Elaine Delores Massey is warmly greeted at concert

By ADAH K. JENKINS

A warmly enthusiastic audience greeted Elaine Delores Massey at her first Baltimore recital held on a recent Sunday evening at Brown Memorial Baptist Church.

It was an occasion on which to appreciate the fortitude and industry of a young singer, who began her career as "the most musical student in her class at Western High School," where she represented her school as soloist and also in the Maryland All-State Chorus and the All - Eastern State Chorus.

Last June Miss Massey graduated from Howard University School of Music, where she studied voice with Miss Carolyn Grant and appeared as soloist on tours of the University Choir.

With congratulations upon her achievements thus far were predictions that her talent will be further developed by continued study, as her ambition is to achieve the coveted Artist Diploma at the Peabody.

She has an imposing stage presence and a soprano of considerable range and power. Problems of intonation, placement and control will, no doubt, be solved with continued training, as her potential is most promising.

The Sunday concert consisted of arias from Mozart and Verdi ("Il Trovatore"), groups of Strauss and Debussy art songs, "Alleluia" (Rorem) in the modern idiom and a group of spirituals.

Julius Tilghman at the piano provided praiseworthy accomanimments, although somewhat overpowering at times.

The event was sponsored by the Junior Matrons of the church, of which Rev. Paul Harris is pastor.

The Music Committee of the Jewish Community Center is announcing auditions for the 1966 Baltimore Musicians Competition program, which will take place Sunday, May 22.

All music students, professional and youth, who study with Baltimore teachers are eligible to enter.

The award for the professional winner is a concert to be given at the JCC during November, 1966. The Aber D. Unger Music Scholarship of $250 is the prize for the youth winner.

Professionals are required to submit a 60 - minute program, from classic, romantic, and modern periods, with the inclusion of at least one work by a Jewish or contemporary Israeli composer, all of which must be memorized.

The Youth group (up to and through high school) will be required to submit a 30-minute program representing the three musical periods all from memory.

Applicants will provide their own accompanists and pay $1 entrance fee. They will agree to preliminary elimination of program submitted does not meet the musical standard set up by the Committee on Auditions.

The adjudicator from out of the city will be selected for outstanding qualities of musicianship.

Application forms may be secured from Mrs. Ben Reubens, chairman, 6 Peachtree Court, Baltimore, Md. 21208. (Tel. 486-8190).

Leadership project moves to Cherry Hill

The Baltimore Urban League announced last week the beginning of the second phase of its Leadership Development Project, in the Cherry Hill community.

Warren Weaver, vice president of the Urban League and advisory committee chairman for leadership development, said "It is urgent now, more than ever, that people cast off the myth that someone has to do something for them."

Objective of the program is to motivate and encourage citizens to work toward a solution of their own problems within their own local community.

Leadership talents will be identified and developed among persons living in the Cherry Hill community who are interested in becoming more effective in the application of community services for the solution of local problems.

The program will consist of a series of seminars designed to acquaint participants with methods of solving major community problems within their immediate area. The dynamics of group and committee participation will be presented in such a way as to give the seminar participants actual laboratory experience in employing these techniques.

FIRST STAGE of the Urban League project was undertaken in June of this year by organization of a study group of twenty-five men and women with broad leadership experience or potential. This group is conducting a continuing study of major and operations at the city-wide level.

The new series will be conducted at the Cherry Hill Community Center at 7:30 p.m. on each Tuesday evening for about ten weeks. George T. Bess, director of the leadership development project, will conduct the semniar sessions.

Urge mailing Yule cards this weekend

Postmaster William F. Laukaitis is urging the mailing of greeting cards no later than the coming Sunday, to insure delivery prior to Christmas Day.

However, heavy local mailing on this week end and that of Dec. 19 could result in some greeting cards not being delivered before Christmas, Mr. Laukaitis warned.

He also requests that Christmas seals be plaied in the center of the envelope, and on the reverse side only.

Greeting cards received for delivery from other cities are expected to be higher in volume this year, he said, especially on the week end prior to Christmas.

