
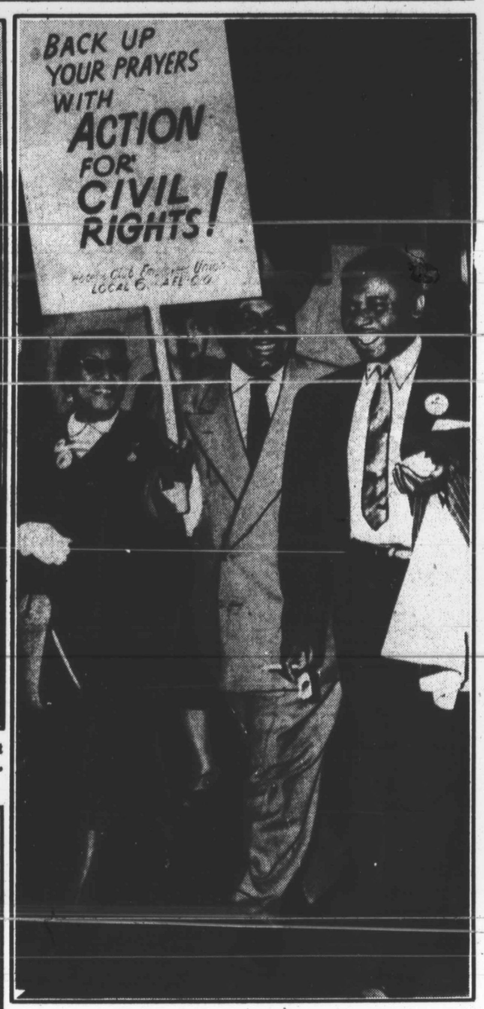
UP FRONT in the 1963 March on Washington were nationally known Civil Rights activists of the day, the late Whitney Young executive director of the National Urban League; Roy Wilkins, executive director of the NAACP; A. Philip Randolph, president of Sleeping Car Porters; and the late Walter Reuther, automobile workers union head.



TYPICAL MARCHERS of 1963 are the persons above who held the hope that action would follow the gigantic demonstration.

REJOICING IN THE SUCCESS of the day, Aug. 28,1963 and happy to be among the 250,000 were persons of all races and stations of life. AFRO file photo.

This Souvenir Edition of the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers

contains historic photos of one of the greatest civil rights movements of our times.

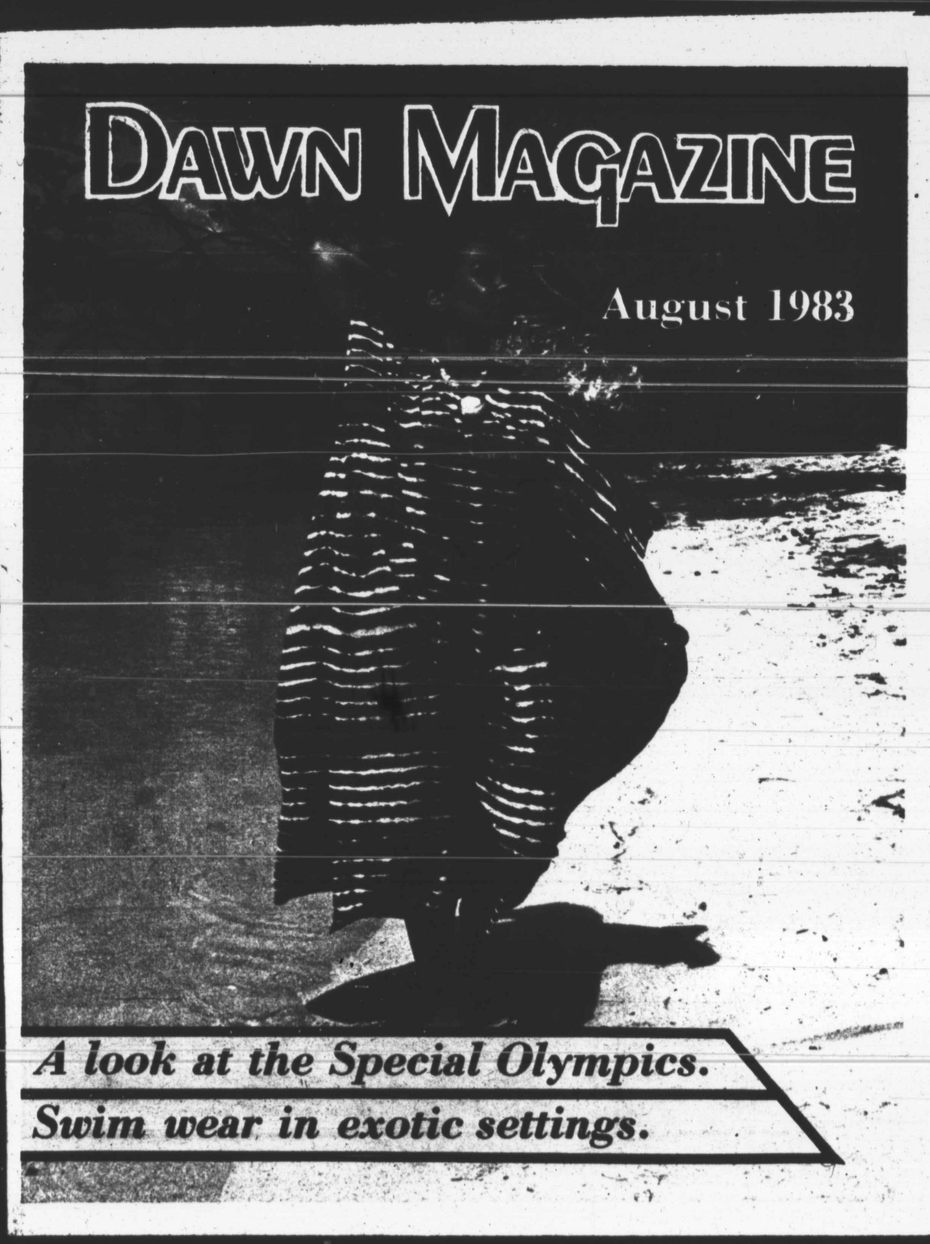
The immortal "I Have A Dream" speech made in 1963 by Dr. Martin Luther King is now a classic. It is reproduced full on Page One of this edition.

The Souvenir Edition is a valuable possession for school children who would otherwise never know of this historic event.

Keep this edition, save it for history's sake.

— Elizabeth M. Oliver, editor


ARRIVING IN WASHINGTON that August day of 1963 the marchers stepped proudly on the way to show their feelings about their cause, freedom now.