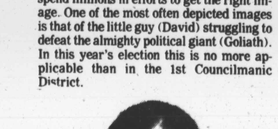
Willis fighting 'the good fight' in the 1st

Politics thrives on imagery. Politicians spend millions in efforts to get the right image. One of the most often depicted images is that of the little guy (David) struggling to defeat the almighty political giant (Goliath). In this year's election this is no more applicable than in the 1st Councilmanic District.



Jerard Willis, 28 years of age, is the first and only black candidate running in the district dominated by white ethnic politicians. To put some perspective on how difficult Willis' task is, consider the fact that Kurt Schmoke lost the 1st District to William Swisher by a vote of 19,148 to 6,583.

With his tall, slender build; close-cropped, neatly trimmed hair; well-fitting suits; quiet manner; and erect bearing, Jerard Willis has the dignified appearance of a minister in the Nation of Islam. He is Director of Concerned Citizens for Youth, Inc., a drug and crime prevention program serving young people in the poorer black areas of the district. It is the day-to-day problems he witnesses in his professional work which stimulated his bid for a seat on the City Council. When asked why he has chosen to become a candidate under such tough circumstances he replies, "Because of the total lack of representation. The three incumbents, Dominic 'Mimi' DiPietro, John Schaefer, and Donald Hammen are all Highlandtown neighbors, and they do nothing for residents outside of Highlandtown and Little Italy. They eat lunch at Vellegia's Restaurant across the street from the Flag Court highrise project, and they don't even know it is there."

Approximately thirty percent of the district's residents are black, with many living in public housing. Willis says, "The district's population is one-third black, and there is no reason one of the three council seats should not be occupied by a black representative."

Aside from the question of representation, Willis cites the following as being major problems in the district: "The 1st District has the highest drug and crime problem of any area of the city. Housing is also a major problem. There are 13 highrise projects in the district. And, the district has the city's largest number of homeless persons. The only response to the problem was Councilman DiPietro's effort to make it illegal to be homeless."

Willis stated that on the issue of jobs the 1st District had gone from being the highest unemployment area of the city, with the port facilities, and major manufacturing plants like General Motors and Western Electric, to being the area with the highest unemployment rate. Willis indicated that if unemployment is high for the district's white residents, then it is twice as high for black residents.

Willis is hoping that on September 13th enough voters will pull his lever, giving him the stone to strike down Goliath.

Committee of Maryland).

Also, Rev. and Mrs. White have 7 children, who have earned 12 college degrees among them: They are Arthur Jr., employed by a local industry; Rev. John R. White, pastor Shiloh Methodist, Charles County; Robert O. White, with the city police department.

Also, Mrs. Mary C. Burke, Mrs. Lillie W. Thaniel, city teachers; Mrs. Jean Miller-Colbert, Prince George's County school supervisor; and Miss Meredith Ella White, a senior citizen home guard.

Twelve grandchildren, a great-granddaughter, and a sister, Miss Katherine Mills, N.Y., also survive.

Eli Frank

Eli Frank Jr., a well-known Baltimore attorney, was best known in the black community for his service on the Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners.

Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro Sr., appointed him to the board in 1937-three years after the Supreme Court outlawed segregated schools. He became president of the board in 1962. Then the city schools were still struggling with integration. They were difficult times for those of us who know first hand of the efforts by many to correct the inadequacies left by jim crow, and the frustrations faced by black people and their white friends like Eli Frank.

When Eli Frank Jr. retired from the School Board in December 1967, this writer and former School Board member, wrote the following about him in this newspaper:

"During his years as president, Eli Frank Jr., has counseled associates and school administrators in coping with growing pains of a large urban city school system since 1957.

"The years have not been easy ones-population explosion and integration combined to overcrowd city schools and presented them with problems of inadequate facilities, insufficient funds, de facto segregation, and demands of a new generation for relief now.

"The role of a School Board president is difficult, and at times, frustrating one. To his credit, Mr. Frank has shown a sensitivity to the changing times. He has been a dedicated public servant in the truest sense of the word. All citizens owe him a debt of gratitude."

Eli Frank Jr. died last month at the age of 80.

He, too, was a soldier in the struggle for equal rights.

Dr. Frisby

Space limitations often keep us from getting in important items like the following:

Family and friends and public officials turned out in large numbers for the funeral of Dr. Herbert M. Frisby at Grace Presbyterian Church, where he was a longtime member.

Nice gestures: A large contingent of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity members conducted special rites under the leadership of basileus, Judson Wood, and Clarence Henderson.

Also present, leaders and members of the Boy Scout troop Mr. Frisby counseled.

Honorary pallbearers were members of the Herbert M. Frisby Historical Society, organized in 1985 by former delegate Lena K. Lee, and others. Mrs. Lee was hospitalized and unable to attend. Mrs. Lloyal Randolph, spoke for her.

Also unable to attend the July 30th rites: Dr. Frisby's brother, J. Arnett Frisby, the realtor; and his sister, Mrs. Viola Freeman, both of whom were hospitalized.

