L. T. DEAVER GETS WISH

Dies four days after his 85th birthday

"Thank goodness I'll live to see my birthday." And he did just that.

Lawrence Thomas Deaver, 4313 Dewey Ave., whose birthday was Nov. 23, celebrated his 85th birthday with his wife, Mrs. Nettie Deaver, who was 80 on Nov. 26. They had been married for 61 years on July 12.

The family served cake and ice cream to the bedridden Mr. Deaver and wished him well.

Mr. Deaver died just four days later.

REQUIEM high mass was sung Thursday morning at St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church.

Burial was in Carver Memorial Park.

MR. DEAVER retired from the Motor Sales Co. , after 25 years of service. He formerly was employed as a chauffeur.

A member of the Holy Name Society of St. Francis, he was a native Baltimorean, son of Tom and Katie Deaver.

In addition to his wife, Mr. Deaver is survived by three sons and five daughters.

They are Lawrence Jr., New York City; Sarsfield Deaver, Baltimore; Mrs. Deaver, Chicago; George Deaver, Baltimore; Mrs. Agrada Diggs, Mrs. Gladys Williams, Mrs. Hilda Diggs, Mrs. Adele Ennis and Mrs. Agnes Pulliam all of Baltimore.

A sister, Mrs. Edith Lightfoot, Baltimore; 38 grandchildren and 40 great - grandchildren, also survive.

Martin A. Ball, 59, dies of heart attack

Martin A. Ball, a native Washingtonian, succumbed to a heart attack Sunday at his home.

Mr. Ball, who would have been 59 years old on Dec. 23, resided at 1313 22nd St., NW.

Mr. Ball worked in Washington's Methodist Building and had been employed there longer than any other employee.

On Thanksgiving Day he had been on the building staff for 37 years, having started in 1928, soon after the building's completion. He worked through last Saturday in his position as houseman. He was only away for several years' Navy service during World War II.

Mr. Ball was an active member of the Buddies Social Club.

HE IS survived by his wife, Mrs. Samantha L. Ball, and a brother, the Reverend Chester A. Ball, S.S.J., of Houston, Texas.

Services were held Thursday morning at McQuire, Inc., 1820 9th St., with burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Strauss group aids Provident

Provident Hospital for the first time was one of seven recipients of funds from the Edith Rosen Strauss Organization, Inc., at the 14th annual donor luncheon given by the 120 - member group at the Blue Crest North from 12-3 p.m., Provident development director, Charles Tildon, told the AFRO.

The money Provident was given has been designated "to help Provident Hospital begin an unmet - needs fund," Mr. Tildon said.

More than $18,000 in contributions were awarded to the various hospitals by the Strauss Organization, founded in memory of a young cancer victim 14 years ago. Most of the funds raised are ear marked specificaly for the treatment, diagnosis and study of cancer in children.

Henry J. White, administrator for Provident, and Mr. Tildon, were guests at the luncheon to receive the gift from the members of the organization.

THE 300 - PLUS participants at the affair were entertained by native Baltimorean Robert St. George.

Mr. St. George is the son of Mrs. Margaret Wilson, leading worker for Provident, and more popularly known as district manager of the North West Baltimore Fuller Products office. Mrs. Wison is also an active member of Woman Power, Inc.

Mr. St. George, 30 - year - old singer who was a prodigy performer, entertained his audience in a variety of songs in as many different languages.

Mrs. Nathan Nash, president of the Strauss organization, announced that this year's donations marked more than $50,000 that have been given for cancer study since the group was founded fourteen years ago.

Mrs. R. Hines

Funeral services for Mrs. Regina H. Queen will be held from Union Memorial Methodist Church, Harlem and Warwick Aves. Burial will be in Baltimore National Cemetery.

The former Miss Regina Hines, 45, was daughter of Clarence A. Hines, and the late Mrs. Violet Brooks Hines. Her husband, the late William R. Queen, died in 1958.

Mrs. Queen resided at 1623 N. Appleton St. She died Wednesday at Sinai Hospital.

In addition to her father, she is survived by sisters, Mrs. Zelma H. Cheatham, and Miss Sylvia (Kitty) Hines; brothers Morsell and Lawrence Hines, and other relatives.

