SYMPATHY TO

Sympathy cards to the family of Leroy Roberts Sr., of Grand Ave., who died Sept. 10. He was 55.

Mr. Roberts was one of our first black firemen. He won commendation for freedom before retiring from duty, due to injuries suffered in the line of duty.

Wife, Cecelia; 3 daughters, 4 sons, 4 grandchildren, 3 sisters, 2 brothers, survive.

And, to the family of Edward ('Brownie') Brown, who was eulogized at Emmanuel Christian Community Church. He was chief in the executive offices at Bethlehem Steel. His wife of 48 years, Mrs. Bertha Brown, survives.

Another longtime Bethlehem Steel worker (28 years), was Woodrow (Woody') Johnson, whose rites were at March Funeral Home.

He was noted as a musician played the sax beautifully — and was active for years in First Abyssinian Baptist where he served as usher and sang on the Gospel Choir.

MORE SYMPATHY

And remember the family of Joseph A. Bailey, a member of St. Mark United Methodist Church. A retired mattress company employee, he was a member of the Arch Social Club and the Order of Reindeer.

Also, the family of Mrs. Mattie Lou Johnson Sansbury, the nutritionist. She retired in 1979 after 14 years at Park Hill Nursery. She sang on the choir at Pentecostal Baptist Church.

More fellow citizens who died recently, ... remember their families in your prayers:

Mrs. Bessie Goynes, the teacher and member of St. Paul Methodist, where she was active in Willing Workers, Missionary Society;

George W. Smith, member of the Wilson Park Holy Church of Power;

Mrs. Carrie Elizabeth Ginyard, member Greater New Hope Baptist, who for many years was a radio evangelist heard Sunday mornings over WEBB.

This past May, she was voted, "Outstanding Mother," by the Dynamic Super Stars.

Also, Mrs. Lillian B. Lee, widow of Rev. Joseph Lee. She was an ordained minister, is survived by 11 children, 83 grandchildren and 76 great - grandchildren.

And, Mrs. Helen Louise Matthews, who was active in St. Mark's Methodist Church, Hanover, Md.; Despite illness, which confined her to wheel-chair, she made it to church regularly.

In her active years, she sang on the choir and was active in the United Methodist Women.

ELLA FITZGERALD

'First Lady of Song' to be honored by HU

Howard University will award an honorary degree of doctor of music at Ella Fitzgerald, the "First Lady of Song," at its annual opening convocation on Sept. 26. The convocation will officially begin Howard's 113th year of service.

Dr. James E. Cheek, president of the university, will deliver the convocation addr4ss entitled "If We Do Not, Then Who Will? The Continuing Burden to Undo the Yoke of Bondage."

The convocation is scheduled at 11. am, in Cramton Auditorium on the University campus and is open to the community and all students of the university.

Ella Fitzgerald is a world - renowned jazz singer and entertainer. She started her career by entering an amateur contest at the Apollo Theatre in Harlem at the age of 15, and a few years later in 1938 she gained worldwide fame with the recording of "A- Tisket . Tasket."

Since then, she has compiled a record that is rearely egualled. Her more than 100 albums have sold more than 25 million copies. Down Beat magazine named her best female jazz singer 18 consecutive years. The Playboy poll did the same thing for 13 years. She has earned nine Grammys. Harper's Bazaar put her on its "100 Most Accomplished Women of the 20th Century" list. The Los Angeles Times picked her as "Woman of the Year" in 1966.

Ms mFitzgerald has received citations from governments at city, state and national levels from around the world. And the trophies, statues, medals and plaques that have been bestowed on her are countless. She is a veteran of more than three decades of night club, television, film and concert appearances.

Dr. Geraldine P. Woods, chairman of the Board of Trustees of Howard University, will preside over the convocation.

Howard University, which is located in Northwest Washington, D.C., has approximately 11,000 students enrolled this year.

Black Caucus celebrating decade of achievement

The Congressional Black Caucus' Tenth Annual Legislative Weekend will be held in the nation's capital Sept. 26 to 28 under the theme "The Congressional Black Caucus Decade of Achievement: A Salute to the Black Family."