The deceased's grandson, H. Russell Frisby Jr., the lawyer, and his mom, Mrs. Kathryn Frisby, handled arrangements.

Very appropriate the tribute from famed historian, Dr. Benjamin Quarles, who told of the impact Dr. Frisby's leadership in correcting history has had on our nation.

Liked the way grandson put it, "My grandfather was a great family man."

Cuff notes: Because of Dr. Frisby, and the support of newspaper, history books have been corrected to let the world know that the first human to set foot on the North Pole on April 6, 1909 was a black Marylander, Matthew W. Henson.

Admiral Robert E. Peary, earlier credited with being first, was, too ill to take the last steps to plant the American flag at the top of the world.

For his over four decades as beloved geography and history teacher in the Baltimore city schools, for his courage to go to court to end inequities in school programs, and for correcting history, Dr. Herbert M. Frisby should never be forgotten.

Suggestion to Douglass High School planners of the upcoming centennial celebration: you'll do yourself proud to plan for special tribute to Dr. Frisby.

More cuff: Dr. Frisby's articles published in this newspaper when he was war correspondent in the Far North, are worth an afternoon of reading.

They are published in, "This Is Our War," available at the Pratt Library (Afro-American Co.-1945).

Sample delights you'll enjoy: "Hellzapoppin' in the Aleutians," "Pioneers in Alaska," and "1,600 Miles Up the Alcan Highway."

—Dr. James S. Julian

along quietly and under his own power maintained an ideal family life. His wife, Betty, and their children equally as gracious, quiet and unassuming although they reached the highest in accomplishment.

The late Sylvia Julian, who met with a tragic boat accident in California, had earned a Ph.D. degree following her family pattern of beauty and brains. You never saw any front page headlines.

THE JULIANS never cared for that. The young woman, who was the wife of Dr. Daniel Veal Jr., wrote her Ph.D. thesis brilliantly. Entitled, "Possible Pharmacological Agents of Protection in Experimental Myocardial Anoxia," the dissertation has gone down in history as guidance for future Howard University students.

Dr. Sylvia Veal was a Howard U. consultant at death.

THE FAMILY HISTORY is legend, too vast to be recorded here and it includes not only that of the sisters who are still living but that of their children and grandchildren.

In addition to the sisters, also surviving are Dr. James Julian's sons and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Julian III; Attorney Emile Lavon Julian, his wife, Mrs. Andree McKissick; five grandchildren, Angela, Jacquline, Nicole and Percy L. Julian III; Daniel Veal III. Also, Dr. Anna Johnson Julian, wife of the late Dr. Percy L. Julian and Mrs. Roseari Julian, wife of the late Dr. Emerson R. Julian and her children, Dr. Emerson R. Julian Jr., Roseari and Libby.

Following last rites Aug. 29 at the First United Church Apostolic as Baltimore National Pike, the pastor, Bishop Monroe R. Saunders presided at the graveside for the burial of Dr. James Julian at Arbutus Memorial Park. The family received friends in the Church Hall.

Edwin Johnson, a former assembly line worker at General Motors, who ran a strong race for a House of Delegates seat on Senator Irby's vacancy. Nathaniel McFadden, on leave from his position as a Baltimore City schoolteacher, was appointed to fill the vacancy created by "Du" Burn's move up to president of the City Council. Both Johnson and McFadden are running for "re-election" as incumbent councilmen.

The district has four major political organizations which have been successful in getting their candidates elected to public offices. EDO, with "Du" Burns as its titular head, has two members of the House of Delegate's, Hattie Harrison and City Comptroller candidate John Douglass, among its membership. Senator Irby is the leader of The East End Forum, which has become the major opponent of EDO's political control in the district's black precincts. NDC, with Mary Pat Clarke as its titular head, has one member of the House of Delegates in its membership, State Senator Jack Lapides's Mount Royal Democratic Club has Delegate Curtis Anderson as one of its members.

In the past, Mt. Royal has been NDC's major opposition for political supremacy in the district's white precincts.

NDC, Mt. Royal and the East End Forum have all endorsed the same slate of candidates; Anthony Ambridge, Edwin John, and Carl Stokes. The EDO slate consists of Nathaniel McFadden, Paula Johnson, and Curtis Chapman. In addition to the tickets formed by the four major organizations, there has already been a proliferation of other ticket arrangements in the district. Delegate Larry Young's Citizens' Democratic Organization has endorsed McFadden, Edwin Johnson, and Stokes. Delegates "Tiger" Davis's organization, the 45th District Legislative Caucus, has endorsed McFadden, Edwin Johnson, and Antonio Smith.

At this point, two other major candidates, George Buntin and Ralph Moore do not appear on the ticket of any political club. However, both have been endorsed by the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance and the Baptist Ministers' organization.

The large number of ticket arrangements, including the expected permutations of mayoral and council president candidates, are likely, at best, to prove extremely confusing to the voters on election day. The district's 22 candidates and the numerous organizations will distribute enough paper at the polls on Election Day to keep a recycling plant in business for a a year. Between now and Election Day, the candidates who get the most exposure from their individual efforts, and from their political alliances, are likely to achieve the best results at the polls.
