had the opposite effect. The volunteers are now itching more than ever to get out there and do the job."

The previously undisclosed amount of campaign funds was described by campaign treasurer, Ron Shapiro as only a "starting point." "We still have a ways to go," he said.

The $500 ticket affair attracted several hundred supporters including Del. Elijah Cummings who said, "I wholeheartedly support Kurt and there is no question that he is going to be the next mayor."

Despite Schmoke's high name recognition, the word from the campaign is that campaign chairman, Larry Gibson has made bumper stickers a top priority.

Teams of volunteers, headed by Malik Rahman offer the stickers to potential voters as they arrive at campaign events, shopping malls, outside church and club meetings or at their workplaces.

An extensive field network has also been put in piace to organize the various neighborhoods.

The city has been broken into about 50 areas in which coordinators are responsible for communication with community leaders, churches, schools and area volunteers.

—Eviction

After speaking with Scott Sindall (the property manager) and Jay French (the owner of Franklin Court Apartments and 70 housing properties), Trice discovered that he was indeed wrongfully evicted.

By then his dog had been impounded, his clothing had been stolen or damaged, and what was left of his furniture, was placed in storage at the city warehouse.

Jay French, owner of the Franklin Court Apartments said "It was a technical error."

Trice then proceeded to obtain a court order to get his furniture out of storage, and his animal out of the pound.

Because of this technicality, Trice has lost, according to his figures, over $9,000 in damaged or stolen property, and as Trice said "I am unable to work because all I have are 2 pair of jeans and a pair of sweatpants."

The warehouse list, which was filed on April 2, differs greatly from the itemized list that was filed by Trice and his attorney, Raymond Tubman.

Some of the possessions that were contained on the itemized list are 2 VCR's, watch, gold chains, color TV and other valuable possessions whereas the only possessions that were on the Eviction Chattell Inventory were a couple of tables and bits and pieces of his furniture.

Trice assumes that the rest of his possessions were stolen when he was evicted.

French said "I am sorry for the error in judgement and I do apologize," but he is now being taken to court. A claim has been filed for punitive damages for all of Trice's damaged and stolen property.

All parties involved were in rental court on Monday, April 27, because of the wrongful eviction and because Sindall is claiming that the $340.00 paid on March 13 to Mark D. Smith (maintenance worker) and to himself is not valid because the receipt that Sindall wrote is a duplicate of the first.

The decision which was handed down on Monday by Judge Oshrine, was the fact that it would be noted in the case that $1,083.33 will be due from Trice.

There was also going to be a lawsuit filed either (Monday, April 27th), or (Tuesday, April 28th) for wrongful eviction and intentional infliction of emotional distress-cause of action, but plans have now been altered, and an out of court settlement is in the making between the insurance company representing the French company and Trice.

Trice is also asking for compensation for a light explosion that occurred in his apartment on Jan. 4, 1987, which be claims caused him physical harm.

This is still pending because the lawyer that had the medical records, a Mr. Foster, has since died, and the medical records can't be obtained from his estate as yet.

A technical error is proving to be quite costly for all parties concerned.

The HUB Organization attempts to strengthen the black community through enhancing black businesses.

"Challenge For The Future" was the new theme for the HUB's annual banquet, but the concept of "Buy In/Buy Us" remains the HUB's ongoing campaign.

Chairman of the "Buy In/Buy Us" Campaign, Victor Clark, explained the meaning behind the concept. "The lopsided dependency of the black community on businesses, which are not black-owned, for goods and services should not continue."

Clark pointed to facts contained in recent reports that exposed the economic problems of Baltimore and especially highlighted the weak economic state of the Baltimore black community.

Clark added "The awareness that this seventh annual "Buy In/Buy Us" campaign and those that have preceded it bring to the public an awareness invaluable in raising the consciousness of the general community to the needs of black businesses."

The HUB Organization stresses that now is the time for the black community to control its own destiny, secure its own liberties and most importantly to prepare for its heirs a business community that can only excel with an even greater commitment.

The Community Banquet to be held at Brown's Memorial is co-sponsored by Big B Warehouse, Sunpapers, and Esskay.

Rev. Miles said, "The thrust of this church is to make itself a viable part of the community." He added, "The theme for Brown's Memorial Church is 'A Church Moving Back To Basics.'"

Following the banquet, Brown's Memorial will have its closing service for the week-long revival, where Dr. Johnny Ray Youngblood, of Brooklyn, NY is the revival preacher.

experiences is one where the faculty and staff of a university or college fail to participate in a student's career development. Thornton feels that faculty participation is more of a plus for Coppin State College mainly because of it's smaller size.

Thornton said, "Coppin is smaller, the faculty is more active than larger institutions, but my only complaint is that any faculty should encourage students to use the resources of a school to their advantage. After all, they do pay for it!

Morgan University is a larger institution than Coppin State and Carson feels that sometimes a faculty seems reluctant to get involved with the development of students.

"We as faculty and staff of Morgan do not participate in enough activities outside the realms of our jobs" says Carson.

