Rev. Debyii Thomas ordained an itinerate elder

They can now be called team ministers. The Rev. Debyii Sababu Thomas, wife of the Rev. Michael Thomas was recently ordained as an itinerate elder at the annual AME Baltimore conference of the second district.

Her husband, Rev. Thomas is pastor of Adams Chapel AME Church, 3811 Egerton Rd. Rev. Mrs. Thomas says she plans to work with her husband and develop Adams Chapel.

As an itinerant elder, she can now be a pastor of a church if appointed by the Bishop.

At Adams Chapel, Rev. Mrs. Thomas serves as minister to women. She is a graduate of Morgan State University and is currently a student in the master's program at Harvard Divinity School.

She has also done graduate work at Howard Divinity School and Boston University School of Theology.

Rev. Mrs. Thomas served on the ministerial staffs of Bethel AME Church, where the Rev. Dr. John R. Bryant is pastor and St. Paul AME Church in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The 33-year-old minister calls it a "blessing" to be the only female minister in the second district.

In 1980, her husband, the Rev. Thomas, was ordained a deacon and Bishop John Hurst Adams challenged the Baltimore conference to start a new AME Church since there had not been a new church in 32 years.

It was Palm Sunday, April 4, 1982 when Adams Chapel AME Church opened its doors for the first worship service. Services are being held in a rented facility of Holy Nativity Episcopal Church, with the adjacent building at 3809 Egerton Rd., used as an Outreach Center.

Adams Chapel is continuing to grow. On March 30, Rev. Thomas signed a contract of sale for the purchase of Holy Nativity Episcopal Church.

Today, there are more than 300 members and "I did not think it would be a year, I thought we would work out an agreement to share the main facility. I saw our congregation growing," said Rev. Thomas.

Speaking of purchasing Holy Nativity Episcopal Church as Adams' Chapel's new church home, Rev. Thomas said, "I look at it as a blessing. People have to struggle to find a parking space on Sundays. Many churches are only Sunday churches. You can't meet people by being open only on Sundays. What about a person who has not eaten during the week," said Rev. Thomas.

Adams Chapel Church is open seven days a week and is known as a "community oriented church."

Rev. Thomas says the church is the place where activities ought to take place. The word of God says it is the churches' responsibility to see people fed, comforted and receive clothes. It is not social services' responsibility.

As part of their outreach program, Adams Chapel has sponsored two missionaries to Southern Africa, served 350 families food, clothing and assisted in paying gas and electrict bills.

As of the quarterly conference on March 7, 827 people have been provided with food, clothing, shelter, utility assistance and counseling by the Outreach staff of Adams Chapel AME Church.

Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church is 135 years old

Mrs. Charlotte M. Perry presided at the 135th anniversary service of Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church on April 17.

Marvin C. Davis was chairperson, Norma Bracy was co-chairperson and the Rev. R. J. Daniels is pastor.

Old Madison Street church has been distinguished by long succession of pastors who were not only exceptional preachers but outstanding civic leaders.

The Rev. R. C. Gailbraith, the first elected minister served the church faithfully from 1849 to 1865. It was during his ministry that the affairs of the church were so well organized and administered that it reached the first place among the black churches in the city, a place it still holds today.

Among ministers who followed Rev. Gailbraith were the Reverends Hiram R. Revels, who later became the United States senator from Mississippi. He was followed by Rev. William J. Carr, Rev. R. B. Johns, Rev. John H. Jackson, Rev. Charles Hedges and Rev. William H. Weaver.

From 1905 to 1918 the pulpit was held by Rev. Leonard Z. Johnson, who resigned to become a professor of English at Howard University. Rev. 1920 to 1942, and the Rev. William W. Walker followed from 1920 to 1942, and the Rev. Nerina J. Daniels has served as pastor from 1944.

Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church took the name of the street on which it stood was organized at a time when blacks were not permitted to hold titles and deeds to property. The church was controlled by a self perpetuating white board of trustees. It was Elder J. Edward Fisher who purchased three pieces of church owned property in 1927 and made possible the move from Madison Street to Madison Avenue.

Rev. Daniels observed the total power vested in the board of trustees and prevailed to have the charter of the church revised in order to render the controls into a body of duly elected trustees subject to the will of the congregation. The change was enacted in 1948 and the name of the church was changed to Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The church has grown under the direction of its present pastor and officers. In order to involve the church membership into active Christian participation, the pastor has revitalized the United Presbyterian Women's Association, the Westminster Youth Fellowship, The Ladies Guild, Mariner's Club of Young Married Couples, Church Council and the Mapcheckers.

Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church has provided City Jail services, contributed food to the hunger campaign and money to the Kidney Foundation. The members have also distributed baskets at Thanksgiving and Christmas and promoted scholarship aid and ministerial counseling.

In the field of Christian education, the church has sponsored series of church school programs. The Sunday School features such activities as Vacation Bible School, summer camps, exchange services with pastors and choirs and congregations of local churches and the annual senior and junior high school communicant's class.

