Black suicide rising at alarming rate

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

When 37-year-old Kansas City, MO. police officer Steve L. Green sat on a curb last Tuesday, pointing a revolver at his head and squeezed the trigger, he joined the growing list of blacks committing suicide in the United States.

The rate of suicide for black men increased alarmingly from 8.0 percent per 100,000 of the population in 1980 to 11.3 percent per 100,000 in 1985.

Apparently, he was upset about being arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated on May 31 at 2:30 a.m. Police also say he was distraught about personal problems.

Later on that morning about 10 a.m. an on-duty police officer spotted Green leaving his car to sit on a residential area's curb. Green was carrying a .357 Magnum service revolver and pointing the revolver at his head and in his mouth, Officer Dan Witcher, of the Kansas City Police Department, said.

The on-duty officer called for help, Witcher said, but negotiators could not talk the 12-year police veteran out of the suicide attempt.

Green shot himself about 1:05 p.m. after a three-and-a-half hour stand-off with negotiators. He killed himself using a police department handgun.

The man whom family and friends called "well liked," died a half an hour later at the Truman Medical Center in Kansas.

"He was a good officer," said Officer Witcher.

Cecilia Scott, a family friend, told the Kansas City Call and Post a black newspaper, "I can't believe Steve put a gun to his mouth. It doesn't make sense."

Friends and family told the newspaper that the crime scene investigations unit officer was not suffering from any familial problems, said Donna Stewart, a Call and Post reporter.

Family and friends complained that they were not being notified immediately.

During the three hour ordeal, his wife was not informed, said Scott. She may have been able to talk him out of the suicide, Scott told the paper.

BEAT THE HEAT—Perhaps one of the best ways to beat the heat is to relax and enjoy it. Suzette Wynn comfortably leans against the wall of the Washington Monument and allows her mind to take her to cooler times and cooler places.

HOT, HOT, HOT.

The sun's blazing rays beamed upon Baltimore for three straight days last week, pumping temperatures well over the 90's.

HOT, HOT, HOT.

But despite the blistering weather, Billy Taylor, meteorologist for WBAL-TV Channel 11, said Baltimore did not set a record.

The city did manage to tie a record on May 30, matching

By Ejike Obineme
AFRO Staff Writer

If everything goes according to plan, Eric Boyce-Bey, 25, and Carolyn Braxton-Bey, 21 will exchange marriage vows this Saturday.

Carolyn Braxton-Bey

The Moorish-American couple, who has been at the receiving end of a racial harassment because they wanted to live in Hampden, an all-white neighborhood, has already secured a marriage license from the Baltimore City Circuit Court.

"We are already married," Boyce-Bey said, "but we are not making it official."

Since they started living together, the couple has had two children, a 2-year old girl, and another girl aged 7 months. Braxton-Bey had a 4-year old boy, before she met her husband to-be.

Braxton-Bey played down their meeting. She said it was not one of those glamourous love stories one reads about

Hampden's shame

Most Baltimoreans are familiar with the highly publicized campaign called "Baltimore's Best," but there is one section of the city which qualifies as Baltimore's worst.

That community is Hampden, which just this week, while celebrating the 100th year of existence. During the celebration, the overt racism which permeates the neighborhood was readily apparent.

The vandalism and harrassment of the Boyce-Beys, the Moorish-American couple who dared to rent housing in the 3000 block of Keswick Ave., has brought under public scrutiny this hotbed of racism.

Mayor Schmoke was booed as he took part in the anniversary parade, and our mayor, ever the diplomat, shrugged off this slight, dismissing it with the comment, "they booed me because I am the mayor, it is to be expected."

Yet, when some of the catcallers were asked why they indulged in such insulting behavior, they replied simply: "because he is black."

Obviously, not everyone in the Hampden community feels this way, yet there has been no community outcry denouncing the behavior of the few who have gone out of

Councilman Snowden sparks housing probe

By Alicia Benjamin
AFRO Staff Writer

When Carl O. Snowden ran for city councilman in Annapolis in 1985, he pledged to investigate the alleged mismanagement and corrupt behavior in the town's public housing arena.

And now, three year's later, he says efforts by him and Annapolis Mayor Dennis Callahan, to clean up the Annapolis Housing Authority have resulted in the indictment of Arthur G. Strissel, Jr., the former executive director of the AHA.

The U.S. District Court in Baltimore charged Strissel with 10 counts of bribery, racketeering and wire fraud, recently.

Snowden said since he was elected as city councilman for the 5th Ward in Annapolis, he had received complaints from residents of two public housing projects in his ward, Robinwood and Newtowne 20.

He said he joined forces with Callahan to investigate complaints of shoddy maintenance insensitivity to complaints made by residents of the housing projects.

Their investigation resulted in a three-year long battle which resulted in Strissel's indictment, said Snowden.

"I see the indictment of

Civil Rights Commissioner

Pendleton dies

Clarence Pendleton, 57, the man who was raised in the civil rights movement but who often forgot from whence he came, died following a heart attack in San Diego, CA Sunday.

Pendleton, as chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, turned that Federal body into a hammer for the Reagan Administration as he vehemently opposed busing, hiring quotas and attempted to move the commission toward opposing affirmative action.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, Democratic presidential contender who was campaigning in California, said that Pendleton "like any American, had the right to express his point of view which may not have been a

Funeral services are pending.