MY DREAM

The North: myth of the promised land

By MARTIN LUTHER KING

During the past eleven years, starting with the crusade for integrated bus transportation in Montgomery, Ala., I have found myself more and more deeply involved in the civil rights struggle.

In this turbulent, traumatic and thrilling decade, much has been written, spoken and revealed about the plight of the colored resident of the South and his indomitable courage in his march toward human dignity.

Nothing could be more richly deserved than the fulsome praise which has been accorded to black sons and daughters of the South. Their creative, loving, non-violent militancy has written bright pages into the history of meaningful progress for this nation.

Not Alone

These same heroic marching blacks would be the first to acknowledge that they were not forced to stand alone in their bitter struggle. Americans of both races, all religions and classes and, indeed, citizens of other lands, helped make major victories possible. With prayer and moral and financial support men of goodwill from virtually every corner of the universe have given significant witness to the colored revolution.

Not the least of these has been the colored people who inhabit our teeming cities of the North, Midwest and Far West.

AT THE Nobel Peace Prize ceremonies at Oslo last year, I predicted that the final battles of the civil rights struggle would assume a new dimension. I envisioned that the thrust would not be a struggle to integrate lunch counters, but would develop into a problem of dealing with de facto segregation in schools, jobs and housing in our Northern cities.

Developments have justified this prediction which was shared by leaders of other civil rights organizations.

The disillusion of the colored citizen in the North is an enigma only to the insensitive or uninformed. Embittered with his lot in a South which has sought to suppress the colored sense of "somebodiness," a South which has told him daily that he is "less than," "not equal to he migrated North.

By the thousands and the hundreds of thousands, he made the pilgrimage to Washington, to Detroit, Chicago, New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco and Philadelphia and New Jersey. He was seeking the promised Land.

But he soon learned that the North is not the Promised Land; that the subtle nuances of de facto segregation in the North are as humiliating psychologically as the more obvious segregation of the South is literally.

To make matters worse, as the South has slowly, reluctantly begun to turn to face her destiny, the rigidities of Northern discrimination and segregatio.. have stiffened.

THIS PAST summer, I made a tour of Northern cities. I have seen integration on the increase rather than on the decline, above the Mason - Dixon line. The ghetto has become more intensified than dispersed. Explosive racial tensions in the mighty metroplitan areas have produced riots.

In the main, those who give themselves over to the self-defeating extremes of rioting are colored persons who feel they have nothing to lose because they are forced to live in slums, attend poor schools and suffer from job bias. The young people, particularly, see life as a long and desolate corridor with no exit sign.

One of the basic reasons for this despair, of course, is sub-human conditions into which black babies are born, in which black children are raised and to which black people, men, women and children go home each night to close themselves in with thrir frustrations.

America must come to learn that, as along as slums are profitable — like narcotics — they will continue to exist.

I made the tour into the ersatz Promised Land of the North at the invitation of local leaders there. I wanted to lend what support I could to the movements in those cities which are seeking to dam the surging flow of segregation and to open the floodgates of mutual understanding.

I wanted to make a gesture of reciprocity to those people of the North without whose help the Southern Christian Leadership Conference would never have been able to make achievements in the South.

IN SUBSEQUENT columns, I will detail my findings and experiences during this tour —particularly in Philadelphia Washington, D.C., Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, and Los Angeles.

It is in these great urban communities that The Myth of the Promised Land has been-and is being-revealed.

Next week Dr. King writes on Philadelphia grand college—"A Will and a Wall!"

—Muslims tell

of Islam, display the results of their training.

A smartly-dressed drill team, consisting of 9 young boys, moved in perfect unison across the floor to the quiet, firm commands of their captain.

All wore blue suits, white shirts, white bow ties, white gloves, and black shoes. The ed enthusiastically as they performed their routines as attentive audience applaud- one.

Other youngsters presented short plays and other skits. They participated in other activities. They listened to speeches by grown-ups. They joined in the feast that preceded the December first ushering in of the Muslims' 30 - day fasting period.

Through it all there was an air of reserved discipline. It was obvious the more than 100 youngsters present, from tots to teens, had great respect for the elders and their teachings.

Minister James Shabazz, called the "right - hand man" of Elijah Muhammad, was there. He is head of the University of Islam, in Chicago.

The minister explained how the adult Muslims are trained and taught the true history of the black people, their origin and their heritage.