Rep. Cardiss Collins (D-Ill.) chairwoman of the 17-member congressional group, in announcing plans for the weekend, stressed the urgency of full participation by all black Americans in the activities. Nearly 2,000 persons from across the country have registered to attend.

"Rarely," said Mrs. Collins, "has the black constituency in this country been faced with the kinds of decisions and questions of economic and political survival, as we will face in the decade of the 80s. We must begin now to map strategies that will ensure the continuation in general.

"We want to hear from our brothers and sisters regarding their fears and concerns, so that we can begin to address these issues from a technicolor point of view. Therefore, we urge full black participation ... before it's too late."

Chairman of the Weekend, Cong. Julian Dixon (D-Calif.) stated that if everyone who attends the activities leaves with a sense of being part of a collective family, "then we will have begun to realize our goal of full participation for all Americans in our society as we celebrate our Tenth Anniversary."

The program begins with a plenary session Friday morning at the Rayburn House Office Building, to be followed by braintrust hearings and workshops on topics including health, housing, voter participation, criminal justice and education.

Afternoon sessions will be on topics including blacks in the corporate structure; minority enterprise and economic development; aging; energy; international affairs, youth and communications.

Saturday's activities include a spouses luncheon and fashion show; the annual awards program and entertainment; the Tenth Annual Dinner and a post-dinner dance, all at the Washington Hilton Hotel, conference headquarters.

VSU prexy to visit Baltimore

On Saturday, September 27, 1980 the Baltimore-Metro Chapter of the Virginia State University Alumni Association will be honored with a visit from Dr. Thomas M. Law, president of Virginia State University.

The Chapter is hoping for a total membership turnout for an "Open Forum" meeting with Dr. Law at 1 o'clock P.M. at Chic A Nele's, 3202 Park Circle Drive.

Concerned alumni will certainly want to hear and ask questions about the programs and plans underway at their Alma Mater.

Following the business meeting, a Fellowship Dinner will be held at Meuhaw's Restaurant, Security Boulevard and Beltway, at 7:30 p.m. at a cost of $10.00 per person. (Spouse or guest welcome).

3rd Republic anniversary

Ghana's ambassador appeals to U.S. for 'genuine' help

The Third Republic of the West African nation of Ghana is this week celebrating its first anniversary under a democratic constitution, following a seven-year rule by the military. The Peoples National Party government assumed rule of the contry on September 24 last year.

In a statement issued to mark the occasion, Ghana's recently appointed to ambassador to the United States, Dr. J. K. Baffour-Senkyire, said his country believes that the United States "has the resources to help develop the great potential of Africa and Ghana in particular, because, as the first black African country to emerge from colonialism to nationhood, we are optimistic that the path we have chosen and the cooperation we seek with the U.S. will have wideranging influence on the continent of Africa if our accomplishment becomes a success story."

The ambassador renewed the invitation issued by Ghana's president Dr. Hilla Limamto the people of the United States and friends of Ghana "to help the country out of its present lurch by coming forth with substantial, genuine assistance."

He emphasized that the request was not only for aid assistance, but "genuine investment which will leade to development of the enormous potential of Ghana for the mutual benefit of the investors and the people of Ghana."

He directed his invitation primarily to the industrialists and businessmen of America, said the ambassador, because as a leading technological country and champion of democracy, "we look to her for support in order that the experiment in democracy which Ghana has embarked upon and whose anniversary we celebrate on September 24 will succeed."

Ambassador Baffour-Senkyire pointed out that without massive aid and support in the form of investment, the threat to democracy in Ghana will persist and endanger the American-style constitution which the people of Ghana have adopted. It is the hope of my government," said the envoy, "That through Healthy relations with the U.S., the democratic ideals which we have embraced will become a reality, yielding fruitful benefits through development of infrastructures, and the benefits accruing from such relations to reflect in the lives of our people and thereby raise their aspirations.

