Dickey's arrival didn't chase Joe Washington, ex-Colt says

Speaking publicly for the first time since being traded by Baltimore to Washington on NFL draft day last spring, master back Joe Washington asserted Tuesday that it was management, not Curtis Dickey, that triggered his desire to leave the Colts.

Many Baltimore fans — and sportswriters — speculated that Washington's anxiety to be traded was due to the arrival of Curtis Dickey, the celebrated 1980 first-round draft pick from Texas.

The general feeling was that Joe was irked by the fact he was being platooned and often supplanted by the fleet newcomer.

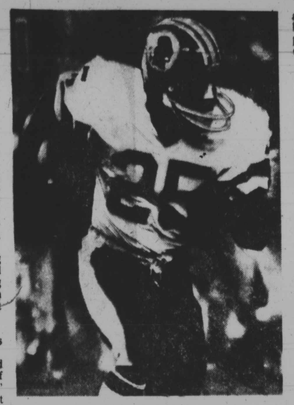
Not so, says Washington.

"Playing behind someone, or in front of someone, is no big deal," said Washington. "Last year, this year or any year, if I play well, I'll earn playing time. If I don't, they'll set me down.

I had asked the Colts to start negotiating my contract, which was to expire after last season.

They started, then stopped, then refused. Then some other things weren't handled the way they said they would handle them.

"It became obvious they weren't worried about my contract because I was expendable. That's when I decided I wanted out."



Redskin Joe Washington convinced he was 'used' by Colts

Washington looks back now and believes he was "used" by the Colts, and not just as a running back.

"I carried a lot in the first part of games," he recalled. "But after we'd make adjustments at halftime, someone else would carry on the plays where I was supposed to get the ball. I felt like a guinea pig, the guy being sacrificed to see what the defense would do.

"I don't mind carrying on those plays. That's fine. But I want to carry when we start running the plays where I don't get hammered, too."

Herschel insured

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Georgia's All-America running back Herschel Walker has taken out an insurance policy with Lloyd's of London for an estimated $1 million.

Walker, who as a freshman led Georgia to college football's national championship and later turned down an offer from the Canadian Football League to turn pro, said Tuesday that he took out a policy against injury with the insurance company, but he declined to name the amount.

Various reports, however, put the figure at $1 million.

"My family felt it would be in my best interest to look into an insurance policy," Walker said. "I discussed it with them a great deal. I feel it is basically a private matter as long as it is within the rules and should be kept within our family."

Officials say the policy will not violate NCAA regulations as long as the school does not pay the insurance premiums, which are said to run in the $5,000 to $7,000 range.

Walker is expected to pay the premium through an agreement with a bank in which the principal will be deferred until he turns professional and can afford to make the payments.

Area four at 'the Rock'

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa. — Four area youngsters — two each from Washington and Baltimore — are candidates for the 1981 Slippery Rock College football team.

Running back Rick Porter (Milford Mill High) and wide receiver Andre Franklin (Edmondson) are the Baltimore products.

Wide receiver Robert Green (Cardozo) and wide receiver Mike Talley (Ballou) are the D.C. prospects.

Porter, a 3-year letterman, is team captain. The other three are lettered sophomores.

Ron Terry cops Elder golf cash

Ron Terry of Aberdeen, Md., captured the pro purse of $2,000 in the the annual Lee Elder Celebrity - Pro - Am golf tournament Sunday at Langston.

Terry, whose father Vernon is a Maryland state champion, fired 69 - 65 for a 135 total in the 36 - hole tournament at DC's Langston Golf Course.

He sank a birdie on the final hole to edge Fred Gibson, assistant pro at Ft. Meade for the top prize.

Nate Starks of St. Petersburg, Fla., Bobby Strobble and George Wallace, both of Atlanta, tied for third.

Vernon Lockhart, pro at Freeport in the Bahamas, captained the winning team which included amateurs Luther Donaldson, Cable Hepburn and McNair Brown.

An estimated 1500 persons watched Elder and popular tour star Lee Trevino open the tourney with a Saturday exhibition.

Negative streaks on line as Colts visit Seahawks

The Colts are in Seattle tonight (Friday) to see whether they or their Seahawk rivals will manage to continue their respective streaks.

Both have lost all their games prior to this final pre-season contest. The Colts have bowed to New Orleans (24-23), New York Giants (20-17), and Washington Redskins (13-7). The Seahawks have been beaten by San Francisco (27-24), St. Louis (30-21), and San Francisco again (24-7).

For the third consecutive week, a sub-par performance by the Colts special teams proved to be a key deficiency in a Baltimore loss as the Colts dropped their third preseason contest, 13-7, to the Washington Redskins last Saturday night at Memorial Stadium.

A 54-yard punt return by the Redskins Mike Nelms midway through the third quarter proved to be the final margin of victory. In Baltimore's two previous games, errant and inshandled punt snaps and missed extra points have contributed to the Colts demise.

Against the Redskins, breakdowns on the punt coverage unit (another TD return nullified by a penalty) were major factors in the loss and Colts head coach Mike McCormack is concerned.

"Ability and desire determine a good special teams performer," says McCormack. "You need not only good natural athletic ability but also a desire to excell on those units. There will be changes made on the special teams this week," according to the Colts head coach.
