If you ask me

Hat's off!

Our salute this week goes to 11-year-old Gregory Schmoke. He is a seventh grader at the Jemicy School.

If you like to see youngsters who look good and seem perfectly at ease among grownups, you would have enjoyed watching him on Thursday evening.

He was in attendance at the lawyers' salute to his father, Kurt Schmoke, the candidate for Baltimore City State's Attorney.

When the television camera focused on him, he was explaining to a woman guest what he hopes to be when he grows up.

Relatives reveal he talks constantly of his hopes to be a writer, already has to his credit scripts for movies he plans to produce, even has designed props.

It was a joy to watch him — dressed in his white shirt and tie — and looking good.

Hats off to Gregory Schmoke.

Please send nominations to this column's Hats Off section. We try to focus on our young people who do well and look good.

Our theory is that too many of us adults only notice young people when they perform poorly or mess up.

Related

As we moved around the room at the Schmoke salute at the Hyatt, (mentioned above), we had reinforced for us the fact that many Baltimoreans are related.

Take Mr. Schmoke's wife, Dr. Patricia Schmoke, for example. She is the eye doctor.

Her mother and dad, are Cleo and Joseph Locks 3rd. Her grandparents are Mae and Joseph Locks Jr. The Locks family own and operates the 90-year-old funderal home located in East Baltimore.

Also present, Mrs. Schmoke's aunt and uncle, Cleo and Robert Diggs, the educators.

Cuff Note: Mr. Schmoke's dad is Murray Schmoke, the Aberdeen chemist who is well known as a leader in Douglas Memorial Church and the Morehouse College Alumni Association.

He and his wife, Elizabeth, the retired teacher, were also present.

So was Schmoke's mother, Irene, of Charleston, S.C. She is the wife of AME Bishop Frank Madison Reid.

Youngest member of Kurt Schmoke's family in attendance was 2-year-old daughter, Kathyerine. Many times during the evening, he held her in his arms as he greeted supporters.

Music for the Schmoke reception was by a group known as the Synergy.

Drummer is Scott Peaker. His brother, Derek Brooks is on keyboard.

Their mother, Mrs. Gloria Brooks Peaker, was among guests. She reminded us that 28 years ago Derek was featured in this column as baby contest winner. Time flies!

Other members of the combo are Terry Battle, bass and Dave Hartley, guitar.

In Nassau

Chi Delta Mu, the national medical fraternity, held its grand conclave last month in the Bahamas.

Convention hotel was the Ambassador Beach in Nassau.

In this predominantly black resort, black people are in managerial positions at the hotel and in government.

And, of course, the Playboy Club, headquartered at the Ambassador, features black bunnies, like 20-year-old Deborah Hall, (Dee Dee to friends). A pretty sight.

Look at accompanying photo and see if you don't agree.

Baltimore area Chi members in attendance were: Drs. and Mesdames Walter Livingston, Josh Mitchell, Robert Phillips, and Edward McDaniels, and Ernest Brooks and his three youngsters, Ernest, Neale and Eric.

Baltimore guests there were: Dr. Eugenie Anderson, and Messrs. and Mesdames George Jude, Antoine Elias, Otis Froe, and Charles Turner and Dorothy Moore.

Cuff Note: Dr. Phillips was elected Grand Organizer, Dr. Brooks was elected Member-at-Large.

Baltimore's Herb Brown of Mondawmin Travel, arranged the trip for delegates from MD, DC, PA, Ohio, VA, NY and MO.

Paradise

Nassau is the capital of the Bahamas — two hours by plane from Baltimore, via Miami. In late June, the weather is pleasant, mainly because of the breeze from the Atlantic Ocean.

Prime Minister Lynden O. Pindling is top man, recently elected to another term. Of course, he's black.

Highlight of a visit to Nassuis a trip to nearby Paradise Island. Chi members and guests enjoyed the luxury of dining at the new $28 million Paradise Grand Hotel and seeing the spectacular stage show — unbelievably beautiful and entertaining.

Cuff note: Newspapers in Nassau resemble black media, that is, the black people are main features in pictures and stories.

On a tour, we asked a bus driver who lived in a luxurious house on the hill. He answered, "middle class people." When we inquired whether they were black or white, he shrugged, "we don't think about color, we are in the majority here."

We couldn't help but think that while blacks are in the majority number-wise, a number of the businesses and stores we passed had white people in the background. Yes, we were up front.