"Our adults then pass this knowledge and training on to the young ones, their children. Love, repsect and unity are stressed.

"Because of this, the children look up to the greatness of their father and mothers and seek to mulate them. They have great respect for their parents and for proper authority."

According to leaders of the Muslim movement, the youth are kept busy.

"Every one has a job to do," said one. "They take pride in their work and have a feeling of self - worth."

THE YOUTH, both male and female, visit the temple daily. They are schooled in physical fitness, art and crafts, and general scientific knowledge, according to their ages and the ability to absorb.

Both sexes are taught how to cook and prepare food, do house - cleaning, and how to be personally neat.

"We try to equip them for the future," one teacher explained. This training, it must be noted, is in addition to the training they receive home and in public schools.

The Baltimore temple claims to have over 400 youths in its program. The girls are trained in womanhood and morality is stressed.

"You don't find our girls standing on street corners," the AFRO was told. "Their activities are many and wholesome, and there is no time or desire for such things."

Minister Louis Farrakhan, of Mosque No. 7, New York, citing the up - from - slavery background of black youth, said of Muslim children:

"Our youth, the Junior Fruit of Islam are a perfect example of the old quotation 'sown in dishonor but raised in honor; sown in corruption but raised incorruptibly.'

"We have learned to govern our homes with wisdom and knowledge."

And to the youth of the Muslim movement Minister Louis Farrakhan directed a final remark:

"Out on the streets, when you see children acting wrong —you need to bring them to Muhammad's Mosque. We will teach them pride, love, unity, and self - esteem. We need have no delinquents."

—Appeals Court

In reversing the conviction duty.

In reversing the conviction of the two youths this week, the court turned down the plea of Morton Sachs, assistant attorney general, who contended that the defendants had waived their right to raise the jury issue at the lower court level.

Instead, the judges agreed with George L. Russell Jr., court - appointed defense attorney, who argued that at the time of the trials and convictions such a right did not exist under the old Maryland law.

IN A companion opinion, the court also ruled that a defendant can voluntarily and knowingly waive his right to raise the jury issue.

While upholding the second degree murder conviction and eight - year sentence of Kennard Smith, the court ruled he knowingly and willisgly waved his right at the lower court level.

The state contended that Smith did not raise the issue until after he received what he considered to be a harsh sentence.

The latest ruling marks a new legal triumph for Mr. Russell who has already "created new law" in the area of illegal search and seizure. The City and State Bar Associations an the courts designate him an authority in this area of law.

The 36 - year - old lawyer was hand-picked by the Baltimore Supreme Bench to argue the defense side of the test case.

Representing Leon Madison, accused rapist, he won a new trial from Supreme Bench Judge William J. O'Donnell. When the state appealed the ruling of the Court of Appeals, Mr. Russell was again victorious when the court struck down all indictments brought by jurors who had taken the "belief in God" oath.

In wake of the latest Appeals Court decree, he has been asked by Chief Federal District Court Judge Roszel C. Thomsen to "act as a friend of the court" next week durisg the hearing on a new trial petition filed by a penitentiary inmate.

"We could do without the extra work," Mr. Moylan said while commenting on the effects of the decree, "but we also want to comply with the edicts of the Supreme Court.

"It is the duty of good lawyers to see that we do. Mr. Russell has. He should be commended."

Rec. volunteers slate officers

The Baltimore City Bureau of Recreation Volunteer Corps has announced the following officers for 1966:

Also selected were Mrs. Jean Steyer, corresponding secretary, Herring Run Rec. Center; Harry Brooks, treasuer, Gardenville Rec. Center, and L. Clements Nixon, district supervisor, Baltimore Bureau of Recreation, coordinator.

Windsor insurance slapped with notice

Francis B. Burch, state insurance commissioner has announced the suspension of the Windsor - Mount Joy Mutual Insurance Co. due to its "deplorable financial condition."

One month prior to the suspension, the company was called upon to turn over its financial reports. When this was not done, the state office "spot - checked" the Hamburg, Pa., office's records and found that the actual status of the company "could not be ascertained," Mr. Burch said.

The sections violated by the company are given by Commissioner Burch as sections 51 and 55. The latter being a "hazard to the policyholders and the public." They had less than one thousand policy holders in the state.