The ambassador recounted some of the significant activities which the administration of the ruling Peoples National Party has initiated in the country over the past year in efforts to revive the economy.

The PNP administration, he pointed out, has already cleared long outstanding import bills up to December 1975 amounting to nearly $55 million.

"In spite of the severe constraints on the balance of payments, Ghana is now meeting its current external payments obligations on schedule. The ultimate result has been that we have reduced our national indebetedness in respect of other past short term obligations.

"This situation has revived the confidence of European countries in Ghana's economy. The total loan agreement signed with them amount to $345 million.

The determination of the PNP administration to plan according to avaialble foreign exchange resources is already yielding good results. Unlike previous years, every import license issued so far this year, is fully backed by foreign exchange.

The ambassador expressed his government's appreciation to the people and government of the U.S. for coming to their assistance with substantial food aid at a very crucial time in their lives, and thanked the various European governments, financial institutions like the OPEC fund, the EEC, the World Bank and the African Development Bank for rallying to the support of the Ghana government during it s first year of office.

"As the PNP Government enters the second phase of its rule," he stated, "we would like to assure friends of Ghana that the administration would continue to maintain an open and participatory government as a sure way of mobilising both human and material resources of the country in an attempt to find solutions to our multifarious and complex problems.

JUST THINKING

College recruiting questioned

By Al Sweeney

How do you handle a story that is an isolated example of exploitation without the reader getting the impression that the practice is more general than reported.

Blacks have been long victims of generalizations. There isn't a worker in an integrated setting who doesn't have a guilt feeling about a publicized misdeed of a black culprit.

Yet, theft and murder go unbated among the majority group without members of the majority shouldering the blame for indiscretions of the white brothers and sisters.

It is racial phenomena that has caused editors and reporters from dealing with scandals involving black institutions for fear that the negative image would rub off on the well-administered Johnsonian ones.

Yet, there comes a time, in the public interest, when this should be done. Such a situation has been brought to the attention of this writer involving one of our colleges of higher learning.

It seems that the college has received some funds to bolster its sagging financial problems to provide tuition for students.

In order to get students for whom the funding is based the Washington alumni of the college got heavily in the recruiting act to the point of providing bus transportation for the new students to the college.

Coming at a time, when parents are hard pressed to get their children into college, the effort looked like a Godsent deal.

According to our informants, the recruiters told the youth who accepted the invitation that not only room and board, but tuition and books would be financed in this special program.

With such a good deal, who would pass up the offer. Several bus loads of youths were transported to the college.

Once at the school, the recruits were herded into a dilipidated dormitory with broken windows, warped doors and dust ladened rooms with beds that would be unattractive to the habitues of the town's flophouse.

For ghetto dwellers, the country college conditions were too much to take. The girls, among the group, found that security was lacking at the school and some unwholesesome incidents arose.

Many of the recruited students returned to the District en masse and unhappy. They had some tallies to spin about the housing conditions and the unmet promises.

The promised grant turned out to be the signing of a student loan that would put the student in hock for years to come.

As you know, under the student loan program, the government guarantees the payment of the loan if the student defaults, the college still gets the money.

As far as I am concerned, it is cruel process that exploits high expectations of parents and youth.

When a parent is asked, did he or she get the expressed promise in writing, the usual reply is that participation was based on "good faith."

The "good faith" aspect of it leaves the parents and the recruits vulnerable.

The college officials explains that they were misunderstood.

They indicted that they would find a way for the recruits to obtain an education at the college. This way was through the liberal processing of a student loan or participation in a work-study program.

The parents, the college officials indicate, didn't listen.

And I guess the parents were so anxious to get their children into a school of higher education that they didn't take the time to get it all spelled out.

The episode is unfortunate because it comes at time when many national leaders support a comprehensive effort to save the nation's black colleges.

As a graduate of a black college, I can attest to the benefits enjoyed by a black college student. Coming out of an integrated high school, where I was one of three black graduates in a class of 125, I can assure you that the black experience can't be fully appreciated unless does have been paid in the black collegiate environment.

