CAREER OPPORTUNITIES 1986

MAY 1986

A Millersville University (Pa.) staff member works with a student using a computerized career guidance program which helps match academic interests of students with career fields.

Loyola College offering number of minority scholarships

Loyola College in Maryland will institute a unique minority scholarship program this year. Rev. Joseph A. Sellinger, S.J., Loyola president, announced that the College is making a major commitment to a minority scholarship program within its executive programs in management. "We are particularly proud and happy to make this move to encourage minority students the year that Baltimore welcomes the NAACP to the city," says Fr. Sellinger.

Loyola's executive business programs are among the oldest in the nation, and this minority scholarship program is he first of its kind. Under the new program, minority students can apply for a limited number of full and partial tuition grants for the Executive MBA and MBA Fellows programs.

Both programs offer the opportunity for students to pursue an MBA degree without interrupting their careers. The programs are designed for upper level executives and managers with several years experience in their current positions.

Stephen Walters, Loyola associate professor of economics and chairman of the Minority Scholarship Program committee, says, "We believe that there are many qualified minority students in positions in government agencies, non-profit institutions or small businesses which do not offer tuition remission benefits. We want our scholarship program to remove the obstacle of paying tuition for these students." Dean of Loyola's Sellinger School of Business and Management Robert Margenthaler concurs. "We want qualified students to see that our executive business programs are within their reach. Loyola has always been a leader in business education in the area and this scholarship program allows us to reach out to the community in yet another way."

The Minority Scholarship applicant will supplement his or her standard application for admission with a Scholarship Application. Students will be selected for admission and Scholarship awards on the basis of the following criteria:

— prior experience and achievement in a position of significant responsibility;

— record of undergraduate achievement as calculated by Quality Point Average;

— performance on the Graduate Management Admissions Test (GMAT).

The final arbiter of admissions and awards is a committee of Loyola faculty from various disciplines. In addition to prior record and test scores, the committee also weighs such factors as personal references, institutional endorsement, a personal interview, professional awards or certifications, and evidence of other advanced study. In granting Scholarships, student financial need will be weighed.

Detailed information and application materials are available from the Office of Executive Graduate Programs in Management at Loyola College. Call the office at (301) 323-1010, extensions 2279 or 2308.

New Directions sponsors jobs conference

With the help of a planning grant from the Maryland Department of Employment and Training, Maryland New Directions is organizing a major conference entitled Formula for the Future: Today's Education = Tomorrow's Jobs.

The conference will be held on May 30, 1986 at the Baltimore Convention Center and will bring together employers, educators, and career-minded individuals. We expect at least 2,000 people to attend the conference which will provide a forum for discussions of the impact of technology on jobs in Maryland.

Specifically, the conference objectives are to:

— provide business representatives with an opportunity to publicize current and future employment needs, interview prospective job candidates, and showcase their organization;

— offer educators the chance to inform conference attendees of their programs as they relate to the changing Maryland employment picture; and

— give job seekers and changers an opportunity to review educational programs, discuss job options with company representatives and apprise themselves of educational-employment needs, trends and issues.

We know that the employment picture of the '80s represents a significant change from that of prior decades. Likewise, educational programs in the years ahead will reflect the reponse of the academic community to the workplace of the future.

To assure that employers, educators, and workers have a chance to view these changes and their impact from several perspectives, the conference will offer employer-educator exhibits and a series of issue-oriented seminars and how-to workshops such as:

— Tomorrow's Jobs—A Look Toward the Future

— Response of the Educational System to a Changing Job Market

— Technical vs. General Education—Is One Better Suited Than the Other for Today's Job Market?

Millersville University graduates find many successful careers

A recent survey of 1985 graduates of Millersville University, located in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, found that the majority of new alumni had found jobs and most positions were in the students' academic fields of study.

The University reported to its trustees recently the results of a survey which indicated that 91.5 percent of students in teacher preparation fields now were employed, 89 percent of them in the subject area for which they prepared to teach. An additional 3.8 percent were enrolled in graduate school.

Of students majoring in arts, sciences and business, 85.3 percent had jobs, 75 percent in their major field. An additional eight percent were enrolled in graduate school.

Founded in 1855, Millersville is an institution of 5,700 full and part-time undergraduates and 500 graduate students offering a wide range of academic programs. In order to help students prepare for the field of their choice, the Career Planning and Placement Office offers several special services.

A computer software program, called "Discover," helps students match personal skills and interests with career fields and academic majors. The office also helps students prepare resumes and coaches students for job interviews. Each year in February, the Office plans a Career Week and brings hundreds of representatives of business and industry to campus to talk to students.

A major service administered by the office is the Cooperation Education/Internship Program. Only 10 years old, the program has grown from two internship positions to 170 different positions. This year, 132 students are involved with a cooperative education or internship assignment.

The cooperation education/internship option interweaves college coursework with work experience in industry, government or public service. Students earn academic credit for the experince and many positions also are paid. Supervision is provided by a faculty from the students' major department. Upon graduation, the extra work experience gives these students an advantage in finding employment.

Students interested in more information are invited to write to the Office of Career Planning and Placement or to the Admissions Office, Millersville University, Millersville, PA 17551.

Substance Abuse Counselor Day set at Loyola

Loyola College's Psychology department will hold its annual Substance Abuse Counselor career day on Friday, June 6, 1986. The keynote speaker will be Mr. Ludwig Lankford, director of the Institute of Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Studies (OETAS).

Eight field representatives from various state, treatment and educational agencies will be on hand to answer participants' questions regarding career opportunities in this field. New job opportunities and re-training of human services professionals will be the major topics of the agenda.

The Career Day will be held in Jenkins Hall on Loyola's Charles Street campus between 12:30 and 4 p.m. and is free and open to the public. Interested individuals must contact the Psychology department as soon as possible to register. Please call Mrs. DeAgro at (301) 323-1010, extension 2306.

Dickeyville Day Nursery celebrating 50 years of service

This year, Dickeyville Day Nursery is celebrating 50 years of service to the Northwest Community. Established as a nursery school in 1936 after serving as a public school since 1902, Dickeyville has seen three generations of pre-schoolers pass through its welcoming doors.

Today it offers the working mother full-day care for her preschooler with an Early Childhood educational program with emphasis on social and cultural development.

Arts and crafts, music, field trips, reading and arithmetic readiness are offered as part of the winter and summer curriculum. Summer sessions stress nature study and other outdoor activities.

Located in the historic village of Dickeyville, it is convenient to the Social Security complex, several large shopping centers and a number of industrial parks as well as West Baltimore neighborhoods.

The school consists of spacious class rooms full equipped, a large tree-shaded playground and ample parking.

Call 448-1111 for information about hours and fees; or visit the school at 2215 N. Forest Park Avenue, directly opposite Kernan Hospital.

According to the Chinese Zodiac, 1986 is the year of the tiger.
