
BOMBED BY BOGEYS — Jim Thorpe made six birdies in the first seven holes he played in the final round of the PGA Championship tournament Monday. But successive bogeys on the 16th and 17th holes knocked him from a tie for third place to a seventh place tie - an estimated cost of $12,000. However, his 282 netted a check for $20,833. Not bad for a guy just finished with a severe attack of tendenitis.

Skins see Kelvin Bryant their key to Super Bowl

CARLISLE, Pa. (UPI) — Washington Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke says running back Kelvin Bryant - one of the most coveted refugees from the faltering USFL - may be the ingredient necessary to return his team to the Super Bowl.

Bryant, the USFL's second all-time leading rusher and one of the premier all-purpose backs in the game, Wednesday signed a four-year contract with the Redskins reportedly valued at $3 million. Bryant is one of seven USFL players, including quarterback Doug Williams, signed by Washington since Monday.

Bryant, whose 4,055 yards rushing in three USFL seasons with the Philadelphia and Baltimore Stars was surpassed only by Herschel Walker, was drafted by the Redskins in the seventh round of the 1983 NFL draft and the Redskins maintained his NFL rights.

The USFL last week suspended play for the 1986 season.

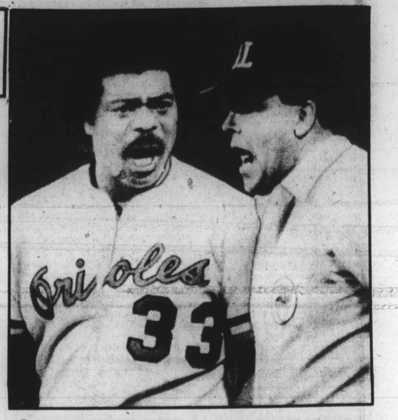
"I believe that he may be the link in the chain which will find its ultimate source you know where - it's in the town on the West Coast with the initial 'P,' said Cooke, referring to Pasadena, site of Super Bowl XXI.

"This is going to kill (Redskins coach Joe Gibbs) because he hates me to talk about Super Bowls, but that's exactly what we are in this game for - to win the Super Bowl. He, along with (running back) George Rogers, is going to be one of the factors to help us get there," Cooke added.

* * *

Bryant, wearing No. 24, participated in his first practice in a Redskins uniform Wednesday night, running through a two-hour intrasquad scrimmage.

The 6-foot-2, 195-pound Bryant, along with Williams, ran through Pittsburgh offensive schemes against the Redskins defensive unit, as the team gears up for Friday night's home preseason contest against the Steelers.



AW, C'MON, UMP! — An irate Eddie Murray blasts first base umpire Rocky Roe for a foul call that deprived the Orioles first baseman of a probable double, in Wednesday night game action. Of course, Eddie lost the argument but he went back to the plate and singled for his first of two hits. The Birds took a 7-6, 13-inning decision from the Blue Jays, then left for a weekend series with the Indians in Cleveland. Back home Tuesday with Oakland.

George Foster's version of rhubarb with Mets

George Foster wanted to set the record straight.

So, he said Monday that his mouth — not the color of his skin — landed him in trouble with the New York Mets and led to his release from the team last week.

Foster and Mets General Manager Frank Cashen held a news conference at Shea Stadium to attempt to clarify remarks the 37-year-old left fielder made before his release last Wednesday.

"Let me make this clear, I did not say the Mets were racists," Foster said. "My remarks were not racially motivated, I never said that being benched or being released was racially motivated.

After all, how can my being benched in favor of Kevin Mitchell (also black) be racially motivated.

"My statements were the straw that broke the camel's back," Foster said. "I never got to see Mr. Cashen to say my side and that's what this is today. I was misinterpreted, everything snowballed and I was released. But it really didn't happen all of a sudden."

Foster said Monday to make one small point when I spoke to that reporter," Foster said. "It wasn't that important until it got misinterpreted. Fans look up to baseball players. Fans don't care whether the baseball player is black or white. Fans respond to performance. To fans race is secondary, if not totally irrelevant."

Said Cashen: "George Foster was not released because of the uproar over the remarks he passed. He is a Christian man and when he says they were misinterpreted I believe him.

"We have been talking about his release since spring training. We decided to continue with him as a limited regular through the All-Star break and then see what happens."

Redskins ink QB Williams

CARLISLE, PA (UPI) — Quarterback Doug Williams, making the jump back to the NFL after two seasons in the USFL, says he is elated to be with the Washington Redskins.

One day after the Redskins acquired his rights from the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Williams agreed to terms and reported to the team's Dickinson College training site Tuesday night.

Williams, 31, who was a Grambling All-American, guided the Buccaneers to the NFC championship game in 1979, said he has accepted his role as a backup.

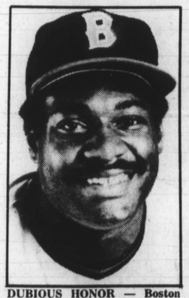
"Let me get the record straight, Jay Schroeder is the starting quarterback for the Washington Redskins — I know that, coach (Joe) Gibbs knows that and everybody else knows that. I didn't come here to unseat Jay," he added.

Williams, known for a strong arm and weak knees during a professional career starting in 1978, played five years in the NFL with Tampa Bay before joining the USFL. He spent the 1984 season with the Oklahoma Outlaws and the 1985 season with the Arizona Outlaws.

The Redskins reportedly dealt a fifth-round draft choice to Tampa Bay for the rights to Williams.



DUBIOUS HONOR — Boston Red Sox designated hitter Don Bayler appears to be the American League's designated target. On Tuesday night he was hit for a record 25th time this season. KC's Bud Black did him the honor.

Hagler to okay Leonard Monday?

BOSTON (UPI) — Middleweight champion Marvin Hagler is expected to announce Monday he will fight Sugar Ray Leonard, a Boston television station has reported.

WNEV-TV reported Wednesday that a source close to Hagler said the champion will probably announce Monday that he will fight Leonard in Las Vegas. The station reported Hagler was to spend this weekend discussing the bout with his wife, Bertha.

No money or fight date was disclosed.

However, it has been speculated that a match between Leonard and Hagler would be worth $15 million, of which more than $10 million would go to Hagler.

Hagler said in July he was contemplating retirement. The Brockton, Mass., fighter has held the title for the better part of six years. His most recent fight was an 11th-round knockout of John Mugabi last March in Las Vegas.
