—The doctors speak

reputation. It does not have the kind of people who can even make or put out the kind of ideas and the kind of programs that will start to establish it as sound institution. It will not recover with the present administration, I do not believe.

DR. BROWN — I think the largest portion of the community actually believes that every black doctor in the city is on the medical staff at Provident Hospital. That's not true. A number of black doctors have never belonged to the staff.

A number of them belonged to the staff and have now absented themselves from the hospital. All of it has been due to the fact that they do not fel that they can do the job for their patients at Provident that they feel thy should be able to do. Actually, some of the members who have not been members of the Provident staff have served on the board.

AFRO — The whole thing started more or less revolving around Dr. Oakley Saunders. If Oakley Saunders was removed — here in May 1985 — would the hospital, do you feel or do you think that the hospital would have a better chance of recovery

DR. BROWN — I think it would certainly have its best chance of recovery. If he were removed, I think it would do two things; It would indicate to the medical staff that the board at long last decided that they wanted to do what was best for the hospital.

That they wanted to return the trust that they had removed from the hospital and given to Oakley Saunders, and return it back to the hospital where it belongs.

The second thing is — it would be a signal to the community — now there's great deal of people who have always gotten their care at Provident Hospital — who are now beginning to say, I'll never go there again — it would be a signal to the people that the board is now willing to listen to their number one patient advocates, the doctors, and try to push the hospital forward in the care of patients.

I think this will be another plus because people will want to go there.

DR. FOUNTAIN — But it certainly will not be the only thing that will have to change — certainly the views and the thoughts and the managerial skills of that board must hange.

There is no way that any CEO would come in there and work with that board as presently structured in terms of their abilities to manage that hospital. That has to change also because if it does not change, two or three years down the line, we'll be right back where we are again.

I think the board itself must develop the kind of expertise, must develop the kind of forethought and insight into how to manage that facility. And if they do not, then it certainly cannot hope to exist financially sound for any period of time, without doing so.

DR. BROWN — But in most of your institutions, the board promotes the institution by picking the right people to administer it. 85 percent of a hospital should be the administrative management. The board, you see, should only be about 5 percent, so they should not be in there daily, tying to manage that hospital. They should have the correct team there and they should have enough knowledge to know when they do have the correct team.

AFRO — Any other final thing you'd like to say to the black community about this whole matter — not to the hospital — not to the administration — to the black community, itself?

DR. FOUNTAIN — The final thing that I would like to say to the black community is this — we are seeking, as physicians, as persons who act on our own conscious to take our patients from that hospital as of November of '84 to improve the quality for them as well to have a facility that we know we can, in fact deliver that quality care — it was not done to destroy that institution.

There is no doubt in any of our minds that provident should stand — that Provident has the potential and indeed, probably if all of this can be handled in the way that we are hoping it will be handled — and that is that the board will eventually make the right decisions about having Dr. Oakley Saunders removed from that facility and try to run in a manner that those things can be accomplished.

There is no doubt that it can be a facility that they can receive the kind of quality care that they deserve and that we want to deliver. So it's no doubt that we believe that that institution should remain.

AFRO — Okay, Dr. Brown

DR. BROWN — I would say to the community that long before I became president when people knew that I was in line to become president — they began asking me if I would do everything I can to improve the system down there — to make it work for this community. I would say that I have done this. I've put forth really a major effort in trying to make sure that I was available — to see what was going on.

And I really appreciate all the people who have been calling me and saying to me, well, you keep up the good work. Keep in there and if you keep plugging — we'll be able to survive and have a good hospital there.

I would like to thank them for their support, let them know that it has meant a whole lot to me and it's also meant a lot to my family — to have this kind of confidence in me — that I will not quit at this time just because this little obstacle has been thrown in my way.

I still have much faith in Provident Hospital being a good competitive hospital. I still have a feeling that a hospital on Liberty Heights Avenue should not be there, just because it's black. It should be there because it serves the needs of the black people in a most competent way.

DR. FOUNTAIN — And not just the needs of the black people, but people in general. And that's crucial.

AFRO — Thank you both.

NAACP, Jewish leaders say it's time for reconciliation

By Carolyn Dennis
AFRO Staff Writer

Returning from a two-day conference on strengthening Black and Jewish relationships, Jewish leader Rabbi Alexander Schindler and NAACP executive director Benjamin Hooks said they will commit their organizational resources to easing the strain between U.S. Blacks and Jews.

Schindler is president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations (UACH), a coalition of 800 Reform synagogues in the U.S.

Prior to a press conference held this week in Northwest during which both Schindler and Hooks delivered messages of Black and Jewish solidarity, both men led supporters in a demonstration outside the U.S. Justice Department to protest "rollbacks in civil rights."

Reading from a joint statement, supported by Schindler, Hooks said at the press conference that the "traumas" which have resulted in political and social divisions between Blacks and Jews, are in the process "of being overcome."

According to Hooks, plans were made to institute or strengthen joint political and youth programs for American Blacks and Jews at the two-day conference attended by representatives from both organizations.

Schindler said that differences between Blacks and Jews have been exaggerated by detractors who want to sever traditional ties between the two groups.

Stated Hooks," lack of support from within the Black community for the Israeli government and rejection of affirmative action remedies by some Jews, are the major areas that must be addressed."

In a separate interview Schindler, further explaining the elements that have contributed to the weakened relationship between Blacks and Jews, said that Nation of Islam leader Minister Louis Farrakhan's "separatist drive has created a serious cleavage."

"If we insist upon standing alone, we will destroy ourselves," Schindler said.

