ing, and asked them to leave.

"I told the girls they could go home," Miss Johnson told the court, "but that I would stay there because it was the principle of the thing.

"They stayed, too."

During Miss Johnson's testimony Judge Diener interjected: "No one can argue with you about the matter of principle".

"Our laws have all kinds of safeguards so that you don't have to take this kind of abuse," Judge Diener told Miss Johnson.

THE SALES supervisor and her crew remained in the dining room until police called by the owner, arrived on the scene.

Testimony from Southwestern District officers William Brown and David Thompson was to the effect that the call had said that three women were causing a disturbance.

Miss Johnson told Officer Brown that she was ordering Miss Johnson, "If the man doesn't want to serve you, you had better leave."

"We were told there was an argument about a check and the women became disorderly."

Miss Johnson told me it was just the principle of the thing—the place is open to the public," the officer went on.

"During the discussion and their refusal to leave, she loudly called the owner's wife a liar. They were trying to explain to me. There was nothing on the table.

"The owner said he wanted them arrested — that's what we did."

JUDGE DIENER closely questioned the police regarding the circumstances of the arrest and the amount of disturbance created in their presence.

It was noted that the arrests were made without warrants. During the testimony the court questioned Miss Johnson about the circumstances leading to the arrests.

"Just how loud were you in talking with the police and were there other patrons in the place?" the judge asked.

"Just loud enough to be heard," replied Miss Johnson. "There were other patrons in the place — in the bar. None came into the dining room during the discussion."

"You mean no one heard enough noise to come to see what was going on?"

Judge Diener promptly dismissed charges of disturbing the peace.

BEFORE TESTIMONY began, the owners appeared with their attorney who advised the court: "There was some incident but my clients do not wish to press charges."

Judge Diener noted that since the owners took out no warrants the State was the prosecutor and he was assuming the arrests had been made on the strength of misdemeanors committed in the presence of the officers.

Two local policemen were sued last week on grounds they make illegal arrests.

Questioning of Mrs. Mory extracted a denial that Miss Johnson was denied service on account of her race, to which the judge came back:

"Well do you serve colored do colored people patronize your place?"

Mrs. Mory replied: "No, because we are a neighborhood bar."

Judge Diener further observed: "But you do serve food, don't you, and you do operate a public place?"

REPRESENTATIVES of the Baltimore Community Relations Commission, Clinton Henry and Gene Mobley, appeared in court but their testimony concerning civil rights laws was not needed for the acquittal.

Miss Johnson, in her closing testimony told the court: "The officers told me there was a place we could go to take up this matter. But they were not clear as to just where.

"After being told I was under arrest I asked the officer if he had a warrant. He grabbed me and pulled me toward the wagon saying, "Come on I've heard that before'."

The Baltimore City law permits places doing over 50 per cent of its business in liquor to bar colored patrons but the state and federal laws do not have this exemption.

The state and federal laws outrank the city law on this question and violations should be reported to the Maryland Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations.

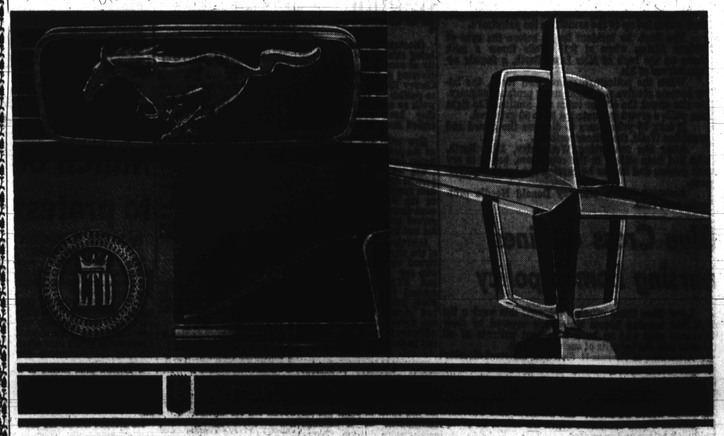
The automobile business will never be the same again



What accounts for the gigantic impact Ford Motor Company's 1966 cars have made in a few short weeks? People we haven't seen in years are crowding our showrooms. Sales are running at an all-time peak. Something important has happened, and the automobile business will never be the same again.

The reasons are easy to understand when you think of Mustang, our runaway success. Like Mustang, each 1966 Ford Motor Company car is based on an individual concept, a new, different idea. Each car has its own personality, its own excitement and satisfactions. New ideas are everywhere at Ford and Lincoln-Mercury dealers. More ideas than all the others put together. Like station wagon tailgates that open two ways. Car-wide taillights that light up 1, 2, 3... 1, 2, 3. Bucket seats for babies. Stereo-sonic tape players. Nothing warmed over. No waste. No fiddling around. Just new ideas in safety, comfort, quality, performance, beauty.

Come meet the most exciting cars for 1966 at your Ford and Lincoln-Mercury dealers.

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — A former Detroit public school principal said at Tuskegee Institut during an Education Week program that "youth is perishable and cannot wait," then challenged his audience to become "far better teachers" than those who have instructed them. Dr. Charles S. Lowis, a consultant to the Neighborhood Youth Corps, called on the group of mostly student education majors to improve the quality of education by making sure that "your students do not leave school until they have become useful, employable citizens."

TYLER, Texas — Dr. John Lash, Chairman of the Division of Humanities, Texas Southern University, was a principal speaker for the observance of America Education Week at Texas College. Dr. Lash spoke at 10 Friday in the college auditorium.

DURHAM, N.C. — An Indian diplomat, in an address at North Carolina College, Nov. 15, said his country is "the torchbearer of individual liberty in Asia," and that "her success or her failure in defending freedom will decide the fate of millions of people in the world." Dr. Banerjee, minister in the Embassy of India in Washington, said, "India, like America, is a land of diversity."
