
The Third District is probably the most conservative in the city. The only neighborhoods in the city that gave Ronald Reagan pluralities are located here. Extending from Charles Street to the West, hugging the Northeast Baltimore City line to the North and East, this district includes the communities of Homeland, Hamilton, Lauraville, Woodmore Heights, Ramblewood and the Morgan State University area.

The district is also known for the problems related to so called blockbusting — the forced integration of neighborhoods. Middle class blacks have been migrating to this area of the city for the past decade and make up about one-third of the district.

There are two candidates in the Third District who deserve your support. They are Leonard Jackson and Kenneth C. Montague, Jr.

A graduate of Morgan State University and member of the NAACP, Jackson was one of the founders and the first president of the Park Heights Community Corporation.

Leonard T. Jackson

He has worked closely with the Park Heights Street Academy and the Park Heights Industrial Park.

Jackson says that he will work in the areas of economic development for blacks, unemployment and education. He is proposing the reorganization of the Baltimore City School Board and is in favor of rent control.

The other third district candidate worthy of your support is Kenneth C. Montague, Jr. A lawyer, Montague was graduated from Morgan State University and the University of Maryland Law School.

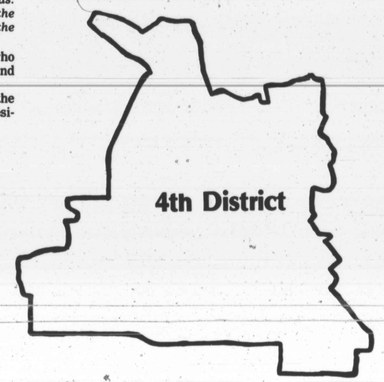
He has worked quite closely in the areas of energy conservation, and is an advocate of open government. If elected, Montague would work towards the passage of a City Fair Housing Law.



This central West Baltimore District is the home base of most of Baltimore's black elected officials. Bordered by Hilton Street to the West, Edmondson Avenue to the South, Druid Hill Park to the North, this district is almost entirely black.

Walbrook, Hanlon Park, Coppin State University, the old Douglass High School, Harlem Park, Upton and Mondawmin are located in the Fourth Councilmanic.

Voters in the fourth district, the city's most heavily black division, will have a plethora of candidates to choose from on Sept. 13th. Only three may be sent to City Hall, however.

We enthusiastically endorse the return of first-term incumbent Kweisi Mfume.

For the last four years, Councilman Mfume has been the most outspoken voice in city government, championing a number of causes relating to Baltimore's poor and downtrodden, as well as to middle-class family needs as affordable housing and quality education.

Some have said the councilman is not effective at City Hall. We feel that in judging between councilpersons whose value is measured by their legislative portfolios, (much of which is worthless paper), and those whose value is in the weight of their convictions, the balance is tipped in Councilman Mfume's favor.

We also endorse Bobby Cheeks, the welfare rights activists, who, like Mfume, is a man of intense and passionate conviction.

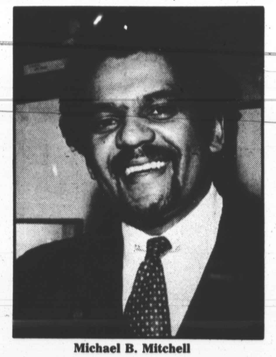
People often dismiss Cheeks as strident and radical. Cheeks has even said that he would not mind being arrested on the council floor to get his point across. But it cannot be denied that Cheeks has been one of the most visible forces in articulating the needs of the tens of thousands of poor Baltimoreans who have a right to be heard.

Bobby Cheeks

It is assumed that Cheeks will learn to meld his abundant energies with a sense of pragmatism and become an effective legislator, as well as a badly-needed advocate for the poor.

Incumbent Michael Mitchell also has won our endorsement, but a qualified one. We recognize Councilman Mitchell's importance as one of the most savy councilpersons at City Hall. An attorney and an astute observer, Mitchell is a force to be reckoned with among his councilmanic peers.

We trust, however, that Mitchell will spend more time applying his noteworthy talents to the benefit of his constituents. It has been stated that Mitchell's attendance at council meetings has not been good. If reelected, we will be watching.



Michael B. Mitchell

It is hoped that Mitchell's stature and two-term experience will be rewarded by an appointment to one of the council's three important council chairmanships. Presently black Baltimoreans, though a majority of the city's population, go unrepresented at that level.

Fourth District Honorable Mentions

Arlene Fisher, Irvin Conway, Agnes Welch and Daki Napata are all worthy candidates in the Fourth District.

Perhaps one or more of them would have been among those that we would have endorsed had the field of candidates been smaller.

All of them have been long-time community activists and they merit honorable mention. It is our sincerest hope that in the future they will continue to raise and resolve the types of issues that they have presented during this campaign.
