Progress report from Jessups - integration is moving ahead

"The Maryland House of Correction is a completely integrated situation now. It is integrated throughout. Both inmates dining and housing facilities are mixed. Warden Steiner reports that there has been absolutely no trouble since these changes were made."

So commented State Senator Verda F. Welcome (D.-4th) after her latest tour of the state medium security prison at Jessups, Md. this week.

"Commissioner of Correction James Curran is working beautifully with us and has instructed his personnel at all the prisons to forget a man's color," Mrs. Welcome told the AFRO.

• • •

THUS A CAMPAIGN that began last fall, when student members of the Civic Interest Group protested segregation of prisoners in Maryland penal institutions and the AFRO published articles documenting the extent and degree of this segregation, nears its close.

Senator Welcome interceded in January when the student leaders and Commissioner Curran were deadlocked on the timetable for de-segregating the House of Correction and other institutions under attack for racial policies.

At that time, Department of Correction officials assured Mrs. Welcome that they would move to correct grievances raised both by inmates and interested civic organizations who were working in their behalf.

On this most recent tour, Mrs. Welcome, with an investigating party comprised of Robert B. Watts, David Glenn and Dr. Gilbert Ware, noted that incoming prisoners were now assigned whatever cell space was available.

"Those former all-colored cell blocks are being broken up," she said. "And House of Correction officials are assigning white and colored inmates as the space dictates."

THE FORMER segregated barber facilities have been also reported.

"It is true that there are still fewer colored inmate clerks in offices," she pointed out. "But as they can find them, the staff is giving them such work."

The senator also said she requested that House of Correction officials go out of their way to hire colored employees. "I told them to go all out and get as many colored who are on the Civil Service lists for jobs. We've been kept back so long we have to speed up now."

The law-maker will tour all state penal institutions throughout the summer to determine what progress toward desegregation other such facilities are making.

"It was truly a good feeling," she said, "To see what is being done to correct the past at Jessups."

Dr., Mrs. White host to Jamaican official

By Lula Jones Garrett

Dr. and Mrs. Eric White's cocktail party for the dashing and handsome Dr. C. C. Wedderburn of Jamaica, West Indies, spotlighted Sunday's heavy program.

The party was in the Whites' home a beautiful white - brick rambler that spreads over several lots at the near end of Bateman Avenue, and whose spacious rooms are as heaped with charm as are the well manicured grounds that slope to an entrancing and equally spacious garden at the rear.

Dr. Wedderburn is deputy director of medical services in Jamaica, and is in the States for eight weeks of study at Johns Hopkins. The Whites had a really cosmopolitan group to share the hospitality with him ... including a number of guests who came from Washington.

There were Dr. Boyo of the Nigerian Embassy, Dr. Boyd of Jamaica, Dr. and Mrs. Bertill Lloyd (he is of the State Department), Dr. and Mrs. Aubrey Matthews, Vin McFarlane, Minister, Jamaican Embassy, and Mrs. McFarland, Akunwale Alumide, second secretary, Embassy of Nigeria; H. F. Edwards, liaison officer of the Department of Labor, Jamaica, and Mrs. Edwards; Cecil Wint of the department of engineering, Howard University; B. Motta of Jamaica, Miss Ivy Coverley, who is a Jamaican, but currently attached to the Nigerian embassy; and Akunwaldi O'lumide of Kenya, a student in the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine.

Other guests included Mrs. William I. Gosnell, Drs. and Mesdames T. Anderson, C. R. Campbell, Albert LaForest, Richard Hunt, Martin Rodney, Samuel R. Owings, Jr.; Walter Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Cooper, Mrs. Mary N. Brooks, Mrs. Lula Patterson, Mrs. Llewellyn Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Perkins.

For receiving, Tommi (Mrs. White) were a perfectly beautiful hostess gown in white splashed with hugh habiscus and where and how she managed to have identical habiscus flowers for earrings is a fashion note to be discovered.
