rites, including many of his former team - mates at Miller, the Rams, Colts and Steelers.

It was at Miller High that he put on his first football shoes, and his coach at Miller, Will Robinson, was there, telling about the tremendous strength of the 6-6 giant.

He said "Charles Bailey, Captain of the team in 1948, brought Gene to me and I immediately asked him if he could play. Yes, sir, he answered." He was terrific."

Don Qarker, a former basketball player at Northeastern High, told about the time he and Gene were arguing about a basketball game. "Gene hit me and I was out for more than an hour. He was a powerful big boy."

YET BIG DADDY, noted as pro - football's massive, ferocious — and yet gentle, fun loving — defensive tackle, was awe - stricken by his success on the football field.

Explaining his defensive play, Big Daddy would say, "I just pick up an armful of players and sort them out and throw them away until I get my hands on the one with the ball."

The services were conducted by the Rev. H. E. Owen, pastor of New Pilgrim Baptist Church. There was a solo by Mrs. Hula Hene Hurley, an old friend.

The pallbearers were old teammates: Sherman Plunkett, John Henry Johneon and John Sample, of the Steelers; Lenny Moore and Jim Parker, of the Baltimore Colts, and Richard Night Train Lane, Detroit Lions.

Honorary Pall - bearers were Don Kellett and Carroll Rosenbloom of Baltimore; Arthur Rooney and Dan Rooney, Ed Kiely and Coach Buddy Parker, Steelers. Buddy Young was also there.

1300 W. North Ave. — "I've been watching both—the flight and Birmingham. This This Alabama thing I've been much more concerned about.

"I am concerned about the state highway patrol on duty with only the deputy sheriffs on duty throughout the state. I am concerned also that there has been no overt expression from physicians nationally in support of the sit-downers. It takes more than money. I read where a ministers' group has spoken, but physicians, as leaders in the community should express concern too."

Mrs. Lula Perry, 1500 blk. N. Fulton Ave.: "I hope he gets around the world and gets back again safely but I don't understand this space program completely.

"I do understand what is going on in Birmingham and think it is terrible the way they are treating colored people. The President was right to order troops there."

Mrs. Gertrude Watts, 3100 blk Gwynns Falls Pkwy., a Western Electric employee,

"I have been very busy with two small children and a job but I am aware of the Birmingham situation although I haven't taken time to watch Astronaut Cooper."

Miss Mildred Wells, 900 blk. Appleton St., 8th grader at Calverton Jr. High School: "I think President Kennedy should do something about it because it's terrible down there. We should be allowed to protest segregation.

"I'm not excited about Cooper's flight. It's wonderful though that someone should be able to explore outer space and bring back pictures of it for us and that he can live outside the earth's pull of gravity."

Mrs. Edna B. Haywood, retired school teacher, 2200 blk. Madison Ave."

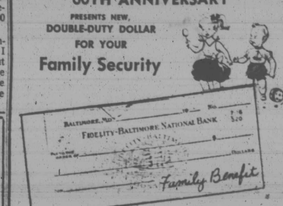

"I just don't see the connection between the two. I haven't given the astronaut concern but I have given the Birmingham situation quite a bit of attention. That is the critical situation."

Flurry of breakfast parties see AGNN'S guests into dawn

By Lula Jones Garrett

As if having one of the most elegant of the season's supper parties weren't an achievement, the AGGN's extended themselves, Friday night, and ended their annual flair in a flurry of equally elegant breakfast parties Saturday morn.

But first things first!

So, speaking of the party ... which was held in the Cherry Hill Hall; which imported Frankie Scott from Reading, Pa. to provide the dance music; and which had a batch of real charmers in the role of hostesses.

The latter included Helena Edmonds, Bertha Forte, Ruth Robinson, Pauline Blackwell, Alice Pinderhughes, Thelma Moore, Mary Smalley, Maxine Higginbotham, Millie Hall, Bernadine Harrison, Gwendolyn Seaborne, Hermione Weaver, Anne Johnson, Elise Clarke, Ruth Carter Brown and Theresa Brown.

Charmers? Right!