If you're a perfume lover, you'll adore the prices for name-brands in Nassau — many of your favorites are a third of the price you have to pay here in the States.

About people

Dr. Zelma Webb Anderson, the Oakland, CA. reading specialist, is in the East visiting relatives and friends.

This week, she guested here in her hometown with an aunt, Mrs. Evelyn Haywood of Monticello Rd. She's the nurse supervisor.

Cuff note: Mrs. Haywood had two high school grads in her family last month.

Grandson, Barron Willis 3rd, finished Poly, will be attending Merritt College in Oakland in the fall. Granddaughter, Emma Willis, a Western High grad, will go to Towson State.

They are the children of Barron Willis 2nd of Berkeley, CA. and Mrs. Margaret Willis, the Baltimore nurse.

Harriet and Wilbert Jones's cookout at their Liberty Heights Ave. home brought together a number of longtime friends. It was also their 28th wedding anniversary.

About were: Grace and Winston Hunt, Liz and Ed Williams, Ernestine and Charles Mitchner, Brenda and John Morgan, Louise and Clarence Hines, Dr. and Mrs. Simon Carter, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Banfield, Dr. and Mrs. Harold Ramsey.

Also Richella Walker and her son and daughter-in-law, the Jerry Walkers and their children from NC, Dr. Dollie Walker and her niece, Alice, from Philadelphia; Vivian Pendleton, Datie Russell, Eloise Parker, Phoebe Goff;

And, Mildred Forehand, Emmie Gilkes, Sue Mansfield and Leon Johnson, Olivia Dixon and James McDonald, Helen Lee, Diana Lewis and Anthony Arrive and Mattie Gardner.

At Gardner's

Day before, Mrs. Gardner had her annual July 4 cookout out Randallstown way.

Guests who gathered included: Messrs. and Mesdames Aaron Ellis, Ben Foreman and her mother, Mrs. Meredith; Robert Hall, William Henderson, Waymon Holly, Charles Hillen, Marcellus Moore, Edward McDaniels, Otis Froe.

Also Senator Verda F. Welcome, Messrs. and Mesdames David Wright, Alfred Woolridge, Queener Willis, Roland Williams, Errol Taylor, Edward Williams;

And, Myrtice Bennett, Erma DeBeal, Ruth Rosedom, Seretha Greene, Hermione Weaver, Leon Gilmore, Carolyn Smith and daughter, Sherri, Ellen D. Howard and Dora Hutchinson.

Cuff note: Mrs. Gardner's sister, Mrs. Nora Walker of Burgess, VA, is here visiting her daughter, Marjorie Payton in Columbia.

More people

A huge crowd of well wishers turned out on Wednesday evening (June 30), for the salute to Dr. Albin Kuhn, retiring University of Maryland administrator.

It was at College Park. Speaker after speaker credited Dr. Kuhn for being "a truly caring person who worked quietly to help everyone." during his 44 years service at the U.

Dr. William Hytche, chancellor at the Eastern Shore campus, (UMES), drew a laugh when he spoke. With him were two professors carrying a huge package.

He announced to the gathering, "I'm the chancellor, the other fellows are helping me...."

The package contained a handsome portrait of Dr. Kuhn. It was the work of UMES professor of art, Kenneth Rodgers. He told this writer he did the lifelike portrait from a photo in eight days and had only seen Dr. Kuhn once. It was excellent!

Cuff note: Dr. Hytcho recalled that Dr. Kuhn played a big role in helping UMES get new facilities and the honors program now at the Princess Anne branch.

Others noted Dr. Kuhn was the architect of the Baltimore County campus (UMBC).

UM Board of Regents announced approval of naming the campus library there in his honor — a real tribute, since most of the buildings at UMBC are named for bodies of water.

The Wells Printers, which prepare many deaths programs for Baltimore area families, had two deaths in the family last week.

An aunt, Mrs. Dorothy Collins, wife of Frank C. Collins of Gilray Drive, and stepsister-in-law, Mrs. Evangeline Smith, wife of Clarence Smith.

Both funerals were on Thursday, (July 1), Mrs. Collins' rites were at John Wesley Methodist, Mrs. Smith's at Bibleway Baptist.

In addition to her husband and her printer kin, Charles E. Wells, Mrs. Smith is survived by daughter, Joyce McCrory; two sisters, 5 grandchildren and 3 great-grandchildren.

