George Breitman dead at 70; author of many Malcolm X articles

George Breitman, a life-long member and leader of the American Trotskyist movement, editor of the English-language edition of Trotsky's writings, and author of a book and numerous articles about Malcolm X and the Afro-American struggle, died recently in New York City.

He was 70 years old.

In 1935, when he was 19, Breitman joined the revolutionary movement in Newark, New Jersey. In 1937 he was a delegate to the founding convention of the Socialist Workers Party, and he remained a member of that organization until January 1984, when he was expelled because of political differences with the present party leadership.

For the last two years of his life, Breitman helped organize the Fourth Internationalist Tendency and edited its journal, the Bulletin in Defense of Marxism.

Starting in 1941, he served as editor of The Militant, a newspaper which reflects the political views of the SWP. He held this post a number of times. Later he took primary responsibility for the editing and publication of an extensive collection of writings by Leon Trotsky from the Russian revolutionary's last exile, 1929-1940.

Breitman was a particular authority on the U.S. Black struggle and on Malcolm X.

GW commencement speaker

Highest ranking black officer in Navy was awarded degree

Rear Admiral Benjamin Thurman Hacker, USN, was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of education, honoris causa, by The George Washington University, during commencement exercises held recently at Lisner Auditorium. Hacker also delivered the commencement address at the School of Education and Human Development.

In presenting the award, university president Dr. Lloyd H. Elliott cited Hacker's "many contributions and accomplishments in the service of (his) country and for (his) leadership achievements on behalf of education and training in the United States Navy." Elliott referred to Hacker's promotion to rear admiral as a significant event in the history of the United States Navy, and his appointment to his current position of "special significance to those who applaud the assignment of distinguished leaders to influential positions in education."

The highest ranking black officer in the United States Navy, Hacker has been assigned since October 1984 to the Office of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Manpower, Personnel and Training)/ Chief of Naval Personnel, where he is director of the Total Force Training and Education Division. In this capacity, Hacker serves as advisor on policy definition and assessment of Navy training and education program effectiveness.

According to Hacker, ("The Navy) spends approximately seven billion dollars a year on training and education programs, and we are committed to insure that training is as effective and efficient as possible in satisfying our primary requirements for the highest degree of operational (combat) readiness."

REAR ADM.
BENJAMIN HACKER

Hacker was born in the District, the son of Reverend C. Leroy Hacker and Alzeda C. Hacker, now residents of Pittsburgh, Pa. A good portion of his earlier years were spent traveling with his father, a former Army chaplain.

He completed most of his high school education at Campbell Street High School in Daytona Beach, Fla., and graduated from Roosevelt High School in Dayton, Ohio in 1952. After two years at the University of Dayton he transferred to the University of Wittenberg in Springfield, Ohio, where he received a B.A. degree in science in 1957.

Hacker entered the U.S. Navy and, upon completion of Aviation Officer Candidate School at Pensacola, Fla., was commissioned an ensign in September 1958. Following flight training at Corpus Christi, Texas, he received his "wings" in 1960. His first operational assignment was with Patrol Squadron TWENTY-ONE, Brunswick, Maine, in P2V "NEPTUNE" anti-submarine warfare aircraft.
