School stays open to give recreation

In an area of the city where juvenile delinquency is high, the Henry Winter Davis Elementary School No. 125, Dolphin and Pennsylvania Ave., will stay open all summer with a recreation program as a counter-measure to idle minds and hands that might go astray.

Applied by teachers and parents, activities at Sharp Street Memorial Church, Dolphin and Etting Sts., musical and physical education programs, an out-of-school reading plan, and a recreation leader provided by the Recreation Department.

The program began June 18, runs until Aug. 31, five days a week, from 10 - 4 p.m.

Fifty-four other schoolyards are offering similar programs during the summer.

In the case of the No. 125, the school had hoped to obtain the old Northwestern police station, next door, and to convert it into a rec center.

However school officials and the recreation department declared the building unsafe, and the plan was abandoned.

It was also turned down by school officials as an addition to school No. 125, as an auditorium and gymnasium, for the same reason.

Present plans now call for the building to be razed to extend the playground area of No. 125.

• • •

IN THE past years, Mrs. Maude Williams, principal of No. 125, said landlords and local merchants have become aware of the importance of curbing juvenile delinquency.

Their awareness has paid off in donations to aid the school recreation program, she said.

The landlords in the area have painted and improved their homes as part of the overall project and have even supplied a wire fence and a load of sand for a "tot lot" for the small children.

During the school year Mrs. Williams' program to deal with the so-called culturally deprived youngsters in the area, has paid off with the founding of a Cub Pack and Boy Scout troop at the school.

The youngsters clean-up campaign around the school neighborhood, was cited by the Citizens Planning and Housing Association.

The clean up project continues through the summer. Thus the garments, merchants and the school have helped to provide recreation in areas where it is sorely needed.

SUMMERTIME, AND THE living is pleasant for these youngsters, who find supervised recreation waiting for them in the playground of School No. 125, Dolphin and Pennsylvania Ave. Playgrounds in schools throughout the city, are being so utilized to provide recreation for youngsters. Shown here are: Lucille Willis, 9; Rebecca Taylor, 9; Sarah Ann Parker, 11; Jacqueline Jones, 10; Ronny Parker, 9; and Sylvia Jones, 9. The leader is Miss Audrey Pollard.

Each worker will have an identification card to show householders. They will inquire as to the type of room offered and the price expected.

Dr. Pullen says teachers receive same certificates

Dr. Thomas G. Pullen, state superintendent of schools, has declared that both colored and white teachers now receive identical teaching certificates.

His statement was made in response to a charge by a county teacher that her teaching certificate bears the notation that she is to teach only in colored schools.

The teacher making the statement did so at a recent civil rights meeting here in Baltimore called by the Governor's Commission on Inter-racial Problems and Relations.

• • •

IT WAS at this meeting that allegations were also made that various of the counties were refusing to hire colored teachers, even though they suffered severe teacher shortages.

Addressing himself to the question of the teaching certificates alone, Dr. Pullen said that all teachers in the state had been issued the same type of certificate since July 1955.

His answer was contained in communications to Miss S. Beatrice Henson, president of the Prince George's County Educational Association, and Miss Janice Morehead of Aberdeen, Md.

"Prior to July 1955, in accordance with law and custom," said Dr. Pullen, "certificates were issued to teachers to teach in white or colored schools."

Continuing, he said if certificates to teach in colored schools are still held, "it is probably due to the fact that at the time of renewal...we failed to replace the certificate according to custom."

Dr. Pullen said further that from July, 1955, any certificate, no matter what notation it covered, would have been valid in any school, regardless of the race of the pupils.

RECENTLY AWARDED A John Hay Whitney Opportunity Fellowship for further study was Miss Marcia Gaither, a soprano and a former Baltimorean, now residing in New York City.

SWANKIEST PARTY of the nonce was that at the David Driver's Cold Spring Lane place, Friday night, when Margaret (Mrs. D.) and Elsie (Mrs. David) Scott jointly hosted the Northwest Child Study Club.

And a nifty duo of hostesses they were: Margaret in a pretty frock with black lace top and white peau de soie skirt; and Elsie in a delicious white and blue concoction with frilly top and full skirt.

The upper patio of the Drivers' lush place took on an Oriental air, with lanterns strung to provide lighting. Here the caterers spread a sumptuous supper on a lace draped table.

Members and guests danced in the equally swank club room off the lower patio . . . with the aid of Harold Jennifer and Jimmy Laforest (cute as a button in a floral sheath with string straps) giving lessons in new twists to the twist, the Continental, and the galaxy of other new steps.

This according to directions of the hostesses, who had glitter posters (Let's Do The Twist, etc.) dotting the club room.

Folks had such a time that three ayem saw them still hesitant to leave.

Actually, the party was the mode of entre for the new president of the Child Study Group, Mrs. Driver. Outgoing president, Mary Sprow, was gifted by the group, and a gift also went to Flozella Clarke, who will soon be headed for Europe.

Group members and their husbands there were:

Robert Payne, Charles Cephas, David Scott, Otis Sprow, Powell Sheffey, Roland Williams, Randolph Myers, Howard Collins, Harold Clark, Glendi Johns, George Parrish; Drs. and Mesdames Samuel Myers, Albert Laforest, Charles Davidson, Daniel Skinner, and Mrs. Vera Flint.

Their guests included:

Messrs. and Mesdames Milton Branson, James Gilliam, Deaver Smith, Paul Scott, Charles Harper, Lloyd Davis, Walter Brown, Armstead Jenkins, Robert Diggs, Alfred Woolridge, Raymond Pinderhughes, Messrs. and Mesdames Russell Frisby, Lester Wallace, George Lottier; Mrs. Faye Costa, Drs. and Mesdames Edward McDaniels, Percival Smith, Lonnie Green and William Garner.

MRS. JAMES (YVETTE) MURPHY called and said "Come on over to dinner . . . and don't dress for we are going to eat out in the yard . . . and so I went . . . in slacks!

And found guests in the prettiest summer fashions (that is, all but Beth Johnson, who was in a chic creamy biege sheer wool). It sort of set me back . . . but not for long . . . I was too busy dealing with those chicken halves, them there spicy ribs, corn that tasted just off the stalk, baked beans and that salad that no one tosses so well as Y.

It was a surprise party (I learned after arriving) for her mother, Mrs. Rose Davidson who was never more