Both directors described the advantages that their institutions offered to all students especially juniors and seniors. The problem that they usually encounter as directors of career planning is the reluctance of students to get involved with the various seminars and workshops offered.

Carson explained "The Career development staff of Morgan encourages not only seniors but sophomores and juniors to take part in internship programs. We offer co-op programs for some majors and workshops and seminars that can benefit a student who will one day be in the job market.

"Coppin offers workshops on resume writing, interviews and of course counseling. Any student is capable of more than they individually realize. If you apply yourself and are assertive: 9 out of 10 times you can get the job you seek," Thornton said with confidence.

After working with many students, Carson observed that students make the mistake of believing a resume consists only of a college degree. "This is where our staff steps in to offer systematic procedures for finding a job and how to market yourself."

"The job market is pure competition. You are no longer competing with friends, you are competing with everyone," explained Thornton.

Carson gives a simple step for students to follow. "I remind a student that they are the product and a resume is the commercial.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Vanessa Ajayi, R.N., clinical manager of the Maryland General Hospital Cardiac Care Unit, has been selected as an Outstanding Young Woman of America for 1986. The award recognizes her for outstanding accomplishments, ability and community service.

Local youth is picked as outstanding cadet

Eddie Sanders, a Northwest Baltimore youth, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. James (Joyce) of Glen Avenue, has been named "Outstanding Cadet of the Month" for March at Fishburne Military School in Waynesboro, VA.

"Both you and Eddie can be justly proud of this award, particularly since the selection is made entirely by cadet officers, and is indicative of the esteem in which Eddie is held by his fellow cadets," the school's commandant, Lt. Col. James C. Baker, said in a letter to his parents.

Eddie Sanders is 15 years old and has been enrolled at the school since Sept., 1986.

His father, James, is a major at the state penitentiary in Baltimore, and his mother, Joyce, is a gospel singer with the Greene Sisters and assists her husband in a Mary Kay cosmetics business.

a 60 day notice and use the extra income to accelerate the mortgage payoffs.

According to local sources, it is laudible that the federal housing commissioner intervened to stop the sale of the mortgages, but more is needed to adequately protect the rights of tenants.

It is their belief that federal legislation is needed to prevent using "high finance techniques to freely sell the rights of tenants in the marketplace for the benefit of wealthy developers and private investors.

Critics also indicated that state and local legislation is needed to impose rent controls and property conversion restrictions that will protect the long-term interests of low and moderate income tenants.

A look at Miss Balto. Best '87

She's charming, she's talented, she's vivacious - she's Maya Acte Boston, "Miss Baltimore's Best" 1987! On Sunday, April 12th at the Omni International Hotel, Maya won the crown and much more at the Seventh Annual "Miss Baltimore's Best" Scholarship Pageant.

This young woman will now officially represent Baltimore at the "Miss Maryland Pageant" in Hagerstown, June 25 through June 27, and, hopefully go on to the "Miss America" Pageant next fall. In addition, she will represent our city and the "Baltimore is Best" program at many events throughout the coming year.

Maya received a $2,000 scholarship from Kings Dominion, a $1,000 Wardrobe allowance from Security Square Mall, a trip to Disneyland courtesy of Piedmont Airlines and B104 Radio, a magnificent ball gown donated by Saks Fifth Avenue, and a professional photo session courtesy of Studio 1209.

Maya, 22, graduated from Loyola College with a degree in media writing. She plans to use her scholarship money to further her education at the Broadcasting Institute of Maryland. Her ambition is to pursue a career in broadcasting and in the music industry. Maya won the crown by competing in evening gown, swimsuit, interview and talent competitions. In the talent competition, she sang and played the saxophone to "Is It a Crime?" by Sade.

First Runner-up in the Pageant was Camille Franchesque Wilmer, a gradute of the John Casablancas Modeling and Career Center. Camille's first ambition is to obtain a Bachelor's Degree in marketing.

Her ultimate goal is to be the owner of a modeling agency where she can help aspiring models. Camille received a $500 Scholarship from Kings Dominion and a Professional Modeling Program Scholarship courtesy of the Barbizon School of Modeling.

Teri Lynn Joyner won the honor of Second Runner-up. Teri is a Dance/Education major at Towson State University. She plans to own and operate a dance studio to enhance the talents of others through dance and education. Teri received a $500 scholarship from Kings Dominion.

Other finalists in the pageant were: Nanci Jean Knorr, Sherri Ann Webb, Laura Leslie Jackson, Kimberly Ann Blazek, Sandra Lynn Moore, Alicia Marie Damesyn, and Wendy Ann Wilkins.

"Baltimore is Best," a non-profit, self sustaining program created in 1976 is under the direction of Mrs. Floraine Appelefeld, a full-time volunteer on Mayor Burns' staff. The program's primary objective is to stimulate civic pride and community spirit. All projects are funded by monies received from the sales of "Baltimore is Best" merchandise and corporate contributions.

For more information and photographs, call 396-5785.
