when her husband was summoned.

Robert Corbin, brother of the jazz pianist, who lives with his wife and two children, in the 1000 block of Mc-Darry Ave.

Jacqueline Burris, employed at a babysitter in the home of the late jazz pianist and his wife.

James DeBrest, "Sparky" bass player in Corbin's trio.

DeBrest, formerly played with Miles Davis, is married and the father of one child.

Miss Joan Valentine, who became involved when a prescription bearing her name was allegedly found in Corbin's pocket.

Sandra Shversky and Dorothy Hughes, who were called to testify Friday but refused because Cecil B. Moore, their attorney, was on trial in another courtroom.

Judson Jenkins, also of the Jefferson Manor Apartments, who testified he assisted Marsh in trying to revive the unconscious Corbin.

The District Attorney's office was represented by Jack Alvey.

The Medical Examiner's office was represented by Dr. Joseph W. Spelman. Lawyers were: Robert N. Nix Jr., attorney for Marsh.

Cecil B. Moore, attorney for Dr. Willard. Misses Hughes and Shversky.

Charles Groisman, attorney for Bette Corbin and her baby-sitter, Jacqueline Harris and Isaiah Crippin for Mrs. Corbin, mother of the FIGURE IN DEATH PROBE — Pretty Bette Fletcher Corbin, was a vision of loveliness when she captured the crown of "Miss Sepia Philadelphia" several years ago. Now she is embroiled in a coroner's probe of her late husband, jazz pianist Hal Corbin, who died of an overdose of narcotics in the home of friend Roland Marsh (inset). The D.A. through questions is trying to establish a romance between Bette and Marsh as contributing toward the tragedy. Marsh took the Fifth Amendment 21 times during the interrogation. band leader.

A KEY WITNESS, MARSH, has refused to answer the questions of the assistant district attorney and the Medical Examiner by pleading the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution 21 times June 22 and about eight times Friday.

On the advice of his lawyer Marsh answered all questions. "I refuse to testify on the grounds that my answer may tend to incriminate me and I invoke my constitutional rights."

Some of the questions asked Myers Marsh were:

"When did you last see Harold Corbin?

"How old are you?

"Are you married?

"How long have you been married?

"Do you know Bette Corbin?"

"Have you ever taken her out?

"Have you ever been in her company?

"Who is Shermadine Marsh?

"The woman known as Shermadine Marsh who has just had a baby and is in the hospital at the present time, is she your wife?

"You don't know if the baby is yours or not?

"Is Betty Corbin your girl friend?"

Marsh refused to testify.

Dr. Spelman, who conducted the inquest, asked:

Did you ever work at Spider Kelly's?

Do you know Judson Jenkins?

DR. WILLARD, who, according to witnesses administered an injection to Corbin on April 1, was advised by Moore not to answer any questions.

Even after Myers read the statute to Marsh and Dr. Willard explaining that persons are called to testify before a medical examiner's inquest could be remanded to jail, both still invoked the Fifth Amendment.

BETTE CORBIN WAS asked similar questions concerning her relationship with Marsh, which tried to link them romantically.

Part of Bette Corbin's testimony:

Q. I call your attention to April 1, 1962 at approximately 1 or 2 a.m. Were you in the company of your husband?

A. Yes.

Q. And he had just finished an engagement at Spider Kelly's.

A. That is correct.

Q. And you and he were driving over to Mr. Marsh's house?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever gone out with Mr. Marsh?

A. No, only in the company of my husband.

Mrs. Corbin testified she did not get out of the car and go into the Marsh apartment with her husband.

Q. When did you leave the car?

A. When Shermandine, Roland's wife, came and told me my husband was sick.

Q. Where was your husband when you first saw him?

A. Sitting in a chair.

Q. What was anyone doing, if anything, to your husband when you first saw him there?

A. Mr. Marsh was putting ice on his forehead.

Q. In what way did you try to help?

A. By putting ice on his forehead and rubbing the back of his neck.

Q. Do you remember the doctor coming?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was Dr. Willard?

A. Yes.

Bette further testified; Dr. Willard walked over to her husband, took his blood pressure, listened to his heart and gave him an injection.

She testified he "started coming around" when he was given the injection.

Bette testified she left her husband at the apartment and went home after Dr. Willard said Corbin was going to be all right.

She said she received a phone call from Mrs. Marsh around five minutes of six that her husband was sick again.

Then Marsh called and said her husband had passed out.

