Mayor's redistricting plan rejected off Council floor

By MAX JOHNSON

"The differences are now very small. It's a matter of a precinct here and there.

"We are still going to try to work with the committee for an agreement before the midnight deadline Monday."

Philip H. Goodman, City Council president, offered these comments Wednesday evening, after the Council had again failed to agree on a more equitable realignment of the city's six councilmanic districts.

The Council, called into special session to act on a redistricting proposal, approved instead a resolution to establish a permanent nine-member commission on redistricting.

A redistricting plan, drawn Tuesday evening by Mayor J. Harold Grady and a Council committee headed by George W. Arthur (3rd D.), was not even brought before the Council formally.

Actually, no such plan has reached the Council floor.

* * *

WHILE CLERKS in the Mayor's office and the Department of Legislature Record were busy mimeographing copies of the plan for presentation to the councilmen, proponents suddenly discovered they had no where near enough votes for passage.

William D. Schaefer, (5th D.), Council president, took a hasty poll during a recess period to determine the possible votes.

Mr. Schaefer's poll of 13 of the 17 councilmen present showed eight to five against the plan.

Although the plan had yet to be formally presented, the councilmen were advised of it beforehand.

Briefly, the Mayor and the Council committee agreed on a modified version of the redistricting proposal presented some weeks ago by Dr. Harry Bard, president, Baltimore Junior College, and known as the Bard Plan.

* * *

THE FIRST District, now with 40,000 registered voters, would take part of the Third and have 52,000 voters. The Second, with 30,000 voters, would also take part of the Third and have 51,000 voters.

The Third District would retain its four councilmen, but have its 127,000 voters cut to 97,000.

The Fourth District, with roughly 49,000 voters, would pick up the Fifth District's Precints 4-B, 17 to 42 inclusive of the 15th Ward; Precints 1 to 6 inclusive and 16 to 25 inclusive of the 16th Ward, and have 65,000 voters.

The Fifth would retain its four councilmen, but have its 105,000 voters cut to 83,000.

The Sixth District, with 48,000 voters, would expand by part of the Fifth and have 53,000 voters.

* * *

THE IDEA was to have each councilman represent as near as possible 20,000 voters.

Each district, with the exception of the Third and the Fifth, would have three councilmen.

The tenor of the floor comments by councilmen arguing against this plan came in these expressions by Maurice J. Soyther (4th D.):

"The Mayor comes in last night and in the period of a few hours he sets up a plan which is asinine and a joke.

"He removes from the Third District what they don't want. He takes from the Fifth District what they don't want.

"Now he's trying to push such a plan through this Council."

* * *

ALTHOUGH THE Council passed the resolution to establish a redistricting commission, Mr. Goodman said he would not sign it until the last minute, in hopes that some plan on redistricting may be approved before the Monday deadline.

Monday midnight is the deadline for certification by the Board of Supervisors of Elections for placing a redistricting plan on the Nov. 6 general election ballots.

If the commission proposal stands, the city will have to wait until 1967 for realignment of its councilmanic districts.

Meanwhile, Republican city officials are in the midst of gathering the required 10,000 signatures to petition a redistricting plan of their own to the November ballots.

This plan would increase the six districts to eight, by carving two new districts out of the Third and Fifth.

The First and Second would be enlarged at the expense of the Third District.

The Fourth and Sixth Districts would retain their present boundaries.

A State Legislature committee of city members appointed to realign the city's legislative districts has yet to take action.

Request mayor, council not to break up 4t h District

Mayor J. Harold Grady and the City Council were asked this week to see that there "is no gerrymandering" in the redistricting of the city.

The request came from 42 civic leaders who are members of the steering committee of the NAACP's Summer Non-Partisan Register and Vote campaign. A letter to Philip H. Goodman, president of the City Council, was read to the council during its Wednesday meeting.

"We ask you to use the full power of your office to see that there is no gerrymandering in the redistricting bill now before the City Council and that the Fourth District shall preserve its present character and integrity," the message read.

The Fourth District is the only predominantly colored councilmanic district in the city.

* * *

THE GROUP was addressed by John M. Brooks, national NAACP voter registration director, who emphasized the importance of supporting the best redistricting plan proposed, regardless of its political origin.

* * *

"IT DOESN'T matter whether the Democrats or the Republicans come up with the best plan — what we want is the best plan for us," he said.

Mr. Brooks, who has worked extensively with voter registration in the southern states, compared the ease with which a Baltimore resident can register with the obstacles which face southern colored citizens.

"We were proud of Baltimore and the number of its colored citizens who are registered voters, but when I came here after leaving Louisiana and had the registrars shake my hand and tell me how glad they were to have colored people come in and register, I began to wonder," he stated.

He cited Providence, La., and Liberty County, Fla., as areas where sharecroppers risked their lives and livelihood in order to register. One man was run out of Liberty County when he refused to take his name off the registration books, Mr. Brooks said.

* * *

HE TOLD THE ministers to select the kind of person to head a voter registration committee that they would pick to carry on a similar action of the church, and to try to reach "the man in the street."

"When you ask your parishioner if he is a registered voter, he's more than likely to answer yes, whether he is or not. Most people want to be registered voters, but they don't know how easy it is, and are ashamed to ask somebody," he said.

Present at the meeting, presided by Dr. Carl Murphy, Steering Committee chairman, were:
