This, is the most affluent district of the city, has been the site of historically the most expensive council races in the city's history. In 1979, over $1.4 million was spent by all the candidates combined for the three City Council seats available.

The district has the city's highest black and white voter turnout precincts. Forest Park, Ashburton, Mt. Washington, Cheswolde, Fallstaff, Howard Park, Cross Keys and Woodberry are located in this district. Most of Baltimore's Jewish community is located here as well.

There are three people whom we endorse in the fifth district. They are Anthony Robinson, Iris G. Reeves, and Churchill B. Wortherly.

Mrs. Reeves is the widow of the late City Councilman Norman Reeves. Yet, she does not stand in her husband's shadow. A past member of the Baltimore Teacher's Union and graduate of Howard University, she has been an avid supporter of quality education for our city's children.

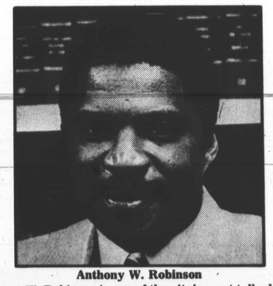
Mrs. Reeves believes that the city must do more to develop its residential neighborhoods. She feels that the same type of commitment that went into the increased commercialization of downtown must be spread throughout the city.

She believes that the city must work closely with churches, private businesses and non-profit agencies to make Baltimore a better city in which to live. We believe that if she is elected, Baltimore will be a better city in which to live.



Anthony W. Robinson

Anthony W. Robinson is one of the city's most talked about young black people. A capable lawyer, he is concerned with the issues of economic development and increased city fun-

ON THE ISSUES

EDUCATION/ Improving the quality of education in Baltimore schools is vital because our children must be prepared to succeed in a world of change, of high technology and social upheaval. I intend to see that a commission is appointed in Baltimore, similar to the blue-ribbon commission of the U.S. Department of Education to determine if our children are being adequately prepared to face the social and technological challenges of the coming decade.

NEIGHBORHOOD DEVELOPMENT/ The concept of neighborhoods is a strong force in Baltimore. An emphasis on neighborhoods not only keeps property values strong, but it also serves as a forum for people to work together toward a common cause. I will work to assure that all neighborhoods in the Fifth District are represented by associations that can articulate local concerns and needs.

CRIME/ A tough stance on crime is vital to community survival. We also must explore ways to reduce prison overcrowding by investigating viable alternatives—including alternative sentencing and alternative rehabilitation.

UNEMPLOYMENT/ High unemployment is a greater drain on the economy than any other probolem. Although much responsibility for economic recovery rests with the federal and state governments. We must explore every possible option to provide relief at the local level. One idea I plan to pursue is providing tax relief or direct subsides to industries for hiring people. These people would then become part of the tax structure.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT/ We must continue to encourage industrial growth. I will also actively promote legislation to stimulate small business development and Black participation.

TAXES/ We need to increase public awareness of the tax rate as it relates to public needs. If we determine that our children are not being properly educated, that we can save money by subsidizing jobs or that we need more police on the streets, then higher taxes may be the lesser evil. We must be creative in levying taxes so that the property owner doesn't bear the entire burden.