Auto dealers pledge to protect servicemen

H. L. (Bud) Hosford, president of A. D. Anderson Chevrolet Co. reports that a movement by a group of factory-authorized car dealers to assure ethical dealings with members of the armed forces is receiving nationwide support.

More than 100 dealers across the country already have affiliated with the group and pledged themselves to abide by its strict code of ehics, Mr. Hosford said.

Archway Ford, Brooks Price Buick, General Pontiac, and Penn Brothers Plymouth, of Baltimore, are also affiliated with A. D. Anderson in the program.

Others are being admitted after careful screening for integrity and dependable service.

"Ethical car dealers recognize their responsibility to police their own industry in its handling of the special problems of the service man and woman," Mr. Hosford continued.

"To provide effective machinery for this, we have formed the Armed Forces Automobile Association, a nonprofit organization with the specific purpose of assuring preferred treatment to service people buying a new or used car."

• • •

ONLY DEALERS who hold a factory franchise and who have an established record of fair dealing and quality service can qualify for AFAA affiliation, said Mr. Hosford, who has been in the automobile business for 26 years.

AFAA-affiliated dealers are entitled to display a distinctive identifying emblem which certifies that they subscribe to the AFAA code of ethics and are prepared to give special attention to the problems of the service man.

AFAA-affiliated dealers are counseled by a board of advisers made up of members of the armed forces.

"It is our aim through AFAA to create a climate in which reputable, factory-authorized car dealers can compete for the service man's business in the best tradition of the free enterprise system, while providing assurances of fair prices, full trade-in allowances, reasonable financing, and reliable service," Mr. Hosford said.

"The need for positive action on the part of the automobile industry is pointed up by recent actions of the Defense Department in tightening regulations governing car sales to service personnel.

"All AFAA-affiliated dealers heartily endorse the doctrine recently voiced by the Defense Department — 'Let the seller make full disclosure by those who would elect to specialize in the privilege of doing businss with the service man or his dependent.' "

Mt. Pisgah CME mark anniversary

The 20th anniversary and homecoming of Mt. Pisgah CME Church was recently celebrated with a series of servcies.

The church, located at Fulton and Riggs Avenues, is under the pastorate of the Rev. A. C. Crumbley.

Speaking at the morning service was Mt. Psigah's former pastor, the Rev. Herman A. Baron, now of New York City. His topic was: "Imagination — the Challenge."

Afternoon services were conducted by Mrs. Marjorie Cooper, daughter of the late founder of Mt. Pisgah.

Evening services were addressed by Clarence Mitchell 3d, member of the House of Delegates, and Dr. John Tilley, director of the NAACP Voter Registration Program.

Both speakers emphasized the importance of the vote. Dr. Tilley pointed out the need for Christians to recognize a civic responsibility to help make the world a better one to live in.

Delegate Mitchell stressed the part colored citizens need for awareness of play in the world today.

A sign of the time: USO back on war-time footing

The escalation of the war in Vietnam is having an increasing impact locally as the casualty lists are dotted with names of hometown soldiers.

Another is the step-up in activities at the Baltimore chapter of the United Service Organizations (USO).

Mrs. Isaac Hamburger of the USO public relations office reports that the chapter has been ordered to go on "a full war-time footing" to service the needs of the increasing influx of servicemen in the Baltimore area.

Mrs. Hamburger added that the step-up was taken at the request of the White House and Pentagon.

Combined with preparations to mark its anniversary of a half-century of providing a "home away from home" for GIs amrines, airmen, and sailors, the USO at 310 Cathedral St., is a beehive of activity. While giving further details, Mrs. Hamburger said:

"Requests have been made by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of United States forces in Vietnam, and by commanders of rapidly expanding military centers in this country for the establishment of USO Centers in their areas."

The USO, which is supported by Community Chests and United Appeals all over the country, provides "relaxation and a taste of civilian life for men and women in the Armed Forces at home and around the world."

"The decision of the USO leadership to undertake this task will be appreciated by the thousands of servicemen and women who will benefit from the USO programs."

• • •

PRESIDENT JOHNSON wrote to Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., thanking the USO leaders for responding to the call for expansion.

USO Clubs operate virtually around the world, with new clubs in Vietnam.

