THE STATE OF THINGS

Why White Hats Are Blue

By Don and Val Hymes

Those big, bad politicians did it again. They failed to enact three vaunted "political reform" bills, and they're taking their lumps for it.

In fact, they've already been promised their lumps at the polls four years from now because reformers, like elephants, never forget!

Editorial writers have chided the legislature for letting the reforms die in the last hours. One called it "embarrassing." Another bemoaned the failure because the state's "history of political graft and cronyism" demanded passage.

But all three failed: the open meeting or "sunshine" bill; improving public financing of campaigns to make them work, and a tougher disclosure law for lobbyists.

TOTAL WIPEOUT

Why was the 1975 session, as one writer put it, "a total wipeout for reformers?" One suggestion was that now that the next election is far away, the legislators "showed no inclination to carry on with the political and campaign reforms of the 1974 election-year session." And, he added, there was "a distinct backlash against the reformers and their allies, especially Common Cause."

Del. Howard Needle, a Baltimore County Democrat who sponsored an open meetings bill, angrily charged that leadership foot-dragging "denied citizens the right to reforms that would help restore their faith in government."

The real indictment, he said, was against the system that allows a few individuals to sit on bills until they "languish and die," and not a "personal indictment" of the leadership.

NOT BLACK AND WHITE

But some of the leadership say it's not that simple. It's not a black-and-white issue. It's colored personalities, approaches, and mainly politics.

Admittedly, there were long delays in getting these bills to the floor. But were they deliberate? House Speaker John Briscoe said many of the key committee reporters were more interested in other topics. Speaker Pro Tem Ann Hull said that many of the first-time comers were in no position to reform the system because they hadn't worked under it.

But at the same time Hull echoed other leaders when she said that reform legislation could have passed "if it had an aura of reason about it."

War was declared at the outset of the session over rule changes, especially one on recorded committee votes. The issue, we're more convinced than they appeared on the surface, and the splits between liberals, moderates, and conservatives, for practical as well as political reasons, spelled doom for the 1975 reform package.

RUMORLESS

Del. Frank Robey of Baltimore, a leader in the rule change fight, now feels that he and fellow "middle moderates" made a mistake by keeping silent when Common Cause was labelled as the "roadblock" of reform, said, "They came on too strong. They acted like we had to purge ourselves of our sins.

They harassed the members and made threats of retaliation. They pressured us like the toughest lobbyists."

DO GOODERS

Yet Briscoe and Senate President Steny Hoyer had both offered to sponsor reasonable open meetings legislation if asked The weren't.

Minority Leader William Linton, who said he is interested in campaign reform but had doubts about these bills, said that the "do-gooders" accused him of trading votes. "They used tough tactics," he said. "They're probably their own worst enemy."

Many of the legislators complained that parts of these bills were "unworkable" or "unreasonable."

But Joe Hogan, chairman of Maryland's Common Cause, feels that kind of remark is just an easy out, a "cheap shot." Distressed at the image of his group, he noted, "Our people are not politicians - just home folks."

SEIF RIGHTEOUS

It is important to note that both camps share a depression over the failure of significant reform legislation. It is important to note that Common Cause volunteers have fought a lonely battle for many years, and that many legislative "leaders" have risked their political lives more than once to try to reconcile the old system with new reforms.

But it is even more important to remember that political reform must be sought within the political ...es, which requires reason and compromise and consultation with those to be reformed.

Their self-righteous does not make one's legislation right. If it is not nurtured within the system, it will die. That is the prosecutor bill proved that.

If the public interest is really at stake, a lot of lobbyists, legislators and even journalists have got to show more tolerance, common courtesy and respect for each other.

Who saw the accident on Edmondson Ave.

Mrs. Gay F. Topping, 3611 Edmondson Ave., is searching for eyewitnesses who saw her husband truck and killed by a car March 13.

Mr. Topping told the AFRO her husband, 78 year old James Wesley Topping, was hit by a patrol car about 11:44 a.m. while crossing Edmondson Ave. near his home.

Police reports disclose he was hit by the car's right fender and flipped onto the windshield. He was carried on the hood for about 75 feet and thrown to the ground when the car stopped.

The dead man was a senior traffic investigator for the city when he retired in 1969.

The Toppings have lived in the Edmondson Ave. home since 1929, a residential area where Mrs. Topping says, "We're all friends and good neighbors."

Mrs. Topping hopes someone who saw the accident will call her within the next few days. Phone: 945-7699.

NOTICE
PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION
OF MARYLAND

IN THE MATTER OF THE INVESTIGATION BY THE COMMISSION ON ITS OWN MOTION OF ELECTRIC UTILITY RATE STRUCTURES AND THE CHANGES, IF ANY, THAT SHOULD BE MADE IN PRESENTLY CONSTITUTED RATE STRUCTURES TO ENCOURAGE CONSERVATION OF ELECTRICITY IN THE STATE OF MARYLAND.

BEFORE THE
OF MARYLAND
CASE NO. 6808

NOTICE OF PREHEARING CONFERENCE ON ELECTRIC UTILITY RATE STRUCTURES AND FILING OF PETITIONS TO INTERVENE

This is to give notice that a prehearing conference will be held in the above-entitled matter on Friday, May 2, 1975, at 10:00 o'clock, a.m., in Room 100, State Highway Administration Building, 300 West Preston Street, Baltimore, Maryland.

Any party wishing to intervene in this matter shall file with the Commission a petition for intervention, which must be received at the Commission's offices, 904 State Office Building, 301 West Preston Sreet, Baltimore, Maryland 21201, no later than the close of business April 30, 1975, and will be considered at the prehearing conference.

The purpose of the Commission's investigation includes, but is not limited to, consideration of the following proposed alternatives:

1. Discount prices for consumers who achieve a decrease in their consumption of electricity compared to a like period during the preceding year.
2. Placing all future rate increases on the tail blocks of the existing decreasing block-pricing structure so that in time an increasing block-pricing structure will be achieved.
3. Inverting the rate structure to achieve immediately an increasing block-pricing structure.
4. Requiring new metering which would enable higher prices for consumption of electricity at the demand peaks each day.
5. Seasonal peak pricing, which would not require new metering, but which would price electricity used during the seasonal peaks higher than that used at other times.
6. Marginal cost pricing; that is, pricing all electricity at the cost of producing the last unit of electricity at the most recent plant, rather than average cost pricing which is currently used.
