AND NOW THERE ARE EIGHT—With triplets delivering on Monday, Mrs. Emma Young now has eight children. Daddy is Roosevelt Young.

Will Tawes upset Welfare bd. policy?

Maryland's chances of getting the best possible man to be found nationally as new director of the State Department of Public Welfare might have been damaged this week when Governor Tawes failed to reappoint Dr. Sanford Larkey to another term as welfare commissioner.

Dr Larkey, of the Johns Hopkins Hospital staff, was one of five welfare commissioners supporting a policy that the new welfare director be the object of a national search.

It has been previously reported in local newspapers that Governor Tawes favors a Marylnder for the post, one who leans more toward cost-cutting than toward social work.

One Baltimorean in particular has been pushed by forces close to the Tawes office for the director's job.

DR. LARKEY, one of nine welfare commissioners, was not re - named when his appointment expired last Saturday. His successor, Dr. George Ferguson, reportedly leans to the Governor's ideas on who should be state welfare director.

Before the departure of Dr. Larkey, the welfare commission was 5 to 4 in favor of picking the best candidate nationally. Now the balance is reversed. 5 commissioners supposedly are for a Marylander being pushed by the administration and a minority of 4 are inclined not to restrict their choices to Free Stater.

Dr. Larkey, in talking with the AFRO, was reluctant to attribute any political motive to his not being reappointed. He said "I don't know what's on the Governor's mind. I was not definitely against the man preferred but a small majority of the board felt it shouldn't be limited in its choice of a welfare director to Marylanders."

Dr. Larkey also said: "I think it would be a great mistake if they chose a Marylander as welfare director just because he was a Marylander. The board has done a very good job of canvassing nationally for the best man."

The list of candidates for the welfare director job has been closed. Examinations of applicants will be held sometime during June and the Welfare Board is expected to announce appointment of the qualifying candidate early in July.

P.R. men elect officers; ask JFK to act on bias

The National Association of Market Developers wound up their 10th annual convention Saturday with a resolution asking the President of the United States to direct U.S. businessmen to probe more deeply into the causes of colored unemployment with the aim of finding solutions.

The NAMD statement commended the President for calling the June 4th meeting of businessmen where he was expected to encourage voluntary desegregation of stores, theaters, hotels and restaurants.

IN OTHER convention business NAMD elected a new set of officers headed by James S. Avery, public relations representative for Humble Oil and Refining Company, New York, as president.

Cherry Hill has taken on an international flavor, for this summer, 13 students from Africa will be rooming and boarding in this neighborhood, in order to work and to find a "home away from home."

Most of the students are from Lincoln University. Five are from Kenya, five from Nigeria, 1 from the Cameroons, 1 from Israel, 1 from Somali, 1 from Uganda and 1 from Tanganyka.

They have been placed through a Christian movement called International Students, Inc, in cooperation with the Community Services Department of the Cherry Hill Presbyterian Church. This promises to be an adventure in international friendship.

If you are interested in having some students for Sunday dinner, or in taking them on sightseeing trips, please call us at EL. 5-8007. There are still five more students to be placed in the Cherry Hill area. A fair fee will be paid for room and board.

If you would care to share your home for the summer, please call us at the above number. Each year over 1,000 students from other countries are enrolled in the colleges, universities, hospitals and technical schools of metropolitan Baltimore. You may extend your hospitality to them by writing to Mr. Roy Agarwal, 330 E. 33rd St., Baltimore, 18, indicating your desire to participate.

FAMILIES participating in the Cherry Hill area are Mr. and Mrs. John Kirby, Mrs. Cornelius Johnson, Mrs. Dorothy Brown, Mrs. Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pegus and Mrs. Carter.

A big job was done by citizens in this community in finding housing for these young men. Mrs. Ida Crane, and Mr. Crane, as well as Mrs. Mildred Greene, worked diligently in finding suitable quarters for them. Our thanks to them.

DURING the Provident Hospital Improvement Drive, it was a pleasure to meet a personality in one of our schools who has received her cap and pin for having chalked up 2200 hours volunteer work in the Children's Ward of Provident Hospital.

Our heroine is Mrs. Beatrice Avery, teacher in charge of the STS program at School 139. Mrs. Viola Wright is the principal and Calvin Carrington, is the vice principal.

Mrs. Avery enthused over her work with the children in the hospital, even though she is with children five days a week. She still devotes time—her free time—to hospitalized children.

House set afire after argument

Paul Lowder, 35, 300 block N. Pine St., was ordered held for action of the grand jury in Western Municipal Court Tuesday on a charge of attempted arson.

Bail was set at $3,000. for Lowder who had threatened to burn down the house after an argument with Mrs. Anna Wilkerson, 47, and Miss Thelma Mae Davis, 29, all of whom reside at the Pine St., house.

According to Mrs. Wilkerson, she had ordered Lowder to leave the house during the argument, on Monday. That night, she said, she heard a crash and smelled smoke.

Mrs. Wilkerson called the fire department and the small blaze was quickly brought under control. Lowder was arrested and taken to the station for questioning after his threat had been reported.

Race Amity Day scheduled Sunday

The Bahai is of Baltimore will observe Race Amity Day on Sunday June 9.

Parren Mitchell, executive secretary, Maryland Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations, will address a public meeting at the Baha'i Center, 3301 Gwynn Oak Avenue at 12 noon, on the subject "Man, One Family."

"Today's racial tension is not an isolated phenomenon," said Dr. Eugene D. Byrd, chairman of the Baltimore Baha'i Assembly.

"It is one of the many facets of the spiritual sickness infecting humanity at this point in history. Until a moral revitalization occurs, we cannot expect a truly lasting solution to any of these conflicts.

"In promoting their own religious beliefs, therefore, the Baha'is seek to share with others their conviction that cooperation has become the organic principle of human evolution, and that it is both the highest form of personal morality and the most potent law of modern civilization."

stand in the door with him at the university.

He gets on the plane and I breathe a sigh of relief, but then he comes running off of it, swearing up a blue streak.

"What's the matter, Senator?"

"What's the matter," he yells, "I got on that plane and you know who's driving it . . . a colored boy.

"So what's wrong with that?"

"It's bad enough having a colored pilot, but did you have to get me one that's a former member of the Mau Mau?"

The last time I saw the senator he was getting back into the car telling the driver to "take me where the white folks hang out."

That's when I left and came out here in the woods, where even if I don't have running water, I don't have Senator Mugglewump.

I plan to stay out here until things cool down, say in about six months.

Meanwhile, take my suggestion and keep the senator out of Africa.

Unless, of course, you want to start another war.
