Rev. Carroll sees racial change among Methodists

By BAKER E. MORTEN

Racial attitudes are changing in the Methodist Church and the merger of white and colored jurisdictions is responsible for it, the Rev. Edward G. Carroll believes.

Mr. Carroll, the only colored Methodist district superintendent in Washingtan, said "the merger helps us to understand in fresh and vivid ways the real purpose of the Christian church."

Last June the all - colored Central Jurisdiction of the Methodist Church broke free of racial boundaries to become parts of the white geographic jurisidctions.

The merger brought Mr. Carroll to Washington as superintendent of the Church's Northwest District, which encompasses 65 charges (areas of supervision which may contain one or more churches).

Most of the churches in the minister's sphere of supervision are white, like the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church whose minister—the Rev. Dr. Edward G. Latch—barred a colored soprano from singing with the choir.

THE SINGER, Mrs. Dorothy Horton, was scheduled to sing at the church Nov. 14, but was prohibited from appearing. Methodist Bishop John Wesley Lord intervened in the matter, Dr. Latch aplogized for his action, and Mrs. Horton was invited to sing Nov. 21.

She joined two other sopranos in singing "The Heavens Are Declaring" as the minister who barred her told the congregation "we have all sinned and stand in need of forgiveness."

Mr. Carroll deplored Dr. Latch's action as "an error of judgement" when he learned the minister had barred Mrs. Horton.

Before the merger 14 colored churches made up the Washington Conference of the Methodist Church, and 51 white churches comprised the Baltimore Conference.

Although the merger has brought about administrative integration of the Washington Conference, the racial composition of most congregations remain about the same as before, according to Mr. Carroll.

However, "there is a changing racial attitude among parishioners who conduct joint services," the minister explained.

He said representatives of colored and white congregations come together at district and sub-district meetings to discuss church affairs and, as a result of it, "there is increased understanding among the races."

Colored ministers and laymen are found among the membership of nearly all church boards and agencies, he said.

There has been a few instances of colored pastors serving white churches, such as the Rev. Abraham R. Carey, who has been assigned as associate pastor of Silverbrook Methodist Church in Wilmington, Del.

"All district church committees are integrated, including the District Trustees, the District Church Location Committee and the Ministerial Qualification Comittee," Rev. Carroll pointed out.

College gift feels bite of 'white'

TARBORO, N.C. — A scholarship set up by the will of the late Sally B. Staten to send "white" girls to Vassar College will be declined by the renowned women's institution unless the heirs are successful in getting the word "white" cut out of the will.

The heirs have filed an agreement and family settlement contract with Edgecombe County Superior Court, asking that the word be taken out without extended litigation, which hey contend would diminish the value of the scholarship.

Vassar College has [illegible]d that the acceptance of any gift which limits benefits to white girls is in conflict with its policies.

The heirs, who were willed personal effects from the $300,000 estate, the residue of which was to go for the scholarship said that Miss Staten h[illegible] intended the scholarship to be a "useful and permanent memorial to her father," L. L. Staten, for use by North Carolina girls.

23 colleges get $1 million

NEW YORK — The Alfred P. Sloan Foundation here has awarded a grant of $1 million to be shared and matched by 23 predominantly colored colleges in southern states, it was announced last week.

The grant is designed to encourage the schools to develop their own additional sources of income to match the foundation funds.

Seven of the schools have been awarded $66,666 each and the 16 others will get $33,333 each, according to Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, chairman of the Cooperative College Development Program, with which the 23 colleges are associated.

The foundation will match $1 for each $1 the schools raise from alumni, $1 for each $2 raised from other private donors within the school's own state and $1 for every $3 from other private sources.

Back to O'Brien's Trials

By I. DIAL WELL

If you read this column Tuesday, you probably decided that something was missing. Well, something was —a large chunk of type was misplaced by gramblings and not discovered until after press time.

As I was saying (before my words were lost), I hold no brief for "The Trials of O'Brien, not for the show itself. That's especially true about the one which I saw last Saturday.

It was too glib, too contrived, full of stereotypes and unbelievable, even if predictable, events.

But one thing kept ringing —the character of O'Brien, so beautifully portrayed by Peter Falk.

This of course, is not to say that O'Brien is prototype of the legal profession. No. There are many attorneys whose dedication, devotion and reputation well earn for the the title of advocate.

No. That is not my point at all. What I am saying is this (and it may not be true for you):.

The lawyers I have known, have had more in common with O'Brien than with either Perry Mason or Larry Preston of 'Defenders' fame.

TO GET back to the show, I must admit that it had a few funny touches, and those who enjoy glibness and the ability to say the right thing at the right time in an argument, may find the program entertaining.

That much it has to offer, besides what I have already overstated.

The bit where the delicatessen owner said: "I know about law. My brother-in-law is a notary public." was really funny. It reminded me of a friend of mine, an attorney, who treasures his notary seal more than his law school degree

Peter Falk, whose obvious abilities need no praise, is a marvelous combination of himself, Humprrey Bogart and James Cagney.

In the show I saw—and I imagine that one is like all the others—I loved the way in which O'Brien divided his time between gambling and his practice, (it was hard to tell where one left off and the other began).

aid, or in the blonde, yoga buff—though both are probably closer to life than the people who populate the Perry Mason shows.

I DON'T know if anyone still remembers the hulabaloo (not the show) about the Baltimore magistrate who used to listen to his transistor radio while trying the cases down at central but did you ever see a guy like that on Perry Mason

Braves officials bypass testimonial to top player

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — About 400 persons, but no representative of the Braves, attended a testimonial dinner Sunday night for Henry Aaron, one of the National League's top players who is expected to be in an Atlanta uniform next season.

Billy Bruton, who played on the Braves with Aaron, called it "a slap in the face to the best player on their club."

"WHY COULDN'T they take time out to honor their best player?" Bruton, the main speaker at the affair, said later. "But then I wasn't surprised.

"I expected it from the way they've expressed themselves in th past as far as the city of Milwaukee is concerned."

THE DINNER was sponsored by the Mary Church Terrell Club, Inc., a local women's group.

Mrs. Felix Jackson, president of the club, presented Aaron with a silver bowl, which Aaron called "the most memorable gift of my career that includes all the plaques and trophies I have received in the past."