Dr. Herbert D. Valentine was the guest speaker for the 4 p. m. rededication services on April 17. Other guest participants were Mayor William Schaefer, Sen. Clarence W. Blount, Rev. Charles K. Norville, Mrs. Mabel S. Gee and the Rev. Harold G. Nixon.

Deacons work involves assisting the pastor

Editor's note: An article that recently appeared on the Living Church Page on the role of a deacon was not written by the Rev. Alfred C. D. Vaughn, pastor of Grace Memorial Baptist Church.

By Deacon James Woods

Deacons are officers of the church set aside by the church for a particular work that was mandated long ago by the first church at Jerusalem.

The leadership of the holy spirit gave rise to the office of deacon in the New Testament church. It was divine wisdom that brought deacons into being and devine ends were to be accomplished.

Most Bible scholars are familiar with the Acts of the Apostles. Although the word deacon is not named, it is a matter of general agreement that in Acts six chapters, first to seven verse, the election of those seven men is the beginning of the deacon as a church worker.

All deacons since that early time have become a part of those seven noble men who were selected to be of service, and administer to the needs of the widows, orphans and needy of the Jerusalem church.

That devine law enacting the deaconship at Jerusalem has never been repealed, changed or modified in any way. The law is still in full force and if the law is disregarded by us, we become criminal before God.

In some of the basic work of deacons we find that most churches will involve themselves at one time or another in seeing that their deacons carry out these functions.

We must never forget that the work of the deacon is complicated and extensive. His work includes the care of members of the household of faith. The oversight of the door into the church. The charge of the door out of the church, discipline etc., The duty of caring for the general spiritual welfare of the household as a unit.

The last duty or work of the deacon has caused most of the problems, confusions and general unrest in our modern day churches.

You must understand this point, by devine law deacons are placed over all of the temporalities of the church. Deacons were appointed for this specific and definite purpose.

All the property and funds which belong to the church, as a church are supposed to be placed under the direction of its deacon. The deacons command of these church funds and property is not absolute, but is limited to such use as the church body may order.

No church without allowing its deacons to preside over its temporal affairs is legally or fully organized, nor can they properly claim to be in every respect Christ's church.

The Deacons Conference of Baltimore and Vicinity members believe that deacons work also involves assisting our pastors in putting over God's program.

While assisting our pastors, deacons will be working along side the membership, sharing their responsibilities, their anxieties and their joys.

As deacons we must have the courage that grows out of a deep commitment to Jesus Christ. We have been commissioned to serve and bear witness for Jesus.

Study launched to determine needs of Catholic schools

Archbishop James A. Hickey has announced the launching of a major study of secondary education in the Archdiocese of Washington.

The study will assess the needs for Catholic secondary education in the Archdiocese until the year 2000.

The study will help determine the needs of high school students and develop and evaluate models to meet these needs, focusing on the major regions of the Archdiocese: the District of Columbia, Montgomery County, Prince George's County and Southern Maryland.

As a result of this study, a comprehensive plan will be developed to identify ways to best use the limited resources available in the Archdiocese.

Archbishop Hickey said that "the success of the study will be directly proportionate to our ability to identify needs, to generate and evaluate options and to implement a plan of action."

The study will be coordinated by a Committee appointed by Archbishop Hickey in consultation with the Major Superiors of the Religious Communities who staff these schools.

This Committee will be chaired by Auxiliary Bishop Thomas W. Lyons. Bishop Lyons served as Superintendent of Catholic Schools in the Archdiocese from 1966 to 1973. The Coordinating Committee will be comprised of a member of the Provincial Board of each of the Religious Communities which now serve in the high schools and selected Archdiocesan officials.

In addition, selected members of the Archdiocesan Board of Education, representing parents and other educational [illegible] will serve on the Coordinating Committee.

The principal task of the Coordinating Committee will be to supervise the work of a Study Team which will be named to actually conduct the study.

The Study Team will collect data from various constituencies—parents, educators, pastors, etc.—within the Archdiocese and develop a series of recommendations which will then be forwarded to the Coordinating Committee for critique and evaluation. Ultimately these findings will be forwarded to the Archbishop and the Major Superiors for decision making.

Groups presently conducting individual studies will be invited to participate in this study in a major way.

The study will be initiated this summer with goal of completion by the end of May 1984.

Archbishop Hickey pointed out that undertaking this study does not affect decisions already made regarding All Saints and St. Patricks' High Schools.

Implementation of these projects is now underway. The Archbishop indicated he is very pleased with "the enthusiastic response and offers of cooperation [illegible] of the Religious Community superiors."

This marks the first time that the Archdiocese and the Religious Communities will cooperate in such a comprehensive evaluation of the needs and resources for secondary education in the Archdiocese to develop a comprehensive plan for meeting these needs.