Bette testified Marsh told her he believed that her husband had used narcotics when he talked to her on the phone.

At that point in the testimony Mrs. Corbin was asked if she knew her husband used drugs.

Her answer was, "No, I didn't."

She testified she did not tell hospital authorities that her husband might have taken an overdose of drugs because she did not know if it was narcotics.

She told the Myers the Marshes drove her to her mother-in-law's after leaving the hospital.

The Medical Examiner asked Mrs. Corbin: "How long she has known Marsh? Also, "And you are saying under oath that you have never been out in the company with Roland without your husband being present?"

Bette answered, "No."

Dr. Spelman asked, "You say you went to sleep in your parked car at 6th and Jefferson Sts., at o'clock in the morning in a real crime area and you had no feeling whatsoever about being alone?"

Mrs. Corbin said the car was locked and she was not afraid."

DEBREST, BASS PLAYER in Corbin's trio testified: Corbin used drugs, which was heroin, cocaine and smoked marijuana.

DeBrest testified he has known Corbin to snort drugs.

The Bass player testified he has seen Corbin inject drugs in his arm in New York but "I walked into his room and happened to get there in time to see his fix.

"I stripped him, put him in a cold shower and injected him with salt and walked him.

"The needle I used for the injection was in his room."

When asked how did he know Corbin had taken narcotics his answer was, "Because I had used narcotics myself."

Corbin's mother Mrs. Elizabeth Corbin, testified on Friday and broke down several times as she told the Assistant District Attorney:

When her son told her that Harold was dead she thought it was an April Fool's joke and told her son not to joke with her.

Her husband also told her son not to joke.

Mrs. Corbin testified her son replied he wished it was an April Fools joke but Harold was dead.

Mrs. Corbin testified: Harold's wife had told her that a doctor did not come to the Marsh apartment.

When Mrs. Corbin found out a doctor did attend her son she questioned Bette as to what was in the needle because Harold was allergic to penicillin.

She also testified she questioned Bette before her marriage to Harold when Bette told her that she was pregnant as to whether it was his child.

Mrs. Corbin told the assistant district attorney after the funeral it was like a cabaret party at Bette's home.

When the babysitter testified, the district attorney had questioned her as to whether Bette Corbin w a dancing after the funeral.

She denied his charges.

The inquest will resume Thursday.

—AME church

when we pressed him about the contract."

Earlier, he told this newspaper that while he favored relocating the church because of lack of sufficient space for growing activities, the matter was entirely in the hands of the membership, the Quarterly Conference and Presiding Bishop Frank Madison Reid.

The opposition said the whole proposal was "cloudy" and lacked general understanding among the members as to the details of contract, if any, the cost of building and relocating.

ON THE QUESTION of the sale itself, Lewis Dobey, a lawyer and a member of the church, put the problem this way:

"I was opposed to it. Unless you put something down in a tender (contract), you have no offer."

Like others, he said no such legal contract was shown at the meeting.

"It came out that a million dollars cash was offered with the understanding that the agents for the site would get a $50,000 commission," Mr. Dobey said.

"We don't need a real estate broker since the buyer would be dealing directly with the church."

ANOTHER member, who asked that her name not be used, said of the pastor on the heated question of a legal contract:

"He pulled out of his pocket a contract and a check, but he didn't let us know how much."

Mrs. Rachael Valentine, a leader of the opposition, said, "The pastor clearly showed his hand that he was selling the church.

"He gave two or three different prices last night. We wouldn't vote on the resolutions."

BOTH THOSE for and against the proposal said they expected the meeting to be solely a matter of voting "yes" or "no" on the question, without fanfare over means by which the question would be settled.

The vote climaxed a dispute that erupted into a public fuss last March when the pastor conducted a straw poll on the question of sale and relocation of the church whose history dates back 125 years.

Members were asked, "If you were offered from $800,000 to $1,000,000 would you vote to sell and relocate this church?"

Results showed that 147 voted "yes" and 103 said "no."

A postman who said he favored sale of the church departed before his fellow members voted. So did others.

He drove two elderly women home. They said they had their fill of the meeting.

Before leaving, the postman told reporters, "Some of the members are angry. They are mad at the pastor, but I don't think they should be.

"Some feel that he will get something out of the sale. They shouldn't hold that against him if we the members get our price and sell for what we think the property is worth."

HE ECHOED the opinions of others favoring relocation of the historic church on grounds that they are unable to expand to meet change and to serve as a community church with more youth and adult activities.

