DISPUTE OVER HOMEWORK ENDS WITH:

Teacher attacked, parent stabbed

By Tyrone Vines
AFRO Staff Writer

A parent who protested the way homework was assigned to her child attacked a city teacher and stabbed another parent in the left arm Thursday after the teacher, Mrs. Peggie Harris, instructed the child to return home to get her homeroom assignment.

According to James Walker, the principal at Mary E. Rodman Elementary School, 3510 W. Mulberry St., "Mrs. Harris requires that each student pass in his or her home assignment as the child enters the classroom. This particular morning, Sept. 13, one child did not have her home assignment, but said that she did it and had asked permission to go home to get it."

Walker further explained, "when the child returned from home the parent was with her and, Mrs. Harris, a third grade teacher, explained why she had her students follow the homework procedure. The mother did not approve the policy and said that her child had completed the home assignment, but that her daughter had misplaced it."

At this point the parent still was not satisfied with Mrs. Harris's explanation. The parent left the school with the child and when she returned, there were words between Mrs. Harris and the parent and Mrs. Harris was struck in the face, city police said.

Police records show the parent stating to Mrs. Harris that she could not talk to her daughter that way, and struck Mrs. Harris with her fist in the right eye.

Information from the Police Department revealed that while Mrs. Harris and the parent, who had not been identified, were quarreling when another parent identified as Mrs. Dorothy Lowery came to Mrs. Harris' assistance. An arrest warrant will be issued for the parent pending her identification by city police.

MTA workers decry bosses' disrespect

By Eddie King
AFRO Staff Writer

MTA's Metro rail workers are expressing discontent over what appears to be management's lack of concern about their well-being.

Metro rail workers, many of whom are refusing to work this weekend for the City Fair, charge the "administration with not allowing them to have a say in what happens to them.

Many of the workers report that many of the demands placed upon them are unfair, outright cruel and inconsiderate.

"Take the City Fair this weekend," said one worker who refused to be identified. "Management didn't have the decency to ask us to work and yet put out announcements all over the city that the subway would be running."

The worker said that administration had not sent memos to office personnel only mandating that they work this weekend by manning the Metro stations.

According to another worker, management advised the regular trained rail workers that they could work if they wanted to, but

Ministers threaten boycott if Shake & Bake operators change

By Racine S. Winborne
AFRO Staff Writer

"The mayor always ignores the fact that the trustees' money is not his money, but belongs to the citizens of Baltimore and that includes the black citizens as well as the rich whites," the head of the city's Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance declared this week.

Rev. Douglas Miles made his remarks after recent published reports said that Mayor Schaefer was upset over what he termed "community threats" concerning the two-and-a-half-year-old center.

Several black community groups have said that they would boycott Shake and Bake if new management is announced to replace owner Glenn Doughty.

Speaking in response to the published daily comments from Mayor Schaefer that said, "It's amazing how the members of the clergy all of a sudden decided to support this. They were so busy not helping him (Glenn Doughty)," Rev. Miles, who heads the 125-member group, refuted these allegations.

"The black church community need not defend its record of support of black businesses. Our effort is not to protect an individual, but to protect a black business enterprise," Miles explained on Wednesday.

The pastor of Brown's Memorial Baptist Church said his organization would stand behind its promise to boycott Shake and Bake if the city assumes its control.

The mayor stated several weeks ago that if then the center failed to pay a delinquent mortgage not one would authorize that a new management staff under the direction of the Department of Recreation and Parks be put in place.

Center officials have argued that the mayor has no authority to replace Doughty and had threatened to take the matter to court if necessary.

This, despite the fact that most observers, including several city officials have concluded that no additional monies would be generated by such a move.

Chris Delaporte, Recreation and Parks director, said two weeks ago that his agency is prepared to run the community fun center if requested to by the mayor.

"Our person in the department . . . has given me assurance that we can operate it. It would border . . on rude and presumptous to invite myself into Glenn's operation to make a judgement of our capabilities to operate it," Delaporte remarked two weeks ago.

Delaporte also indicated that should he be asked to take over the Pennsylvania Avenue center an assessment to the agency's ability to manage Shake and Bake would be made at that time.

Meanwhile, negotiations are continuing between Doughty and the city trustees.

The latest proposal would see that the center received an additional loan from an undisclosed out-of-state lending institution to help it meet its payments on a $4 million trustee-approved loan.

School board choice will make ratio 50/50

By Arthur Johnson
AFRO Staff Writer

The city school board will have a 50-50 black-to-white ratio if Mayor Schaefer's choice to fill one of two board vacancies is approved Sept. 24.

