South Baltimore Notes

By WALTER W. E. HILL Sr.

Sgt. Edward Barnes, former resident of South Baltimore, is home on leave and greeting friends. The two George Wallace E. Hill Jr. marines for appointment in Vietnam on Tuesday. Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hill upon their new arrival, a baby girl named Donna.

Meet your old friends from South Baltimore at the Pride of Miami Pleasure Club's variety supper to be held on Sunday, Nov. 21 at the Pride of Baltimore Elks Home, 620 Dolphin St. Bertie Brooks is president.

The meeting of the NAACP membership drive held at the First Baptist Church, Cherry Hill on Monday, was one of success in spite of the attendance. Representation from the Mt. Winans Area seemed to dominate the meeting.

Dr. Lilli M. Jackson pointed out that much has been done by the faithful few. The Rev. Stewart Turner after a solo by Mrs. Barbara Beads, accompanied by Mrs. Shirley Carter, made a wonderful speech, as did Mrs. Sarah Beedy, president of the Cherry Hill Coordinating Council, and the Rev. Roland Johnson. Shepard Burges presided and after the finance report, the meeting was adjourned. They realized $300.

Star of Bethlehem AME Church will observe its annual Men's Day this coming Sunday. The public is welcome.

A choir festival will be held on Sunday, Nov. 28 at 3 p.m. sponsored by the Mt. Winans Civic Interest Group to be held in the auditorium of the Bethany Baptist Church, Mt. Winans. Warren Brown is chairman.

366 Infantry holds reunion

The fifth annual reunion of the 366 Infantry Regiment took place in Philadelphia on Nov. 7.

Philadelphia City Solicitor Mathew W. Bullock was keynote speaker. A banquet was held later at the Open Hearth Restaurant where commander of the regiment during the war, Col. Howard D. Quest (ret.) was presented with an oil painting of himself.

Travelling by chartered bus, Baltimoreans attending included: Mr. and Mrs. James Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Bouldin, Mr. and Mrs. Casper Pigott, Mr. and Mrs. George Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard C. Bias, Mr. and Mrs. George Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles White, Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Rhodes, Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Butler, Maurice Morris, Miss Crawford, Charles Evans, Leroy Jones and William Lewis.

James L. Robinson of Philadelphia and Thurman Rhodes of Baltimore also took part in the ceremonies.

Who are the Action-People? Well, according to a nationwide survey—conducted by Audits & Surveys Company, Inc., of New York—people in Maryland and throughout the country in a single year turn more than three billion times to their Yellow Pages for help. They're the Action-People. They use their Yellow Pages to get things done fast.

MORAL: Don't just dash off in all directions; simply do what the Maryland Action-People do... let your fingers do the walking through the Yellow Pages.

Massive money increase needed for city schools

To provide equal opportunity for all school children, it is going to take a massive increase in money, special services and public support, according to the man who is charged with much of the responsibility for enhancing opportunities in the city schools.

Dr. Robert C. Lloyd, director of special studies and programs for the Department of Education, put forth this view Wednesday in a talk for the noon lecture series at Pratt Library.

One of the main steps in providing opportunities, he said, must be the easy accessibility of health services.

Dr. Lloyd cited the fact that at least 10 per cent of school children have sight or rearing defects and noted that "if these are not corrected, the children will never be able to progress properly."

• • •

AS A RESULT, he said, health services are being built into most of the government-sponsored special programs in Baltimore.

"All children need and should get regular physical checkups," he stated. "All should be able to obtain needed help and the help should be there."

The designer of most of the new programs which will be financed by Federal and anti - poverty funds, Dr. Lloyd stressed Superintendent Laurence G. Paquin's concept of the community school which will be the focal point of a neighborhood for "health, welfare, legal aid and recreation."

He said that inequality in opportunity has come about because "society has never given the schools the money to do the job that educators want to do."

The result is poverty because "people have not had from birth a fair chance to realize themselves."

• • •

TO REMEDY the existing situation, will take a massive amount of money, Dr. Lloyd said, but there is starting to be an awareness of the problem and Federal Funds are helping to make a start toward solutions.

Next year, he observed, Federal funds may account for 10 per cent of the local school budget. A year ago, the figure was less than one percent.

This summer 15,000 children were enrolled in summer programs. Next summer Dr. Lloyd predicted the number would jump to 100,000.

Nearly $7 million is available to Baltimore through the Federal Secondary and Elementary Education Act, he reported.

As former staff coordinator for the Citizens School Advisory Committee, Dr. Lloyd is now mainly responsible for putting some of the committee's recommendation into action through the drawing up of plans and programs for the influx of Federal money.

Among those programs contemplated, he said, are early admissions programs, summer programs ("when we have a great deal of space available), educational TV health services, evening schools and adult education.

Needs for the school systems in general, he listed as: qualified staffs, smaller classes, better training for teachers, betterment of instructional materials and research and planning ("which education lacks").

• • •

IN ORDER to remedy "munity," he said, "Commitment" translates as "money."

Additional causes of inequality in schools, Dr. Lloyd said, were prejudices in employment and housing, and a lack of mobility—freedom to move and live where you choose.

