Arnold D. Wallace, general manager of Washington, D.C.'s WHMM-TV 32, recently named Donald R. Lockett as Director of Operations and Engineering for Howard University's non-commercial television station.

Lockett, who served in the capacity of acting director since June, 1984, was previously assistant director for the department.

Wallace said that Mr. Lockett ". . . brings to his permanent position a noteworthy track record within the electronic media."

His experiences include systems design, operations, supervision, hands-on maintenance, labor relations, development of human resources and construction and installation of studio and transmission equipment for television and radio facilities.

Before coming to Channel 32 in 1980, Lockett was chief engineer for WHUR-FM radio in D.C.; broadcast engineer for WCNY-TV in New York and producer/director with WJZ-TV here in Baltimore.

A graduate of Virginia State University and Syracuse University, Lockett holds a bachelor's degree in Electronics and a master's of science in TV/Radio, respectively.

While on the subject of accomplishments, be sure to stay tuned to public television's three-part miniseries, BLACK CHAMPIONS, a documentary providing a vivid account of black athletes and their accomplishments throughout the 20th Century.

This all-encompassing study of black participation in American sports premiered this past Wednesday, May 14 and will continue for two more consecutive Wednesdays, May 21 and May 28, at 9 pm, on Maryland Public Television Channel 22, 67.

This production was produced by award-winning filmmaker William Miles, who was responsible for the acclaimed public television specials, MEN OF BRONZE, I REMEMBER HARLEM, and THE DIFFERENT DRUMMER: BLACKS IN THE MILITARY.

In BLACK CHAMPIONS, William Miles takes viewers on an extraordinary historical odyssey, using rare footage to illustrate how many black champions successfully challenged racism to achieve a level of prominence often denied them in other areas of American life.

The series allows black athletes to describe their emergence into the American sports arena, as well as their individual experiences, and also shows how the struggles of black pioneers in sports resulted in new opportunities for those who followed.

For those of you who unfortunately missed Part 1, entitled "Who Will Wear the Crown?", the segment explored a remarkable, but largely ignored resource, the athletic departments of segregated Negro colleges during the first half of the 20th Century.

The broadcast detailed the accomplishments of such groundbreakers as baseball's Josh Gibson, James "Cool Papa" Bell and Leroy "Satchel" Paige; track and field's Ralph Metcalfe, Ed Tolan and Cornelius Johnson; boxing's Jack Johnson and Joe Louis; and football's Fritz Pollard and Paul Robeson.

Among those interviewed for this particular program were Jim Jacobs (boxing historian); Eulace Peacock (track star) and Mack Robinson and John Woodruff who, along with Jesse Owens, were 1936 Olympic medalists in Germany.

Part 2, entitled "New Times: The Integration of American Sports," scheduled to air Wednesday 21, will cover black athletic pioneers who became superstars within the white sports arena.

Remembering their experiences are Jim Brown (football); Alice Coachman-Davis (the first black female to win a gold medal in the 1948 games in England, for track and field); Wilma Rudolph (1960 Olympian, Rome, for track and field); boxers, Archie Moore and Floyd Patterson; tennis great, Althea Gibson and coach, Sydney Llewellyn; basketball's Oscar Robertson, and track's Mark Robinson (who also remembers his brother, Jackie Robinson).

Part 3, "Looking for Tomorrow: Black Athletes and the Sporting Life," airing May 28 at 9 pm, focuses on the fast-paced, multi-million-dollar world of corporate sports, and the pressures, both financial and emotional, which today's superstars must face and assimilate.

Interviews are wtih Arthur Ashe (tennis); Sugar Ray Leonard (boxing) and Evelyn Ashford and Edwin Moses (1984 track and field Olympic gold medalists). Also featured are John Thompson (Georgetown's winning basketball coach); basketball's Earl "The Pearl" Monroe and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar; golf's Lee Elder, Olympic bronze medal-winning fencer Peter Westbrook, and baseball's Curt Flood.

Getting back to basics, WETA-TV, Channel 26, is scheduled to air EXPLORE: "LOST ROAD TO NUBIA/BODIES OF ART, BODIES OF PAIN," a program narrated by James Coburn and explorer Douchan Gersi, describing the journey up a 4,000-year-old lost road in Africa, on Saturday, May 17 at 9 pm.

Also on WETA-26, tune in on Tuesday, May 20 at 9 pm for FRONTLINE: "THE BLOODS OF 'NAM," a program describing how blacks and whites fought together in Vietnam, sometimes against the enemy and sometimes with each other. Their war stories and the story of what happened when they came home.

On Monday, May 19, at 8:30 pm, CBS will air the two-and-a-half hour special, SAMARITAN, a dramatic piece based on the facts in the life of Mitch Snyder, the activist who battles on the streets of the nation's capital to bring the plight of the homeless into the forefront of public consciousness.

The production stars Martin Sheen as Snyder, and Cicely Tyson as an aging "bag lady" who acts as Snyder's mentor in teaching him the survival tactics of the homeless. Other stars appearing in key roles are Roxanne Hart as Carol Fennelly, Snyder's girlfriend and staunch supporter; Joe Seneca (star of movie CROSSROADS), as an elderly black man known on the streets as "Reverend" and Stan Shaw as Harold Moss, chief lieutenant.

I don't know if any of you missed my column the last few weeks, but, just to set the record straight, I was on a much-needed vacation. Plus, soon I will be changing over to the position of Movie Critic, thus handing my trusted TV Guide (among other various and sundry items) to the new TV Editor (as yet un-named).

I hope and trust my readers will accept this change and support me in the future as fully as you have in the past. Anyhow, I really enjoy movies more than television!!

Bumper Robinson stars as a young man who desperately tries to save the life of a fawn taken from its natural environment and brought to a big city on "The Disney Sunday Movie," airing May 18 on ABC.