Minister Farrakhan, in a recent speech at the Kennedy Center, told an audience of approximately 3,000 Black business and political leaders that he is negotiating a $5 million loan with Libyan president Muamar Khadafy to be channeled into a program for U.S. Black economic development.

At the NAACP and UACH demonstration in front of the Justice Department, an estimated 100 supporters marched around the building's entrance holding placards on which slogans were written condemning the Administration's stance on civil rights and affirmative action issues.

Schindler and Hooks spoke to the crowd during the hour-long demonstration as did spokespersons from national women's groups and NAACP local and national representatives.

"The Justice Department is attempting to roll-back many of the gains that were painfully won by the civil rights groups in the nation," said Hooks in earlier statements. Hooks then accused U.S. assistant attorney general William Bradford Reynolds of "pandering to the worst instincts of the American public by "likening affirmative action to reverse discrimination."

According to Hooks, the demonstration was held to draw attention to the fact that attorney general Edwin Meese, in his efforts to subvert affirmative action, mailed letters to state leaders asking that they voluntarily retract employment consent decrees which supported the use of timetables and goals in hiring minorities and women.

The NAACP filed counter legal action to stop any future action by the Justice Department in attempting to reverse mandated employment consent decrees. In addition, the NAACP alleges that the Justice Department has violated constitutional rights and is interpreting a Supreme Court decision, governing seniority, "too broadly," in its efforts to weaken civil rights remedies.

In a first time effort, stated Hooks, the Justice Department has also filed court papers in Federal District Court in Indianapolis, to overturn an employment consent decree there.

According to NAACP attorney Jesse James, Jr., if officials agree to the terms in the 52 letters mailed by Meese, instituted timetables and goals for hiring minorities and women could be retracted without challenge.

Housing business has changed

By Denis G. Gulino

Many people are still making nearly intolerable sacrifices to buy a house. Builders and real estate sales people — their fingers crossed — are looking forward to another good year.

But in a fundamental sense, analysts say, things will never be the same.

The major conclusions of housing industry analysts surveyed are:

"High" mortgage interest rates are not temporary but a permanent result of banking deregulation and the recent dynamic growth of the secondary mortgage market — the mechanism for recycling most mortgage money.

+ The industry's lobbyists, trying to preserve important tax advantages for housing, have united in a warning about the falling proportion of home owners but are several years too late.

- Builders, facing a revolt of buyers no longer satisfied with mediocre quality, are being forced to pay much closer attention to design, detail and the peculiarities and diversity of living styles in order to survive.

- Buyers are drying up in the Sun Belt as the South and West try to emerge from a painful oil industry crisis of plenty. Houston builders can be found working in Chicago.

- Misbegotten new tax breaks and the threat that some of the old ones will be taken away have left thousands of hollow monuments — from vacant office buildings to unwanted apartment buildings, rejected condominiums and time-sharing resort units — wasted housing that will never be sold for the same billions they cost to build.

- The American housing industry is leaving the exuberance of youth, now that so many dwelling units are in existence, and entering the mature years more typical of European countries. Year-round rehabilitation, not springtime building and buying surges, are the future.

- Although agricultural land values have depreciated, living space in and around cities and towns has never been more expensive. Area, inside and out, becomes the first amenity to be sacrificed by developers and their customers.

The result may be more efficient use of money, Herbert says. But also, "It's never going to go back down to the good old days," when savings and loans harvested cheap money and passed it on to the housing industry.

CITY OF BALTIMORE
DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE
BUREAU OF TREASURY MANAGEMENT
COLLECTION DIVISION

Pursuant to Article 81 of the Annotated Code of Maryland, the City of Baltimore will sell at public auction, on May 13 and 14, 1985, beginning at 9:00 a.m. in the Assembly Room of the War Memorial Building, Gay and Lexington Streets, approximately 4,000 properties on which taxes or other municipal liens are delinquent. A catalogue of properties to be sold may be obtained at the Collection Division in Room 1, Municipal Building or at the Sale, for a fee of $2.00. Acquisition of properties at Tax Sale is subject to the following procedures:

Properties on which taxes or other municipal liens are delinquent are sold at public auction to the highest bidder. Should you be sucessful in "bidding in" a property, you will be required to pay onoy the total liens due at the time and place of sale. The balance of the purchase price must be paid prior to issuance of a deed. As soon as possible after the sale, a "Tax Sale Certificate" will be issued to you.

It should be noted that a Tax Sale purchaser has no right of possession to the property until a deed is required. The owner of the property has six months to redeem the property by reimbursing the purchase the amount of the liens paid plus interest at the rate of 24 percent per annum from the date of sale to the date of redemption. Should the property be redeemed, this transaction would be handled for you by the Collection Division.

If the owner has not redeemed the property within six months from the date of sale, the purchaser may file a bill of complaint in an equity court of Baltimore City to foreclose all rights of the owner to redeem the property. The six month period may be reduced to sixty days upon certification by the Commissioner of Housing and Community Development that the property requires substantial repairs to comply with the Baltimore City Building Code.

When the bill is filed, the Court will set a date within which the owner must redeem the property and reimburse the purchaser for costs incurred plus interest. If, at the expiration of that time, the property has not been redeemed, the Court shall issue a final decree to foreclose the owner's right of redemption.

Upon presentatin of a deed executed by the Director of Finance, and upon payment of all taxes and municipal liens accruing since the date of sale and the balance of the purchase price, title will be conveyed to the purchaser.

To assure that all requirements for this procedure as set forth in Article 81 of the Annotated Code of Maryland are met, successful bidders are advised to engage the services of an attorney to foreclose the right of redemption.