The City Council's executive appointments committee will hold a hearing concerning the appointment of Charles Elmer Thompson, a former appointee to the State Board of Education. The 63-year-old Brooklyn resident was not reappointed to the state board in 1980 after serving a four-year term.

Thompson will fill the vacancy created by the May 17 resignation of former school board president David C. Daneker from the nine-member school board. The vacancy created by Dr. Beryl William's July 31 resignation remains unfilled.

The school board now currently consists of four black commissioners (including Board Vice President Howard E. Marshall, Dr. Monroe Saunders, Sr. Joseph Lee Smith and Doris M. Johnson and three white commissioners (board President Robert L. Walker, Robert C. Embry, Jr., and Ruth F. Silverstone).

Two student commissioners, Myung Oh of Western and Rodney Wilson of Walbrook, participate in all regular board meetings and act in an advisory role.

The appointment process for the selection of school board commissioners has recently come under fire by those who favor an elected school board, and the issue has been placed on the Nov. 6 ballot. City voters will be able to vote for or against the charter amendment during the presidential election.

An informal survey of the board members this week revealed that most are not in favor of an elected board.

Thompson has already stated that he opposes an elected board.

Embry said that he sees no reason to change to an elected board and predicted that the result of a citywide election would create a school board with a racial makeup similar to that of the City Council — two-thirds white and one-third black.

"That would be an unhappy situation," said Embry who feels that the racial balance of the board is very important and added that it is already a difficult task getting money from white state legislators. Embry has one child in the city's public schools

September designated Sicke Cell Month

Jadi Omowale
AFRO Staff Writer

September is Sickle Cell Anemia Month. The nationwide designation was started eight years ago by the National Association for Sickle Cell Disease, which is based in Los Angeles, California.

Locally, Sickle Cell Month got an early and enthusiastic kick-off on September 3, Labor Day, with the Second Annual Bacardi Rum Run. The run is a fundraiser sponsored by Bacardi Imports, Perrier Water and WWIN AM/FM Radio station.

This year's run raised about $10,000 dollars to be funneled to The Central Maryland Committee on Sickle Cell Anemia and the national association.

Lisa Williams, executive director of the Central Maryland Committee, says that the response to their year's 10K was good and noted that this year's winner, Kevin McGarry came in under

Lotto winners now assured of payment

588 was Double Header choice last week. Page 18

A recent opinion issued by the state attorney general's office should make lottery winners breathe easier. The opinion states that winners of the Lotto first prize whose winnings are used to purchase an annuity that fails will still receive their money from lottery funds.

The opinion was requested by State Senator Leo E. Green to clarify how winners would be paid if the annuities that the state purchased from insurance companies go broke.

Recent bank failures such as Continental in Illinois and the bankruptcies of several insurance companies have shaken confidence in investment institutions that were once considered failsafe.

When an individual wins the Lotto prize, the state purchases an annuity equal to the prize amount. The winner is paid a set amount each year for twenty years. This lowers the cost to the state since it buys the annuity for a low price. It helps the winner because it reduces the tax liabilities on the winnings and allows the state to offer larger prizes.

According to state officials, if the unlikely occurs and an annuity fails, the prize money will be paid out of lottery funds that would normally be added to the state's general fund. This payment will in no way affect lottery operating funds or money for other lottery prize winners, lottery officials said.

Voter registration fever is sweeping the city

By Racine S. Winborne
AFRO Staff Writer

Everybody is doing it!

Blacks in Government, NAACP, NOW (National Organization of Women), Baltimore Welfare Rights, Planned Parenthood, Maryland Democratic Party, Enoch Pratt Library, Nine-to-Five, Baltimore Working Women, Constant Care Medical Center, AFL-CIO, Baltimore Lesbian & Gay Democratic Club, American Postal Workers, Maryland Nurses Association, and each of the city's 15 mayor's stations, are all caught in the act.

The call has even gone out to several local radio stations, including WXYV-103, WIVY-98 Rock and WBAL-FM.

Even the Baltimore Realtors Association is planning to involve each of its citywide real estate agencies.

Voter registration fever has swept the entire city bringing with it a tidal wave of groups and unsung citizens who have visited the Board of Election's Gay Street building in search of registration applications.

"Just about every corner of the city has a place for a person to register not just groups, but individuals have picked up applications for their communities.

"A few banks have come in . . . and thus far some individual churches have taken 25 to 50 application each," Barbara Jackson, chief clerk at the downtown agency, exclaimed.

According to Jackson the number of people involved in organized voter registration projects continues to grow yearly Some like the NAACP have been registering citizens for years, while others like 9 to 5, Baltimore Working Women are newcomers.

Some are motivated by a particular candidate or specific campaign issues, others are not.

The local coordinator of the Planned Parenthood voter