He stated that each youngster "should have the opportunity to develop to his fullest extent" and that "some need more than others. None are getting enough.

"To provide opportunity you have to have the services equally accessible to all who want to use them. It is important to get the services to the people, but also to get the people to the services."

Blue Cross outlines nursing homes policy

Local Blue Cross officials released this week a list of skilled nursing homes which are covered by their insurance plan and so have to accept patients of all races or lose the benefits of such insurance.

According to Thomas H. Sherlock, assistant director of Blue Cross approximately 4,000 Marylanders have the kind of policies which could qualify them for skilled nursing home care should the need arise.

"We have had no complaints about any of the nursing homes which we cover," Mr. Sherlock said Tuesday.

Should a bias complaint reach his office, he promised quick action on the matter.

A letter to the AFRO from Martin D. Jenkins, president of Morgan State College and a member of the Public Board of Trustees of Blue Cross, advises "any Blue Cross subscriber who experiences such discrimination to immediately notify the Maryland Hospital Service which, upon verification, will exclude the nursing home concerned from further participation in the Blue Cross program."

The following nursing homes are covered by the Maryland Hospital Service (Blue Cross):

House-in-the-Pines, Bel Air; House-in-the-Pines, Belvadere; House-in-the-Pines, Catonsville; St. Joseph's Nursing Home, Catonsville; Shady Nook Home, Inc., Catonsville; Milford Manor Nursing Home, Pikesville.

Dulany Towson Nursing and Convalescent Home, Towson; House-in-the-Pines, Easton; Vindobona Nursing Home, Braddock Heights; Avalon Manor, Inc., Hagerstown; Kensington Gardens Sanatarium, Kensington; Magnolia Garden Nursing Home Lanham and Resmore Sanatarium and Hospital, Bethesda.

Small hotels up maids' pay

All the smaller hotels now have met the $1-an-hour requirement for maids, the AFRO learned this week from Joseph Bush, director of the Minimum Wage Commission.

These include the Mt. Royal, the Congress, the New Howard and the Albion and involves approximately 65 people, some of whom had been making less than 70 cents an hour.

The question now is when the major hotels will fall into line and Mr. Bush said he hoped increases would be reflected in paychecks of employees this weekend.

Letters notifying all hospitals of the clarification between the city and state laws that mean the $1 minimum must be met, were sent out Nov. 12.

No formal reply had been received at midweek by the Sheraton Inn the Sheraton Belvedere, the Lord Baltimore or the Emerson.

Mr. Bush said his commission hopes the matter will not have to be taken to court and is operating on the theory that the wage increases will be taken care of soon.

2-year term for officer assault

An 18-year-old white youth was convicted on two charges of assaulting a colored patrolman and on a related misdemeanor charge Wednesday by Judge Shirley Jones, sitting in criminal court.

After two days of trial, Donald E. Wells, 18, of the 2400 block Wilkins Ave. who is also known under the names of Wills and Willis, was given two concurrent two-year sentences in the Maryland Correctional Institute for having assaulted officer Thomas Alston from the Southwestern District. He was also given a concurrent sixty - day term for the disorderly conduct which led up to the assault on the patrolman.

The Sept. 30 incident began before the eyes of Officer Alston when at 9:15 Wells threw a milk shake on the back of Miss Lynn Barth, a female acquaintance of his.

When the policeman approached Wells, the latter became abusive and began using profane language. He also struck the officer twice and continued to fight him while a crowd estimated at 30 to 50 gathered.

It took 15 police cars to disperse the crowd and to subdue Wells, the officer testified.

After the sentencing Wednesday, Miss Barth, who had been sitting in the courtroom, began to cry and scream and had to be carried out by four policemen.

Assistant State's attorney Donald Needle prosecuted the case.

Ghosts on petition

(Because of the questions being raised about the validity of names on the petition favoring a liquor license in Cherry Hill the AFRO plans to publish all the names next week so any others who feel they have been misrepresented may be heard.

How valid are the names on the petition in favor of a liquor outlet in Cherry Hill? The question became important this week after a random sampling of the names on the list indicated many were there only through apparent misunderstanding or did not belong there at all.

Interviews with a number of the signers by the AFRO turned up cases of people who say they thought they had signed the petition against the package goods store, people who said they had signed nothing, underage signers and people with addressed were no homes can be found.

• • •

THE VALIDITY of the names becomes important because, partly on the basis of this petition, Supreme Bench Judge James K. Cullen has ruled to allow the establishment of a package goods store in the Cherry Hill Shopping Center over the bitter protests of most of the community's citizens, all the civic groups and all the churches.

His decision reversed the Board of Liquor License Commissioners which had refused to grant a license to Mrs. Leah Molofsky for 632 Cherry Hill Rd.

At a hearing before the board protesting the liquor outlet in the area, representatives of schools, churches and merchants and a petition signed by 3,500 residents

Colt star, teacher set date

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

Alvin Haymond, the Colts No. 30 star halfback and Jo Ann Margaret Winchester, a pretty Baltimore school teacher will be married here the day after Christmas, the AFRO learned this week.