The opposition said, however, that the Rev. Mr. Robinson had turned down a proposal to redesign the edifice to acquire classroom space on the present site.

Members whose forepar-ents founded Metropolitan decried the notion of relocating. "This is the last property owned by colored people within the vicinity of the White House," they said.

But for many, sentiment and feelings wore thin as the night moved on. It was estimated that well over 400 members were present in the main auditorium when the meeting opened.

The vote showed that far less than that number remained for the showdown.

"THOSE RESOLUTIONS have given me a headache," a woman complained to a companion as they left the meeting.

A red - headed matron told a friend in taking leave, "if that's part of civilization in there, Lord deliver me. I'm on my way to the Ghana Embassy."

An observer said, "No doubt the Baptists will be glad to hear about this since there are elements of the public who seem to think that only Baptists have church rights."

"THE COMMISSION proposes a plan of organization of higher education in Maryland modeled almost exactly on the plan now in operation in California. This may or may not be a good plan for California.

"In light of the great differences between the two states in size, in population, in number of students, and in historical background, we do not believe it to be a good plan for Maryland.

"It is significant that only a few of the states have adopted the California plan and that a majority of the nation's boards of higher education are charged with the control of a single institution.

"BE IT RESOLVED, THEREFORE, That the Governor, the Legislative Council and the General Assembly and the citizens of Maryland be urged to provide for the continuance of a separate and independent Board of Trustees for Morgan State College.

CHARLES CROMWELL, 69, 727 E. Preston St., a former umpire for the Ellie Giants and the Baltimore Black Sox. — "He was not given a fair chance. They gave Nicholas plenty of chances. I feel that Earl Robinson should be given some consideration."

LEON LOVESS, 17, 1328 Mosher St. — "The man can play. He is pretty nice. They had no business selling him."

THE REV. JAMES H. WOOTEN, 40 pastor of Milton Avenue Methodist Church —"The consensus is that sentiment is against the Orioles for selling Robinson. The Orioles is the only team without a colored player in the major leagues. I think that his color had something to do with it, but the Orioles claim that it was his injuries.

"I don't think that his injuries were that serious to relegate him to the minor leagues. Since a large number of the attendance is colored, you would think that they would keep him."

HENRY TAYLOR, 43, 415 Tompkins Court, tractor driver — "They should not have sold him."

WARDELL ROCHESTER, 32, 1043 N. Rosedale, tractor - trailer driver — I didn't watch them anyway. They never played Robinson. He was always sitting on the bench. Maryland is always using some gimmick to get around integration."

CLIFFORD WARD, 32, 128 S. Moreley St., food service worker — "I don't think that they should have sold him but they can get him back in 30 days. They should have more than one colored player on the team. Then they would have better attendance."

JOHN N. HILL, 58, 5014 Winchester, welder — "I watch television and I am glad that he is gone."

CLEVELAND IGRAM, 49, 2008 Ridgewood — "I don't think that they should have gotten rid of him. They didn't give him a fair chance because he is colored."

JAMES LANGLEY, 42, 1752 E. Preston St., steel worker — "They should not have sold him because of our attendance. I know that it will drop off because the Orioles will be the only team in the majors with no colored players."

Appeals Court to study Senate reapportionment

Maryland's Court of Appeals has set 10 a.m. July 23, a period when normally it would be in summer recess, to hear arguments on the need for reapportionment of the State Senate.

The Court has been asked for speedy opinion onJudge O. Bowie Duckett's (Anne Arundel Circuit Court) recent ruling that allocation of seats in the Senate without regard to population does not violate the Federal Constitution.

Judge Duckett's ruling has been petitioned to the higher court by the Maryland Committee for Fair Representation.

This committee wants this question resolved in time for the November general election.

IN AN earlier case brought before the Anne Arundel Circuit Court, Judge Duckett held the allocation of seats in the State's House of Delegates on a population basis properly guaranteed equal protection by laws as held in the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

As a result, the General Assembly in special session some weeks ago added 19 new seats to its House of Delegates.

The heavily populated subdivision which got these additional House seats are:

Third District, Baltimore — 2; Fifth District, Baltimore — 2; Baltimore County — 7; Montgomery — 4; Prince Georges — 4; Anne Arundel — 1.

These additional House members for these sub - divisions will become effective with the new General Assembly which convenes in January.

Each of the State's 29 political sub-divisions is now alloted one Senate seat, regardless of population.

