—Tale Of The Nixon Tapes

gation between the White House and Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox, fired by President Nixon, Oct. 20.

Amid heavy public repercussions from the firing and the resignations of Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and his deputy William D. Ruckelshaus, Nixon agreed to submit the tapes to Sirica and the Watergate grand jury.

But Sirica announced Wednesday that the White House had informed him neither the Dean nor the Mitchell tape had ever existed.

Buzhart said the Dean conversation was not recorded because of a malfunction in the equipment, and that Nixon's telephone conversation with former Attorney General Mitchell three days after the Watergate burglary was missed because the phone extension usd was not connected to the recorder.

Ben-Veniste, a member of the Watergate special prosecution force set up by Cox, elicited from Zumwalt that a tape covering the period April 11-16 was taken from the White House July 11 and returned July 12, although he did not know by whom.

But Zumwalt, looking over his logs on the tapes written on brown paper resembling fragments of a grocery bag, said those original notes gave no indication that the tapes had been returned.

Haldeman testified before the Senate Watergate committee last summer that he had taken several of the tapes home to review them in mid-July, 2½ months after he resigned as Nixon's chief of staff.

But Haldeman said he listened only to a tape dated Sept. 15, 1972, and that he promptly returned the tapes to the White House.

Dean told the panel that he gathered during the 55-Nixon last April 15 that the minute conversation with President was aware of the Watergate coverup.

Increased Minority Participation Urged In State Colleges

Task Force calls for end to second-rate education for blacks

By Virginia Fore

"In my judgment the State of Maryland will become a model for the other states which are under similar court orders to desegregate."

Dr. King V. Cheek, Morgan State College president, was speaking about the far-reaching recommendations contained in a 27-page report released today (Friday).

Entitled, the "Maryland Plan for Completing the Desegregation of the Public Postsecondary Education Institutions in the State" it was prepared by the Governor's Desegregation Task Force.

The report projects statewide policies to achieve "true equality for all students, regardless of race," and "to end racial dualism in Maryland's colleges and universities."

The proposals were adopted today by the Maryland Council for Higher Education to meet the December deadline set by the Civil Rights Office of the Department of Health Education and Welfare, (HEW).

An equally effective plan for the community colleges, state colleges and universities, is still in the preparation stage. For this reason, the State of Maryland has asked HEW for an additional 60 days.

The Task Force has been working feverishly since its creation by Gov. Mandel on July 30, 1973.

It was the federal agency which ordered Maryland and nine other states to submit a plan for elimination of racial inequities in its institutions of higher educaton.

Dr. Cheek, vice chairman of the 12-member group chaired by Dr. Wesley N. Dorn, called the fruits of the three-month study, "one of the most enlightened steps in the direction of eliminating a publicly-imposed system of racial segregation in higher education."

Further, Dr. Cheek told the AFRO, "The State of Maryland proposes to create an educational system in which all citizens are free, without regard to color or race, to choose their college or university and all such citizens are guaranteed, upon admittance equal opportunity to progress toward a degree."

"Equal opportunity," he said, "is defined to embrace preferential treatment to remedy deficiencies incurred from the students' previous substandard educational exposure.

"Barriers such as finance, previous educational disprivilege, geography, all of which are incidental, and in part related by products of race, will be countered by appropriate state action.

"The objective is a completely open system which makes possible the realities of free and open access and equality of opportunity.

"The Maryland Plan moves from rhetoric to effective strategies for implementation of an open system of higher education," said Dr. Cheek.

Among key Task Force recommendations: (1) To establish remedial programs to counteract the effects of poor educational backgrounds of blacks and other minorities.

(2) To increase blacks, Orientals, Spanish surname, native Americans and other non-whites enrolled on campuses.

(3) To expand opportunities for blacks as students, teachers, workers and decision-makers throughout the school system. So that institutions formerly known as black colleges or white colleges will be known simply as institutions of academic excellence.

(4) Provide incentive to teach on "other-race" campuses by covering extra costs of transportation and relocation expenses for participating in cooperative programs.

(5) Establish state supported minority faculty chairs Placement of these chairs, salary and other qualifications will be recommended by the MCHE."

(6) To provide a better balance between courses at traditional black colleges and at white colleges to see that those approved for black colleges are of the highest quality.

(7) Establish guides for employment and promotion.

(8) Insure that the interest of blacks are represented on governing boards and policy-making councils and commissions responsible for advising public colleges and universities.

(9) Develop new financial aid programs in the areas of scholarships, loans, work-study, on-campus employment and minority and regular grants."

The Task Force predicted that if its goals are met there will be complete desegregation of colleges by 1980, the deadline set by HEW.

Dr. Cheek was careful to point out that the proposals would not eliminate historically black colleges.

"It should be strongly emphasized that such an objective is not contained in the Maryland Plan," he said.

"We will move toward a program of integration while at the same time preserve the important values and roles which the historic black institutions have played.

He concluded, "It does mean that colleges like Morgan and Coppin will have an increased "other-race" presence of approximately 15-22 per cent.

"These colleges will still be committed to serve a predominately black student body and will always remain sensitive to the special kinds of services they must provide.

"Based on this analysis, it is projected that Morgan's black enrollment will level off between 70-75 per cent by 1980."

Other members of the Task Force consisting of 12 members, five of whom are black are:

Dr. Thomas B. Day, vice chancellor, University of Maryland, College Park; Ms. Yolande Ford, director, Human Relations Programs, UMCP; Dr. Albin O. Kuhn chancellor, University of Maryland at Baltimore; Edmund C. Mester, executive director, Board of Trustees of the State Colleges; Dr. Samuel Myers, president, Bowie State College.

Dr. Alfred C. O'Connell, executive director, State Board for Community Colleges; Dr. Donald O'Connell, vice president, General Administration, University of Maryland; Howard P. Rawlings, chairman, Black Coalition of the University of Maryland, Baltimore County; Fred H. Spigler, administrative officer for Educaton, Governor's Office, and Eugene Stanley, senior specialist, Inter-Institutioal and Interstate Relatons, Maryland Council for Higher Education.

In A Nutshell

- Maryland Task Force on Desegregation meets deadline, declares racial dualism contrary to public policy.
  All state colleges must increase opportunities for blacks as students, teachers, workers and decision makers throughout state system.
  Equal access to quality education regardless of race, Deans, Trustees, Presidents Must be Hired on Equal Basis.
- Immediate and prompt desegregation of all state colleges and universities.
- Dr. Cheek calls study, "a model for the other states which are under similar court orders to desegregate."
