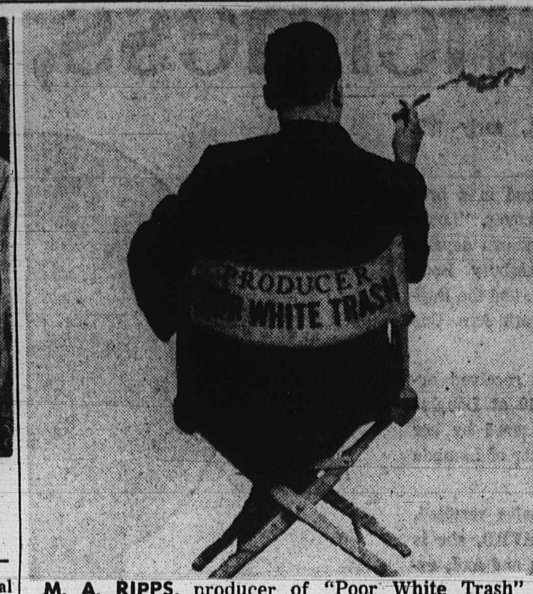
CHUCK CONNORS, in the title role, and beautiful newcomer, Kamala Devi, share a romantic scene in the stirring thriller "Geronimo," a United Artists release in Panavision and Technicolor, held over at the Met Theatre.

RICHARD TODD, left, and Jamie Uys, keep their guns on Lionel Jeffries, ruthless leader of "The Hellions," Technicolor thriller now at the Royal with "The Story of The Count of Monte Cristo."



M. A. RIPPS, producer of "Poor White Trash" explains making movie, now playing at the Harlem.

FIRST RUN FILMS

Two robust films at Royal Theatre

One of the most popular of all screen plot situations is the "shootout," that moment of drama in which hero and villain — or villains — blaze away at each other on the dusty street of a small range town.

Now, along comes "The Hellions," in Technirama and color by Technicolor at the Royal Theatre, to move the shootout from the familiar frontier of the old southwest to the completely new, spectacular and exciting frontier of old South Africa.

Louis Jourdan, screen idol, and Yvonne Fureaux, the Continental beauty who soared to stardom in "La Dolce Vita," are top cast in "The Story of the Count of Monte Cristo," in Technicolor and twin attraction.

In the swashbuckling tradition the won worldwide followings for Douglas Fairbanks and Errol Flynn, Jourdan stars in the title role of the classic Alexander Dumas adventure novel recounting the escapades of Edmund Dantes.

'Poor White Trash' plays at the Harlem

American National Films took camera and crews down to the areas of southern Louisiana to film Poor White Trash in its actual locale. Here the cameras were able to record the actual conditions of how these people live, and the moving story centered around it.

Only through their ability to acclimate themselves to the authenticity of these surroundings, were the actors and actresses able to give such a realistic portrayal.

Many of the scenes in "Poor White Trash" now playing at the Harlem, are so unnatural that it became necessary to film them on closed restricted sets.

Critics who have seen this motion picture are amazed that the camera was able to film these unusual scenes: so authentic in nature, without benefit of artificial glamor. When you view "Poor White Trash" you will never forget what you have seen on the motion picture screen. This is life in the raw — as it is happening today!!!!

'Geronimo' held over at the Met

Historical backgrounds, both picturesque and unusual, will be seen as the setting for many scenes in the Laven-Gardner - Levy presentation, Geronimo," a United Artists release in Panavision and Technicolor, which stars Chuck Connors in the title role held over at the Met Theatre.

A hacienda in the Mexican village of Ferreria, built in 1700, serves as military headquarters for General Crook, whose assignment is to investigate how a band of 25 Apaches can elude 5,000 calvarymen.

The hacienda has tall, battlemented towers, which had actually found use as a lookout for attacking Indians — including the real Geronimo and his band.

This area has recently been studied by anthropologists who found that it contains the remains of an Indian culture dating back thousands of years.

MOMENTS MUSICAL

Students show progress in annual piano recital

By ADAH K. JENKINS

Musical training in any of its many fields, should be a consistently progressive process. This was demonstrated in the annual recitals by students of our dedicated and successful music instructors.

