"The things that he was talking about were critical and provocative ideas."

She said she first met him when she asked him to speak at a program held at Enon Baptist Church. "He shared his knowledge and ideas with everyone present. He was an overwhelming success. Billy must have been a part of the solution, not part of the problem. He is a gifted and intelligent black man who is daring to venture."

Ken Hampshire, who was introduced as a business associate of Ken Wilson's spoke next.

"Billy Murphy is one individual who has been able to grasp the conflict and run with the ball," stated Mr. Hampshire.

Describing Billy's busy schedule, he said "He gives his time, gives his effort, and gets things done right. As judge, he'll make things happen right."

Peter Harris, a young teacher at the Park Heights Street Academy, gave a rousing endorsement of the candidate.

He stated: "Intellectually tight, he can rap pop culture like he got a Masters from WSID. Billy is a dynamo who does not, like Carter, suffer from a crisis of spirit. He is an example to those who would settle comfortably into half - stepping and mediocracy, to those who look high into the clear summer sky squinting at the balazing sun and wishing for clouds because their eyes are hurting."

Laura Murphy, the candidate's younger sister, gave a stirring speech, in which she described how Billy, who was the eldest child in the family, provided leadership for them. (his younger siblings)

Recalling how Murphy taught them all how to swim, she metaphorically stated: "Billy's now trying to swim in the ocean, and he has a mean stroke."

She closed her speech by stating: "Billy is not a revolutionary — he is a conservative — he wants to conserve every man's civil liberties."

He attacked the sitting Judge philosophy and stated "We must have people with skills as well as principles . . . the sitting judge philosophy is not sacrosanct."

The evening ended on a festive note with much socializing among the guests, more feasting and tasting and with a surprise treat of Billy at the drums of the band for the evening for a solor bit.
