That's why he was out of school—they said he was going to the store with a bottle to buy some candy," she added.

She said that she had been notified about the accident on her job at 2 p.m. Fifty minutes later "Butch" was dead at Provident Hospital.

"He never regained consciousness," Mrs. Clark reflected with tears in her eyes.

MR. CLARK said that he learned about the fatal accident at 4 p.m.

at their present address for

The Clarks, who have lived two years, said that they plan to move away from the scene of the tragedy, with their remaining three children—"Butch's" twin sister, Betty, Jeanette, 4, and Beverly, 15.

"I'm trying to fight it—to get over it—but we can't stay here—we won't be here next week," the bereaved father explained.

Willis to board of Md. National

J. McKenny Willis, Jr., former president of the Easton National Bank of Maryland has been elected to the board of directors of Maryland National Bank at the monthly board meeting, according to an announcement by Hooper S. Miles, chairman of the board.

A native of Oxford, Md., Mr. Willis is President of J. McKenny Willis and Son, Inc., the largest grain, feed and seed company on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

He is also chairman of the advisory board of the Easton Office of Maryland National Bank.

3rd Md. sit-in case pushed to high court

The third Maryland sit-in case to be taken to the Supreme Court was submitted this week, the Legal Redress Committee of the Maryland State Conference NAACP announced at its Tuesday meeting.

The case involved 12 students who were arrested at Hooper's Restaurant, June 17, 1960 on trespass charges. They were subsequently convicted by a Municipal Court. The conviction was affirmed in January of 1962 by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The case was chosen as a pilot case to push to the high court because the Maryland Court of Appeals went further than most courts in its decision, according to Mrs. Juanita Mitchell, secretary of the committee and an attorney for the defendants.

The court maintained that "the right to speak freely and to make public protest does not import a right to invade or remain on the property of private citizens."

Defense attorneys contend that the decision conflicts with past Supreme Court rulings which secure the right of freedom of expression.

They further argue in the brief submitted to the high court that state power cannot be used to enforce discriminatory policies of a private party.

Two others Maryland sit-in cases pending before the Supreme Court are Drews V. State, involving an arrest at the Gwynn Oaks Park, and Griffin and Greene v. State, involving sit-in arrests at the formerly segregated Glen Echo Park.

The 12 defendants named in the Hooper's case are Robert Mack Bell, Lovellen P. Brown, Arimentha D. Bullock, Rosetta Gainey, Annette Green, Robert M. Johnson, Richard McKoy, Aliceteen E. Mangum, John R. Quarles Sr., Muriel B. Quarles, Lawrence M. Parker and Barbara F. Whittaker.

Lawyers named in the writ are Jack Greenberg, chief legal coonsel for the NAACP and Mrs. Constance M. Motley, his assistant.

IN OTHER business, the committee announced that the Maryland State Conference NAACP has spent a total of $5,108.45 in legal fees for sit-in cases in the state since August, 1961. The expenditure is about evenly divided between the counties and Baltimore city cases.

Involved are some 321 arrests. Sixty-seven resulted in dismissal or not guilty verdicts and 111 resulted in convictions. The latter have been appealed to the Court of Appeals.

A SURVEY of school desegregation in the Eastern Shore counties preliminary to legal action reveals that "very little actual desegregation has taken place since the 1954 Supreme Court decision," the committee reported.

With the exception of Talbot County, with 25 students in three schools formerly set aside for white schools, and Cecil County, with 153 pupils in 12 formerly for - white schools, none of the nine shore counties have colored pupils in white schools.

All maintain that transfers must be approved by the County Board of Education.

"Our position is that a pupil should be allowed to register in the nearest school of his choice," said Walter Black, executive secretary of the State NAACP.

Final rites for J. C. Bailey

Friends from up and down the East Coast met at Macedonia Baptist Church, Fremont and Lafayette Aves., Saturday, to pay last respects to Junius Bailey, widely known as "Smiling J. C."

The Rev. Willard L. Clayn, pastor, recalled Mar.B fulness, and friendliness. He said that one gets what one puts into life and that it shows how many friends Mr. pasotr stated, is a drawing Bailey had. His name the pastor stated, is a drawing card.

Approximately 300 persons attended the services and the procession to Arbutus Memorial Park, where he was buried, numbered approximately 40 cars.

Two cars were necessary to transport the 43 floral tributes.

MEMBERS OF ...the Cheasapeake Club, which member, were the honorary pall-bearers.

The active pall-bearers were Melvin G. Roy, William Aimes, Shirley Diggs, George Gibson, Maceo Paysour, and Hezekiah Spencer.

During the services, Willim H. Wright, director of the Town Choir, played the organ. Mrs. Floretta Palmer sang "Lead, Kindly Light," "There Is No Death" and "Now the Day Is Over."

The procession, led by a motorcycle patrolman, past the Alhambra Grill tavern—restaurant on Pennsylvania Ave., where for many years Mr. Bailey was a fixture.

Mr. Bailey was an impeccable groomed dresser who had a talent for making friends.

I twas his genial personality which made his Alhambra and three other establishments commercial successes.

His tasty foods were known from Coast to Coast. And his success was not a matter of luck. He knew the restaurant business and aimed to please and satisfy his customers.

Funeral services for Mr. Bailey were handled by the Nutter Funeral Home, 3033 W. North Ave.

His immediate survivors are his wife, the former Mrs. Ella Jackson Fenderson, of Philadelphia, whom he married in 1944, and a brother, Nicholas Bailey, of Jersey City.

Homicide charged in 'heart attack' death

Raymond Jones, 23, 1600 block Eutaw Pl., was held without bail for grand jury action on a murder charge in Central Homicide Court Tuesday afternoon. The Medical Examiner's Office reported the victim died of natural causes.

Albert Wingate, 36, 900 block Shuter St., died March 20 shortly after a fight with Mr. Jones.

The Medical Examiner's report, presented by Charles E. Moylan Jr., assistant State's attorney, listed the manner of death as "natural," and the cause of death as a "heart attack."

Mrs. Eva Wingate, the victim's widow, told Judge Robert Hammerman she witnessed the fight between the two men.

She said she and her husband were standing at Ashland and Rutland Aves., when a group of youths, including Mr. Jones came up to them.

ONE OF the group touched her indecently, she said, and then suddenly Mr. Jones starting hitting her husband.

Mrs. Wingate said her husband finally broke away and went up the street, but Mr. Jones followed and began beating him again. She said she went o her husband's aid wih a wrench, and the man finally left them.

She she and her children finally got Mr. Wingate in their home, she said he collapsed. Police were called and he was pronounced dead at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Mr. Jones, who was not represented by an attorney, told Judge Hammerman a slightly different version.

He said Mr. Wingate had attacked him, accusing him ot being the one who had touched his wife.

He said he was just defending himself. He charged that Mrs. Wingate struck him with a wrench, and that Mr. Wingate drew a knife on him and cut him on the hand.

Judge Hammerman agreed with Mr. Moylan's comment that there was "an unusual aspect in the case," as a result of the Medical Examiner's report on the cause of Mr. Wingate's death, but ruled Mr. Jones could have been a contributing factor.