An attractive program folder announced the exhibition by pupils of Mrs. Gwendolyn Lassiter, held at Coppin State Teachers College. The participants included a special group from St. Pius Catholic School, of which Sister Consilio, O. P. is principal.

Noted on the program for receiving Music Festival Certificates and rating from the Catholic University of America auditions were: Anna Mooney, Eileen Turner, Mary Brown, Maritta Coleman, Linda Folder and Carolyn Carr.

Also performing with precision and taste were: Kevin and Keith Nock, Patricia Bowman, Marilyn Lewis, Colette Nock, Lee Bowman, Peggy and Joyce Atkinson, Michelene Thomas, Paula Dickens, Alvin Guyton, Paul Davis, Wendy Nelson, Beverly Melton, Gina Ross, Shelley Wilkes, Matilda Taylor, Diane Dodd, Marilyn Bevans, Deborah Edwards, Jeann Forbes, Maria Graham, Donald Covington, Bertina Evans Marsha Henson, Estella Gambrill, Paula and Shiela Brooks.

IN THE same auditorium that week Mrs. Florence C. Carter presented her young musicians in a very well organized concert.

Ranging from delightfully imaginative numbers for the elementary pianists to advanced compositions by Chopin, Burgmuller, Beaumont and Godard, the evening was thoroughly enjoyable.

The large audience appreciated a complete performance of Clementi's Sonatine, done with due regard for expression as well as accuracy. The moderns were not neglected either, as two pianists played Bartok and Holst.

The program listed: Rodger Matthews, Craig Parrish, Inda Hall, George and Marcia Moddox, Veronica Session, George Parrish, Geoffrey Miller, Shirley Alexander, Patricia Wheeler, Veroneta Hopkins, Renee Spruill, Marcia Lewis, Hardenia Rock, James Pair, Deborah Liner, Madeline Morton, Muriel Price, Oermelia Webb, Angenette and Frank Park, Deidre Johnson, Margaret Parsons, Emile Julian, Veronica Grafton, Sandra Lamont, Odelia Wallace, Nancy Manning, Sandra Means, Ethelda Hawkins, Linda Wharton, Sylvia and David Williams.

AWARDS amounting to $200 were won by students participating in the annual piano scholarship contest sponsored by the Baltimore Music Guild.

Winners were Wayne Dorsey, first, pupil of Mrs. Mildred B. Bryant; Diane Conner, second, and Vanessa Westcott, third, both pupils of Mrs. Alma J. Caswell.

Students were required to play the Clementi sonatina Op. 36 No. 1 and a selection of their own choosing.

Also participating were Arlethia Davis, Frankie Reed, David Maxsam, Brenda Swann, Yvonne Thompson and Linda Johnson. The contest was held at Coppin State Teachers College.

Charles A. Parker is president of the Guild and Mrs. Margaret R. Franklin, secretary.

THE Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, along with Pittsburgh and Fresno (California) orchestras, were presented the Concert Artists Guild Award at the 20th anniversary convention of The American Symphony Orchestra League, held this month in Chicago. The award gives a young concert artist from the Guild who will perform with the winning groups.

Among those attending the one-day workshop sponsored at the Peabody by the Maryland Music Teachers Association were Emerson Myers, president; Mesdames Elizabeth David, past president, McLeod Katrine White, Emma Poulson, Norma Franks, Gwendolyn Lassiter, Florence Carter and your reviewer, Misses Louise Colson and Helena Zurstadt. Mrs. Eva Franz was registrar.

Faculty members from Catholic University and Peabody conducted the workshop.

SEVEN duets played by student teams and in pupil-teacher duos, added considerably to the interest of the musical by members of the Barton L. Bdon Studio.

Ensemble playing is highly recommended by music educators as an excellent training in rhythm, accuracy and listening, as well as affording a pleasurable interest.

In addition to the piano numbers Toni Reid, soprano, gave a pleasing rendition of a religious solo.

The class roster included: Melvin Pugh, John Carter, Toni Reid, Dennise Bond, Robert Alexander, Paula Bond, Patty Reid, Charlene Moore, Melvin Henry, Clifford Pugh, Sara Simpson, Richard Green, Donnell Johnson, James Currey, and Isabelle Evelyn.

Presentations for meritorious work were made by Mr. Bond at the conclusion of the recital at Coppin State Teachers College.
