School robber goes to prison

PHILADELPHIA
The 17-year-old youth convicted of robbing a school principal and a school teacher in different school buildings on two successive days last May has been given a 15-year prison term.

The sentence was imposed on Raymond Preston Reed of the 1100 block Hickory Street by Judge Samuel B. Witt Jr. who had asked for a background report on the youth following his Hustings Court trial last month.

THE FIRST classroom victim on Thursday afternoon, May 2 was Mrs. Eulalia Turner who was forced to give the goateed teenager $80 when he invaded the Baker School.

She testified that while Reed backed her up to her desk with menacing threats and took her money, five first - grade pupils sat coloring pictures, and a maid went about her cleaning duties, all unaware that a robbery was taking place.