E. Dale Adkins Jr., the Salisbury lawyer, onetime state senator and judge, who died last month at the age of 66, was well known in our community.

He was for over 15 years, (1952-67), a member of the Board of Trustees at Morgan State College, now University.

Dan Ridout

The Rev. Daniel L. Ridout's family has created a scholarship fund for music majors at the University of MD. Eastern Shore (UMES), in his memory.

The beloved Methodist Church minister, was well known for his musical ability.

First off, he wrote the school song for UMES. He helped revise the Methodist Church hymnal, he organized and directed the Great Hymns Choir, which appeared in concert in many sections of the country — the first integrated group to gain wide support.

Rev. Ridout died June 15, at the Methodist Home in Delaware. He was 84. Rites were at Baltimore's Metropolitan Church.

We knew Rev. Ridout, (Dan to many), best as a writer and lecturer and as administrative assistant to the late Bishop Edgar A. Love. We recall he had excellent rapport with the press and his news releases were timely and well prepared.

After the Methodist Church desegregated, Rev. Ridout went on to serve in a similar capacity to Rev. John Wesley Lord and to become District Superintendent of the newly integrated Chestertown District on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

In addition to writing the school song for his Alma Mater, UMES, Dr. Ridout composed hymns, wrote poetry, newspaper articles, many of which were published in the AFRO.

He edited the Baltimore church's official publication, the Baltimore Area Messenger, and authored the study course in Christian Race Relations (1935).

Among the sketches he authored, "Negro Music and Literature," an outline of the spiritual and the life of Dunbar.

Daniel Lyman Ridout was a truly talented and gentle man. He had many rich experiences which he shared with others. He was a giant in the great Methodist Church.

Survivors are son, Daniel Lyman Ridout Jr., New Castle, DE., daughters, Danita and Patricia Ridout, NY., whose mother, the former Frances Jefferson, died in 1974.

Four grandchildren and a great-grandchild aslso survive.

Atlanta

Atlanta, GA. was the site of the Peachtree Road Race on July 4. People came from all over the country and abroad — 25,000 of them — to compete in the 6.2 mile race through the heart of the city.

It was a sight to behold — people of all sizes, shapes and colors. Hotels were crowded for the 13th annual event. Mayor Andrew Young was at the finish line to congratulate winners.

The runners began at 7:30 a.m. Spectators who lined the route were dressed in variety of attire as were the participants.

A 24 - year - old Colorado man, in Hawaiian print shorts, came in first - 28 minutes 16 seconds.

At Atlanta Big Bethel AME Church later in the day, members had a treat from a visitor. Rev. Anthony Jackson, a student at Wilberforce University who hails from Hamilton, Bermuda, was guest soloist. What a tremendous voice!

The pastor is Rev. McKinley Young, who has been at his post two years.

His delivery resembles that of Rev. John Bryant of Baltimore's Bethel Church.

Other visitors at the service included, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Epps, Kansas City; Mrs. Jimmy Wilson, Dayton, OH.; John Moore, Pasadena, CA., and A. L. Cherry, Rome, GA.

Grandchild note: Our two - year - old grandson was a dream. He slept peacefully through the sermon and the communion service.

Cuff: You haven't lived until you visit Stone Mountain, outside Atlanta.

Thousands of people all over the place, for the fireworks display.

Baltimore's Inner Harbor crowds on a holiday are small the mobs which turn out compared to the mobs which turn out in Atlanta.

One difference we noted — a large number of Confederate flags carried by people at Stone Mountain — white people that is.

Nevertheless, black people were in large numbers at the area and used all facilities. Guess they have to keep the flags to remind them of their good old days?

IN NASSAU — Playboy Club bunny, 20 - year - old Deborah Hall strikes a pretty picture. See, If You Ask Me for details.

Del. Lena Lee steps down promises to support Elijah Cummings

Out-going House Delegate Lena K. Lee is throwing her full support behind Baltimore attorney Elijah E. Cummings, in the race for her former seat in the new 30th legislative district. Del. Lee made the announcement at a press conference introducing the candidate and explaining her retirement due to sickness and age, Wednesday, July 7.

Del. Lee leaves the state house as a 16 year veteran legislator. The retiring delegate looked for a woman lawyer to endorse for the seat, but when the effort failed, she simply sought a black lawyer. There is a "crisis need" for a black lawyer in the legislature, she said.