The member agencies of the USO are: The Young Men's Christian Associations, the National Catholic Community Service, The National Jewish Welfare Board, The Young Women's Christian Association, The Salvation Army, The National Travelers Aid Association.

Here in Baltimore the USO Club at 310 Cathedral St. is feeling the effects of the growing complement of men coming into the installations in the area.

With the advent of greater numbers of men at Ft. George G. Meade through the consolidation of the First and Second Armies, and in the event that Bainbridge will again become an active training base, it is anticipated that there will be an increase of activity at the Club.

• • •

OVER 1800 men use the USO Club each week. There are nightly dances as well as informal recreational programs, and the club is open seven days a week for friendly discussions and information. In Baltimore, the USO is supported by the Community Chest through United Appeal funds.

New law requires entry warrants

Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin signed into law Wednesday the City Council's approved right to entry ordinance, and did so with a congratulatory statement on its passage.

This new law now prohibits city building inspectors from arbitrarily entering homes for checking purposes unless:

1. Permission is given by the occupant; 2. There is imminent danger to health or safety; 3. A mishap has occurred which requires immediate inspection.

Otherwise, the building inspector must obtain a warrant to enter a dwelling, and to obtain such permit, reasonable probable cause must be shown.

In cases of routine inspections or spot checks, the inspector is now required to give notice to the occupant by mail or posting on the dwelling.

THE NEW law, in general, sets up the same safeguards covering the right of entry into a man's home as are conceded in criminal cases.

In short, if an occupant does not want to admit a city building inspector to his home, that inspector must now obtain a warrant — unless an unusual situation has arisen.

Mayor McKeldin, in hailing the passage of the ordinance and saying he was happy to sign it, had these comments:

"There is widespread agreement that the Constitutional safeguards of privacy in the home are a cornerstone of American democracy.

"There is widespread agreement also that government has an obligation to enforce housing laws which ensure the health and safety of the community.

• • •

"WHEN THESE fundamental principles collide, as inevitably they must at times, the responsible reac- of them to the exclusion of the other, but rather to serve both which violating neither.

"If it is irresponsible to permit inspection without restraint, it is equally irresponsible to turn one's back on the slums of a great city and walk away waving the Bill of Rights.

"The responsible course is the middle way which guards against unreasonable search and permits inspection wherever there is a reasonable expectation of necessity."

The new law, the mayor said, sets up this middle way course.

Kennison Ave. apts. ruled okay by Deitrich

The disputed new apartment building on Kennison Ave. near Rogers is in compliance with city codes, according to Robert G. Deitrich Building Inspector.

This was the sum total of a requested report to Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin this week on complaints registered against the apartments.

Mrs. Ethel Johnson and Frank Hyman, representatives of the West Arlington Improvement Association which cover the area, had urged the mayor to launch an investigation into the zoning permit for the apartments.

THEY CHARGED the consrtuction was faulty and not in accordance with the neighborhood of individual homes on spaious lots, and that the apartment structure would be in violation of the law when Rogers Ave., is widened as planned.

The investigation of Mr. Deitrich's offices, as stated in his letter to Mayor McKeldin, found the apartment building in compliance with city codes.

Earlier, Gilbert V. Rubin, executive secretary, Board of Municipal and Zoning Appeals which rules on such permits, said the prevention of apartment construction in the city can not by law be done, unless there is a restriction covenant over the area.

Anti-blight campaign launched in E. Balto.

A seriesof housing inspections began Saturday in a portion of the East Baltimore anti - poverty project area, in a clean - up, fix - up campaign.

The area in question is bounded by Preston St. on the north, Wolfe St. to the east, Monument on the south and Braodway on the west.

A force of 20 city building inspectors and four supervisors, working in cooperation with the Community Action Agency, are to undertake a house - to - house inspection of the area on an overtime basis.

This is a project of Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin's emergency anti - blight campaign, in cooperation with CAA.

• • •

The mayor's anti - blight campaign is an outgrowth of his recently expressed concern over the visible decay of housing in a number of residential areas, particularly the inner city.

The inspections, the mayor said, are being undertaken on a Saturday overtime basis so as to produce immediate action, without waiting the six - month training period for all new inspectors and without curtailment of other existing inspectional activities.
