action.

When the police arrive at a crowded corner to disperse a crowd of blacks who are watching two men fight, or an accident, or anything, they want this crowd to break up, not because of what the crowd might do to itself (they could care less) but what the crowd might do to the white world outside their neighborhood.

This is never stated as a part of police policy but if you will think on it, it is perhaps the most important part of police policy.

A white police force looks at a crowd of blacks in terms of what that crowd might mean to other white people.

IN ANY black community, the police force is predominantly white for two reasons:

1. Because of historic prejudice against hiring colored officers.

2. Because the white people of a city are deathly afraid that colored cops would not try to stop their brothers if a racial issue sent them exploding out of the ghettoo.

And the police force in any ghetto is always out in full force for these reasons:

1. To protect the property and places of business of whites from colored hoodlums.

2. To prevent groups of colored people from assembling in the streets for any reason.

On point two, all of us should be keenly aware of the truly terrible dread whites have for blacks.

BEHIND big city police techniques is the underlying feeling that whenever five or more black men get together there is the possibility of a modern - style slave rebellion.

The police are in the ghetto to keep the ghetto in hand and to protect the whites who have created the ghetto from the ghetto's revenge.

This is, to me, the realing meaning of the Harlem riots. People know the police are there not to enforce or prevent any except the most obvious crimes but to contain and control the people of Harlem.

Harlem is an invention of the majority to contain and isolate a minority and the police function to see that the ghetto remains as it is.

What colored people do to each other is not the primary responsibility of the New York police department and the good citizens of Harlem know this and resent it with a rage not imagined in sleepier towns as ours.

'Cadillac' Republican crack criticized

By MARY STRATFORD

WASHINGTON

What is a "Cadillac Negro"?

Carl Shipley, local GOP chairman, coined the phrase at the national Republican Convention in San Francisco and returned to the District to find colored GOP leaders seething with resentment at the description.

A definition of terms was in order.

IN AN INTERVIEW Wednesday, Shipley turned Webster and explained what he meant by the assertion that "Cadillac Negroes" on the local committee who opposed Goldwater would be replaced with blue collar workers.

Shipley said the terminology was intended to convey the idea of status — "a person who is highly successful economically"

"I considered it complimentary."

He found instead that colored GOP members thought it was derogatory.

"Perhaps it is hard for a white person to see the whole perspective," Shipley said, "but I meant it in the same sense that we say someone is a member of the Chevy Chase set or the Ivy League set."

White people don't get offended at these descriptions of themselves, Shipley stated, adding the connotation is that these are persons envied in the community.

"It was an honest error and I'm sorry I used it."

PROSPECTIVE blue collar workers whom Shipley would like to see on the local committee are, according to his definition, "average colored people."

He believes there is a wide gulf between the middle class colored GOP leader on the committee and the average non-white resident and says this is because the middle class separates itself from those in lower economic groups.

After the election of Goldwater as GOP presidential nominee, several anti - Goldwaterites, including four colored persons, are known to have resigned, either as party officers or from their positions on the central committee.

TUESDAY, the GOP subexecutive committee tabled the resignations, disagreeing with Shipley who had advocated that any committee member unwilling to campaign for Goldwater, resign. The sub-committee accepted the resignation of one person, Edward Burling Jr., who is white.

Shipley said the sub-committee felt the colored members resigned because of personal and social pressures, most of the benig business or professional persons with colored clientele.

The GOP chairman, who has said he lacks the authority to purge the committee of anti-Goldwaterites as first reports indicates he might, "will encourage colored GOP leaders to remain on the committee "because he does not wish to preside over a lily-white party."

He also commented that this is also the wish of Senator Goldwater who he quoted as advising against a lily-white committee while at the same time, directing that all his opponents be purged.

Shipley has accepted the sub-committee's action on the resignations but expects that in time, the anti-Goldwaterites will "get adjusted."

Social Security

Not everybody who goes into his Social Security District Office to file his retirement claim is insured. More than 9 out of 10 people who work are insured.—

As a matter of fact, well over 90 million people in these United States are insured under Social Security. That still doesn't mean that everybody who gets to be 62 or 65 years old can get Social Security.

Why are some people not insured? Of course some peopl have never worked under Social Security. They can't be insured. Some people have worked very little, too little to be insured. They can't get Social Security benefits. But there are others who have worked quite a bit but still are not insured.

What about them?

THESE ARE the ones who have worked for people but never had their earnings under Social Security reported. They are the ones who told their employer that they rather not be under Social Security, they would never live that long anyway.

They are the ones who said they remembered their social security number, so they didn't have to carry a social security card, and they remembered it wrong.

Some employees don't report their employees under Social Security. Many housewives don't know to report their domestic employees.

Many very small businsses neglect to report their employees, or all their employees including short tune or part time workers.

Some employers are't too careful about using the right name or right social security number.

All in all, it pays a person to check on his earnings record and make sure all his record of work is straight. People do reach retirement age and have need of Social that yours will be ready when you are. Check on your account through your Social Security Office.