In supporting Cummings, Del. Lee explained, "the legislature at Annapolis takes on added significance with the return of state's rights" and the consequent abandonment of certain social programs by the federal government.

Her search brought Mr. Cummings to her attention, whom Del. Lee says "even his political opponents say...is a man of compassion."

Cummings, a 31 - year-old Baltimorean is running because "in Reaganomics, we need people who have a lot on the ball...who can deal with government legislators and administrators on their level," the political hopeful told the AFRO.

The candidate is the senior partner in Cummings and Smith law firm, president of the Monumental City Bar Association, a University of Maryland School of Law graduate and a former Chief Judge on Maryland's Moot Court Board.

Del. Larry Young

Del. Larry Young at White House when Reagan signs Voting Rights Act

Since my election of the House of Delegates in 1974, I have had the opportunity to participate in many memorable events. But recently I took part in an event which will forever provide me with a feeling of great pride and renewed by faith in God and all mankind.

It all started when I received a phone call from Steve Rhodes' office just before noon on Monday, June 28, 1982. Rhodes is the special assistant to President Reagan who works with black elected officials.

His office was calling to invite me to the historic signing of the voting rights act extension of 1982 on June 29 at the White House.

Undoubtedly, June 29, is a day that I will remember as one of the most memorable occasions in my entire life. As I approached the White House on foot, the symbolism of this great day began to have its impact.

I thought about all of the great leaders Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Roy Wilkins, Fannie Mae Lou Hammer and other giants of the past and surely felt that their spirits must be jumping for joy today.

As I stood at the White House gate for clearance, in front of me was the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy who had spoken at the 8 a.m. service at my own church New Shiloh Baptist Church just last week. Behind me was Mayor Johnny Ford of Tuskegee, Alabama.

I asked Rev. Abernathy what his feelings were about this day and he told me, "If you hold his hand, God's unflinching hand, you've got to believe things are going to get better."

I entered the White House and as I approached the ceremonial room with the other guests, I reflected on the hundreds and thousands of people who died, marched, wrote letters, made phone calls and yes prayed to make this day a reality.

The ceremonial room was full and there were at least 300 other guests, in addition to myself. I looked around the room and saw most of the greatest civil rights champions of our nation. Ben Hooks, Rev. Jesse Jackson, Coretta Scott King, John Jacob, Dorothy Height, Ted Kennedy, Mac Mathias and Thad Garrett, to name a few. In fact, someone whispered loudly that if a bomb was dropped on the White House all of the black leadership in America would perish.

True, all of these champions were in the ceremonial room but I had the distinct pleasure of standing next to the 101 st member of the U. S. Senate Clarence Mitchell Jr., What a presence he has. As I saw the sparkle in his eyes, I felt honored just to be standing with him.

At the age of 32, I felt I had not made my mark in this movement yet, but this day and momentous occasion gave me the opportunity to reaffirm what Rep. Parren Mitchell says so often. I thought about P. J.'s words as the president entered the room and proceeded to make his strongest statement yet on civil rights while people from all walks of life witnessed the signing of this historic piece of legislation.

In the words of our congressman, "Now more than ever, the spirit to struggle the power to prevail."

Neighbors to salute Curt Anderson July 14

The St. Georges Avenue and Kimberleigh Road Association will salute Curtis "Curt" Anderson on July 14, 7 to 10 p.m. at the Meatcutters Union Hall, 5901 Harford Rd.

Former Channel 2 anchorman, Anderson is running for the House of Delegates and his friends and neighbors want to make sure he knows they are behind him.

One of the features of the evening in addition to meeting the candidate will be Robin Harmon, Miss Maryland for 1982. WJZ-TV anchor Rick Young, Jack and Susan Bowden of WMAR-TV and former WMAR-TV anchor man Tom Sweeney are also expected to attend.

Anderson is running in the racially mixed 44th legislative district of Northeast Baltimore. The recent legislative redistricting has made the area nearly 50 percent black.

Anderson has also formed a coalition with State Sen. Julian Lapides, Del. Frank Robery and Fred Broccolino. The Lapides-Anderson ticket will be the first integrated senate house ticket in several years.

The 32-year-old father of two children has started his door to door campaigning. Anderson said, "I know I am fairly well known in the community having lived in it for most of my life and having worked on television for six years, but I think the people here need to know more about me and that is why I am trying to meet as many as I can going door to door."