And then they created a suitable setting from which to preside: individual tables covered with clothes of royal blue, orange, yellow or white . . . centered them with with tulips and daffodils and ornamental candles; kept them filled with hot and cold hors d'euvres until time for coffee and pastries.

SOME GUESTS went home for quiet nightcap with Helena and Walter Edmonds . . . and thus the breakfasts ran the gamut from such cosy affairs as this one, to such elaborate ones like that, for instance, hosted by Maxine and Elson Higginbotham.

At the Higginbothams' breakfast were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gray, Dr. and Mrs. James Pair, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Haysbert, Mrs. Ann Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Walker, Leon Bell of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Royal Weaver, John Rich, Imagene Martin, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas.

At the same time Bernadine and Miles Harrison were entertaining the Francis (Skeeter) Olges of Philadelphia, Donald and Alma Parker, the Clement Nixons and Nicki Randolph.

At Mary and Harrison Smalleys were Harriet and Payne Taylor of Tobyhanna, Pa., Laura and Sidney Smith of Teaneck, N.Y., Dorothy and Reginald Matthews, Madelyn and Marshall Powell, George and Dorothy Williams.

Pauline and Samuel Blackwell were holding forth for the William Wests, the Edward Williamses, the Clarence Dysons, the J. C. Reaveses, the William McConnells, the Harry Galls, the Charles Hillens and Olive Caulk.

At the Barnett Rhettas were the Tom Browns, the Madison Garrisons, the James Gilliams, and the Nathaniel Johnsons of Montclair, N.J.

And Gwendolyn and Wilfred Seaborne, whose party guests were the Walter Dysons, the Isaiah Whites, the Wilbur Balentines, James Dinkinses; Robert Umphrey, the T. J. Woolridges and the Orris Walkers, were among the breakfast hosts.

MRS. SMALLEY did a fashion score in a white puffed silk A-line frock (an Oleg Cassini, no less) with which she wore white silk pumps, long white gloves and rhinestone earrings.

Mrs. Edmonds was perfectly lovely in stark white chiffon, a knee-length frock with molded draped bodice and floating skirt, with a stole that slipped over the head to form a brief bolero at front and shaped panel at back.

Selected by Mrs. Harrison was a two - piece black lace with gold trim, and with which she wore gold accessories; and Mrs. Olge wore a blue accordion pleated nylon frock with gold accessories.

Mrs. Seaborne floated about in a white embroidered frock; and the dress worn by her sister, Mrs. Higginbotham was of black organza embroidered throughout with red roses. Her matching shoes also carried the rose design.

Millie Hall's frock went straight - lined, of course, twas black, enhanced by a huge stole of shocking pink with shoes of the pink; and Bertha Forte wore a magnificent print, reembroidered all over with beaugle beads.

THE CLOTHES LINE: If we're to talk about clothes, let's drop back a night or so to the formal dance given by Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority . . .

And where chapter basileus Carolyn Robinson was as chic as could be in pale blue chiffon, a corsage of matching fresh flowers at her wrist; where Gwendolyn Tarter's sleek white frock, with a border of deep green sequin leaves ornamenting the neckline, which dipped deep at the back was eye-catching; where Queenie Simpson drew comments in a gold satin frock with sequin top; where Rosalie McGuire was elegant in blue lace; where everyone agreed that Mary West Jones should wear stark white more often . . . what with her shock of white hair. Her dress that evening featured a flaring above knee peplum.

Sylvia Fletcher was a picture in red chiffon, her dress having a high pleated bodice and a satin cummerbund.

The sorors, who were holding forth in the Cherry Hill Hall, had Sherman Lewis beating out the rhythm, and even providing the "stick" for the Limbo.

In the hosting roles were Sarah Banks, Reba Braileford, Emily Bryant, Gladys Brown, Pauline Butler, Emily Cralle, Eliza Diggs, Janice Evans, Hortense Franklin, Catherine Hagan.

Also, Geraldine Jenkins, Mary W. Jones, Julia Medley, Catherine Montgomery, Yvonne Morton, Dorothy Riley, Lillie Strothers and Mrs. Robinson.

They had a couple of attractive undergrads, Sonia Lynch and Patelle Green, assisting.