Worker cited on retirement

Clarence Johnson of 1124 N. Gay St., who retired after 27 years of service, was honored at a testimonial dinner held by employees of Eastern Products Corp.

The dinner was held in the firm's cafeteria and a number of gifts from employees and the company were presented to him.

Testimonial speeches were made by the Rev. L. M. Williams of the Zion Baptist Church, A. F. Waltzing-er, vice - president of Eastern Products Corp. and Charles H. Rosenbaum, president of Eastern Products.

Automatic boilers at Gilmor Homes protested

"Those boilers are between 18 and 19 years old. They shouldn't be allowed to operate under automatic controls.

"It would be like sitting on top of a bomb for people going to that community hall, if automatic controls are installed on those old boilers."

An engineer in the system voiced this protest Tuesday to the Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency's plans to convert the boilers at the Gilmor Homes Project to automatic operation.

The engineer pointed out that the oil-fired boilers are under the project's community hall, and the planned conversion to automatic operation would leave them unattended.

The complaint was also made that this conversion would put at least three operating engineers at this project out of work.

HARRY B. WEISS, BURHA's director, housing management, gave the AFRO another version.

"No new people are going into this field," Mr. Weiss stated. "We have a great deal of trouble recruiting people for these jobs. We have men 64 to 66 years old now, waiting to retire.

"Certain types of boiler plants under 15 pounds pressure can be converted to automatic controls, under State law, Gilmor's plant is one of these."

Mr. Weiss discounted the contention that automatic controls would endanger persons using the project's community hall.

"We wouldn't take any risks, if there were any involved," he said.

He said further that none of the displaced boiler operators would be fired, because there are jobs available for them in other projects under BURHA's operation.

This automatic operation might spread to one or two other projects, he stated, as boiler operators reached retirement age, but was not planned for all of the projects.

Under automatic controls, Mr. Weiss said the project would be furnished hot water at all times, something now lacking.

PRESIDENT KENNEDY praised Robert B. Troutman of Atlanta for his "plans for progress" program on equal employment opportunity, but at the same time emphasized that he was opposed to a "go slow" policy.

Happy fellow had early 4th

The happiest man in Northwestern Municipal Court July 4th was Alexander Corbert, 44, 3900 block Fairview Ave.

The fact that he was on trial didn't appear to bother him one bit. Charged with being drunk on the street, Corbert couldn't testify for laughing.

"I only had a block to go before I was picked up," he told Judge Mary Arabian, amidst bursts of laughter.

Judge Arabian, hard put to suppress laughter, asked him why does he drink more than he can handle.

Corbert laughed. "I guess it backfired on me."

CORBERT, a tractor trailer driver, was somewhat puzzled at being picked up in Baltimore, however.

"I can't understand it," he said, "I drink everywhere I go, but I never get caught in dry states. It always happens in wet states."

After he promised to be more select in choosing placed to get drunk, Corbert was fined $10 and cost.

When Judge Arabian showed amazement at his being arrested for drunkenness, Corbert broke up with laughter.

"Those were just the times they caught me, your honor," he said as he walked back to the bar "to make a telephone call" to get money for the fine.

Corbert's case was one of those on the light load at Northwestern on the Fourth, where Judge Arabian heard a total of fifty.

Beats off attack of purse snatcher

Mrs. Mildred Powell, 34, 200 block Mason Ct., reported to police Tuesday night that an unidentified man attempted to snatch her purse in the unit block of N. Gilmor St.

She said she held on to the purse and during the struggle the man cut her on the hand with some unknown object.

Mrs. Powell was treated at Franklin Square Hospital where six stitches were required to close the wound.

$1 million given to Johns Hopkins

The Johns Hopkins University has announced the receipt of $1,000,000 from the Irne Heinz Given and John LaPorte Given Foundation, Inc., of NYC for purposes of medical research and teaching.

A total of $750,000 of the gift will be used to endow the Given Foundation Chair in Pediatrics and the remainder will be used to establish a Fund for Medical Advancement in the name of the donor.

10 agencies share $156,899

The Commerce and Industry Combined Health Appeal have distributed $156,889.00 to their agency - members.

This is the third disbursement made of funds raised in their 1962 campaign, making a total of $267,089.00 distributed to date.

The CICHA agency - members receiving funds were American Cancer Society, Arthritis and Rheumatism, Crippled Children, Mental Health, Mentally Retarded Children, Muscular Dystrophy, Multiple Sclerosis, Kidney Disease, Cerebral Palsy, and Cystic Fibrosis.
