EMERGENCY ROOM — Beginning May 21, a call to police at the new emergency number — 222-3333 — will bring a caller in contact with this room. Calls concerning everything from holdups to a "barking dog" are relayed by card on the conveyor (lower left) from the desks in the front to the four dispatch radio consoles in the back.

nications and in the Records Division (including a changeover from old-style files to data processing), directed by Maj. Anthony F. Nelligan, are the newest major steps in the police reshaping.

A REVITALIZED youth Division will begin its operation this summer.

The new communications system has four radio channels for dispatching cars, instead of the previous two.

Emergency calls come in on 14 lines to the large dispatch room on the fifth floor of Police Headquarters.

The brightly-lit room looks like a true emergency center, with color coded lanes on a long thin conveyer belt and red lights which flash on each of four dispatch commajor crime is being relayed, soles when information on a

Each of three radio consoles will handle the dispatching of cars in three districts.

The fourth broadcasts over all four channels in the event of a major crime calling for fresh pursuit.

A LARGE electric board, like the backboarr of a pinball machine, over each console enables the two dispatch clerks seated behind it to keep track of the cars in service.

Calls are taken by clerks seated beside the front of the conveyer. Recorded on colorded IBM cards, the information takes several seconds to reach the appropriate dispatcher by conveyer.

The dispatcher—not having to receive the telephone calls himself —is thus free to concentrate on keeping track of the cars and sending them where they are most needed.

Major Daugherty pointed out that there is room to expand the operation if the calls do move on toward the million mark.

AFTER A survey of crime statistics showed that most crime occurs on the 4 p.m. to midnight shift, the largest number of cars have been assigned to that shift.

As crime patterns change, the area of the post assigned to each car will be shifted, after analysis every six months or a year.

Maj. Daugherty, former communications chief under the old police setup with the rank of captain, attributes many features of the new communications center to Commissioner Pomerleau.

In addition, the center which the major observes is worth $200,000, was built by police personnel.

An estimate by a private contractor (which would not have incorporated all the present features) was for something over $100,000, but the center was financed by the department with its own personnel for about $20,000.

MAJ. DAUGHERTY lovingly pats the conveyor and announces that the private estimate for its construction was $6,000, "but we built it for $3,700."

He states that any new communications system is bound to have some bugs in it at first, but is eager to begin operation May 21, "so we can begin ironing them out."

Businessmen, students help Morganite with Africa trip

CHECK FROM BUSINESSMEN — Miss Doris Reynolds, Morgan sociology major, receives check for $200 from Ernst S. Senior, chairman of the board, the Small Businessmen's League of Baltimore, Inc., a contribution to help Miss Reynolds spend eight weeks in Africa with students from other American and Canadian colleges, working with African students on welfare projects.

Miss Doris Reynolds, Morgan senior, will spend the summer in Chad, formerly French Central Africa, thanks to the cooperation of her fellow-students, local businessmen and friends of th colleg.

Miss Rynolds will make the visit under the auspices of Operation Crossroads Africa, the well known New York organization.

"Doris Reynolds Day," held on the campus last Thursday, was climaxed with a talent show which brought some $700 in contributions to the Crossroad Fund.

Then the Small Businessmen' League of Baltimore contributed $200; Senator Verda Welcome $100, and nearly all the campus organizations, as well as city friends followed suit, bringing the total to $1,400 by midweek. The Small Businessmen's check was presented by Ernest S. Senior, chairman of the board. Leroy O. Dyett is president.

THE TALENT show was sparked by the singing of Betty Dorsey and the Leroy Henderson quintet, now playing at Peyton Place; the Virgin Islands Calypso Dancers (students), and the intermittent reciting of Paul Lawrence Dunbar's poems by the Rev. Howard L. Cornish, director, the Morgan Christian Center. Mr. Cornish was also master of ceremonies. Dawn Smith and George Pumphrey did a modern dance.

From Baltimore came the well known Baltimore Singers, under the direction of Gerald B. Wilson. Campus groups which also took part in the show were: The Alvin Mitchell Quintet, the Four Guys, The Morgan State Male Glee Club, the Shevrons (a girls singing group), and the Morgan Singers with Hugh Carey and Margaret Lindsay as soloists.

Miss Reynolds, of Huhesville, St. Mary's County, is a sociology major an AKA and active in the Christian Council and other organizations.