The ceremonies are scheduled for 3 p.m. at the Heritage United Church of Christ, 3106 Liberty Heights Ave. on Dec. 26 with the pastor, the Rev. Wendell H. Phillips, officiating.

Friday morning Miss Winchester said Neal Petties, the Colts' reserve end will be bestman and Mrs. Phyllis Carrington will stand with the bride-to-be as matron of honor.

Miss Winchester, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Winchester Sr., 2536 Arunah Ave. will be given in marriage by her father.

Haymond is rated most prolific punt-runner in the National Football League. His bride-to-be has been a junior high girls teacher at Cherry Hill Junior High School since Jan. 31, 1964.

Miss Winchester revealed she expects to journey to Louisiana when the football star enrolls for study at Southern University after their marriage. Haymond will complete work on a degree in physical education, she stated.

ARRESTED, RELEASED — Three sales representatives for a national organization were arrested in a Baltimore tavern - restaurant Tuesday following an alleged refusal to serve one of the crew. Charges of disturbing the peace were dismissed by Judge A. Jerome Diener in Southwestern Municipal Court. Leaving the court are Misses Barbara Johnson, Nicki Sapounakis and Mary Michelle Myers.

No warrant sought by policemen

Following an incident involving claims of racial discrimination, three young patrons of a Washington Blvd. tavern-restaurant were jailed for three hours Tuesday before being freed of peace disturbance charges by Judge A. Jerome Diener in Southwestern Municipal court.

Misses Barbara Johnson, 25, 500 block N. Pulaski St.; Nicki Sapounakis, 22, 900 block S. Oldham St. and Michelle Myers, 19, 3500 block Chesterfield Ave., were charged with disturbing the peace in a public place.

The three young women are sales representatives for a national organization and were working the Washington Blvd.-Harmon St. area at the time of the incident.

• • •

ACCORDING TO court testimony, the two younger women entered the restaurant in the 500 block Washington Blvd., the Hilltop Bar and Restaurant, to have lunch.

Miss Myers received her order while Miss Sapounakis attempted to get a check cashed by the owner. One of the two, seeing Miss Johnson passing by, called her into the restaurant where she, too sat at the table.

Miss Johnson, supervisor of sales crew, told Judge Diener:

"A lady (Mrs. Patricia Mory, wife of the owner) came down to the dining room, saw me and screamed 'What do you want in here?'

"She called Nicki aside and talked to her. When Nicki came back to the table she told me they didn't serve colored in here."

• • •

THE THREE testified that Mrs. Mory refunded Miss Myers' money, even though she had almost finished eating.

March on nation's capital to protest war in Vietnam

By BAKER E. MORTEN
WASHINGTON

The huge yellow sign screams at you the moment the door opens, "Bring Home The Troops Now."

A 29 - year - old white secretary from New York City darts into the crowded, paper - cluttered apartment house room where four other anti-war demonstrators are working.

A colored man seated at a table where sandwiches are being prepared lowers the paper he is reading and looks up.

He glances across the table at the young white housewife fixing sandwiches, then looks toward his wife who is assisting her. His little 2½-year-old daughter flits playfully by unmindful of it all.

Finally, the towsled - haired spokesman for "Youth Against War and Fascism," rises to introduce himself, stepping carefully so as not to jostle the folding table supporting the mimeograph machine.

"I am Key Martin, national chairman of YAWF (Youth Against War and Facism," the 22 - year - old senior at Columbia University declares.

THE SECRETARY was introduced as Dierdre Grisworld, editor of The Partisan, YAWF's magazine; the colored man, his wife and daughter were identified as Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sensors and little Paula from Monroe, N.C. The housewife preparing food was Mrs. Key Martin.

They all came to Washington about a week ago to "pave the way for a massive demonstration against the war in Vietnam and to attend a convention of the National Coordinating Committee to End the War in Vietnam," Martin explained.

A protest march from the White House to the Washington Monument, scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 27, is expected to attract more than 10,000 peace demonstrators throughout the country, Martin said.

The four - day convention began Thursday at Lincoln Memorial Church, 11th and R Sts., NW.

YAWF, which has chapters up and down the East Coast and in Canada, according to Martin, is in town preparing food, and materials for the anti - war march and the convention.

He suggested that anti-war

Mother wants to take son's place in Vietnam

VOLUNTOWN, Conn. (UPI) — A Ventura, Calif., woman says she is willing to take her son's place in Vietnam because "if I should be killed at least I've lived 53 years."

The woman wrote to suspended American Legion post commander, Robert A. Hollis, 36, who lives here at the headquarters of the New England Committee for Non-violent Action.

She supported Hollis' pacifist stand against U.S. policy in Vietnam which resulted last night in his suspension as commander of the Legion Post.

THE LETTER was one of many Hollis said he has received in support of his position. He did not identify the woman.

"I want to take my son's place in Southeast Asia," the woman wrote. "I am perfectly capable of maintaining equipment for the Air Force."

"I could do his work as well as he can, and if I should be killed I have at least lived 53 years.

"Why should our sons die to protect our second cars, automatic household gadgets, and false hair?" the letter said.
