ABOUT TV

By Deborah Quinerly

The trauma of teenaged lives lost to driving while intoxicated will be focus of WJZ-TV's next TV special, "Shocked Sober."

A half-hour program, "Shocked Sober" airs tomorrow night (28th) at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 13.

The special highlights a trauma prevention program developed by nurses at the Maryland Institute for Emergency Medical Services Systems Center who became disillusioned by the numbers of young trauma patients that were victims of drug and alcohol-related automobile accidents.

Working predominantly with the juvenile services agencies of surrounding counties, the program was developed to educate young people about the dangers of drugs, alcohol, and driving.

The program involves pre- and post-educational sessions and a tour of the trauma center.

"Shocked Sober" takes the viewer through the program with a group of student volunteers from a North Carroll High School health class, and graphically illustrates the carnage caused by careless youths under the influence of drugs and alcohol.

The show also takes a look at the grief-stricken families of victims who have fallen prey to irresponsible, intoxicated drivers.

"Shocked Sober" is a powerful half-hour of scenes from the shock trauma emergency room, students' reactions at the sight of traumatized victims, and emotional statements from the families of victims.

"'Shocked Sober' was specifically produced," says Jonathan Klein, WJZ's Vice-President and General Manager, "to deliver a message to our young people at a time when prom and graduation celebrations greatly increase the probability that youth will drive while intoxicated."

Have a good and safe week!

Orioles You Gotta Be There '88

—George Folkes

Towards the end, actor turns into visionary as he introduces his formula for preparing a "new breed of black men" for life in the 21st century.

Folkes, a South Bronx, NY native, is a graduate of Morehouse College in Atlanta where he studied cinematography. He then taught filmmaking at Clark College for several years before enrolling in graduate school at the University of Southern California.

Describing the male and female reactions to his work, Folkes says, "I get a lot of hugs from brothers. I think (they) appreciate the fact that there's another brother up there dealing with this. Sisters say 'I'm glad someone understands me. It's rare that a man can express how I feel.'"

Independent producer and humorist George Folkes.

Performing solo is an ambitious endeavor for even the most seasoned actor. But Folkes comes off insightful and sincere, making it all appear effortless.

32nd Street Plazha provides atmosphere

By Deborah Johns Moir

There is a good feeling about the place when you walk in. 32nd Street Plahza can be many things to many people. It is virtually three clubs in one.

Downstairs in the "Gallery," the older crowd hangs out preferring the more intimate jazz setting. Live entertainment is provided on the weekends. Jazz enthusiasts can also meet on Saturday mornings.

Upstairs in the "Rose Room," patrons are entertained via satellite TV. Then there is the central area, the "Loft" which houses the dance floor, large bar, and the disc jockey booth.

Here, members and guests can unwind during happy hour, party at night or partake of the many special events that occur.

Some of the special features include the showing of videotapes (provided by Ron Hamilton's Metro Showcase) of events happening at the club. On Mondays, the younger crowd has the opportunity to try out as models or musicians for performances on Tuesday nights.

On Wednesdays in the lower level Gallery, the Plahza presents "The Invasion of the Body Snatchers," featuring male exotic dancers for ladies only.

Thursdays are ladies' night; all women are admitted free until 10 p.m. Thursdays and Fridays are also a time for professional networking.

Part of the networking includes the "Business Person's Happy Hour" Monday through Friday from 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Drinks are two for one and the Friday happy hour offers delicious fish dinners.

The Plahza is attracting the professionals between ages 25-55. Robert Clay is the owner and one can tell he takes great pride in presenting a clean, good-looking, spacious establishment to his patrons. This is a black-owned club with so much style, even the printed literature (announcing upcoming events and regular features) is impressive!

Marie Henderson, the management consultant, has been advising Clay since the club's opening in 1985. She has helped establish 32nd Street Plahza as "the" place for black professionals to go not only to unwind or party, but to take pride in patronizing an elegant black establishment.

The bottom line is: you want to keep going back to 32nd Street Plahza; and it is the kind of place you show off to your out-of-town guests.
