TWO photographs from two different funerals held during the week recall the lives of two outstanding clergymen. In the top photograph an overview is shown of the Mass of Christian Burial for His Late Eminence, Lawrence Cardinal Shehan, retired archbishop of Baltimore. In the photograph under that funeral rites are shown for the Rev. W. P. Mitchell, long-time pastor of Payne Memorial A.M.E. Church. Rev. Mitchell died earlier in the week at 92 years old. Both men are remembered for their contibutions to the city in spiritual and racial matters.

Baltimore Dance Theater opens its season

Spirituals, Ragtime, and Blues are all part of the Baltimore Dance Theatre's first concert of their Tenth Anniversary Season. Their first concert on September 16, 1984, at Morgan State University, will feature the Morgan State University Choir under the direction of Nathan Carter.

The choir will provide the musical setting, a collection of well-known spirituals, for the opening work, "Winter of Our Days." Pianist, John Young will provide musical accompaniment for a new work, featuring Ragtime and Blues.

The Baltimore Dance Theatre's 1984-85 season will trace the development of Afro-American dance forms and the parallel development of Afro-American music. Programs will feature new works based on old forms blending original choreography with original music.

When possible, the composers will perform their own works. Although the concerts will be presented in a chronological sequence, each is complete in itself.

The second concert of the season will be presented January 27, 1985, at the Baltimore Museum of Art. This concert features, "Dreams," a work inspired by Lorraine Hansberry's "A Raisin In The Sun." "Dreams," premiered last season, was the result of a workshop that involved choreographer, Eva Anderson, and composers, Don Pullen and Gary Richardson.

The final concerts in April and June, will include "Rhythms," an up-dated version of the old African challenge dance, and "Ictus," a new work by choreographer, Rod Rodgers, premiered last season by the BDT, as well as other standards from the BDT repertoire, plus a number of newly commissioned works.

The Baltimore Dance Theatre enjoys a unique status among dance companies in that many of their dancers have been with the company only after a two year apprenticeship. Auditions for apprentice positions and scholarships are held each November at the BDT studio at 616 N. Eutaw. Please call 669-9680 or 997-3899 for further information.

Season tickets are available for all four BDT concerts, and may be obtained by calling 997-3899 or 669-9680.