The integration problems that are facing black colleges and some of the sadly demands coming out the federal agency responsible for fair education have compounded the problems at black institutions.

Followers of Tony Brown's television programs are aware of his distaste for gimmicks being utilized at predominantly black institutions to attract white students.

It seems that at some of the black state colleges, white students get full scholarships to attend schools tuition-free.

In other words, white students are bought to attend the black schools, while the same type of scholarships are not being given to blacks to attend predominantly white schools.

There is no question that the future of predominantly black schools is in the balance.

The need for black institutions was never greater than today. Unfortunately, there are almost two generations of youth that have to be written off because of the inferior education provided in our large urban centers.

Black colleges have played a role in providing remedial education for those youth who did not received a quality education in primary institutions. Where the University of Maryland must accept all black graduates with a certain average, its faculty is not interested in keeping the students there. Thus, there is a huge failure rate during the first year among black students.

Schools like Morgan State and Bowie State have faculty members whose principal interest in the black student is motivating them to learn. They feel that a flunked student is a reflection on their teaching ability.

It's that philosophy that keeps black colleges going.

However, the unwholesome recruiting manifested by one of our black institutions that is apparently using a body of students like a farmer uses a herd of cattle to obtain another dollar, as isolated as it might be, is symptomatic of a sickness spawned by the depressed economic conditions of the day.

BIRTHDAY TRIBUTE

DILLAHAY - A Birthday Tribute in memory of ELDER WILLIAM ELMER A DILLAHAY, (FRENCHIE), on his Birthday September 23, who departed this life one year ago.
Gone is the face I loved so dear,
Silent is the voice I loved to hear.
Too far away for me to see,
But not too far to remember me.
Sleep on my Darling Son, and take your rest
I loved you, but God loved you best.
Devoted Mother, SARAH JONES

IN MEMORIAM

BOSTON - In memory of my husband and our father, WILLIAM C. BOSTON, who passed away September 26, 1972
Today our hearts are heavy
Our thoughts are sad and slow
On how we miss you husband and father dear
but no one but God in Heaven can see
Some day time heals an aching heart
But this is not true
For every day years have passed through
And our hearts still ache for you.
Your loving wife JULIA BOSTON and FOUR DAUGHTERS
GRADDY - In loving memory of my husband, our father and grandfather IRVING L. SR. who passed away September 26, 1962
The darling dream of life rests on But still the vacant chair
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile
Of the one who once sat there
LOVING WIFE
CHILDREN and GRANDCHILDREN

MACK - In memory of our Loved Ones: GEORGE A. MACK, who passed away September 26, 1961 and HARRY E. MACK, who passed away September 26, 1972
On, Oh, freedom—before I'll be a slave,
I'll be buried in my grave...
Then go home to my Lord and be free.
THE MACK FAMILY

IN MEMORIAM

NELSON - A Tribute of love to the memory of my husband and our father, ROBERT NELSON, who walked into the Kingdom 2 years ago, September 25, 1978.
Sometimes lists of the sunset, Away from the world of strife,
Our hearts are sometimes resting In a land that knows no night.
The golden gate stood open
He saw you coming and
He knew you needed rest.
God's Garden must be beautiful,
For He always picks the best.
Loving Wife, DOROTHY

TANNER - NEIL WILLIAMS - ALFRED CORNISH, EFFIE SCOTT

SHIPLEY - In loving memory of my dear son, EDWARD P. SHIPLEY, JR., who departed this life nine years ago, September 22, 1971:

I kiss my tears when I speak your name
And for the echo in my heart remains the same.
I love you suffer on so much,
Until God closed your eyes with His gentle touch.
And that I see you every day,
Eternal rest for you I pray.
Devoted Mother, MRS.

VERONICA S. WESTCOTT

WILLIAMS - In sincere, loving remembrance of my dear husband, LEWIS SR. who passed away September 25, 1979
'Tis hard to break the tender cord
when love has bound the heart
'Tis hard, so hard to speak the words, must we forever part
We cannot tell who next may fall beneath the chastening rod
One must be first but let us all prepare to meet our God
