Family needs safe housing

Baby victim of lead poisoning

By Delfield S. Yoes, III
AFRO Staff Writer

"It is our recommendation that an alternative living situation in public housing be provided for Tiffany and her family (including two siblings ages 6 and 4) to safeguard the children from any further exposure to lead poisoning."

This is part of a letter written by Carol Kardell, a Social Worker at Mt. Washington Pediatric Hospital.

A copy of the letter was sent to the Department of Housing and Community Development in February.

"Tiffany and her family are continuing to experience deprivation through a situation in which they were victimized."

"Please help them by assisting in locating an alternative living situation. This should be a priority case in your agency."

This is part of a letter also written by Kardell and sent to the Department of Housing and Community Development at the end of March.

It's the middle of April and 14-month-old Tiffany Austin is still forced to stay with her grandmother.

Tiffany's sister, Tamicka Boyd, now 7, her four-year-old brother Andre Austin and her mother, Christine Boyd, are living in a house with an extraordinarily high lead level.

Tiffany Austin was diagnosed with lead poisoning in September of 1988. At the time of her diagnosis, the level of lead in her blood was 32.

GRIM REMINDER — As the prom season approaches, teens everywhere are being cautioned about the hazards of drinking and driving. This tragic accident happened on Hull St. in Richmond, Va. during an unusual April snowstorm. Described as that city's worst car accident in two decades, three teens, ages 13-15, were killed when the stolen car that they were illegally driving collided with another automobile. The 61-year-old driver of the other car also was killed. Results of toxicology tests to determine the involvement of drugs or alcohol are pending, but no evidence was found at the scene.

Caucus happy with results

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

The leader of the Maryland Legislative Black Caucus called the '89 General Assembly a "hard-fought session" that struck a critical blow to the smokers' rights bill and triggered $1.5 million for the Baltimore Urban League's new headquarters.

"There was nothing given to us," said Curtis S. Anderson, chairman of the black caucus. "We fought for every inch we got.

"I think when the dust finally settles, we'll be oh the plus side," Anderson added.

Caucus members were happy the controversial smoker's anti-discrimination bill that critics argued minimized the gains of minorities, women and the handicapped had failed.

Bob Wade:

AFRO's efforts gain momentum

By Fred Lindsey

"We feel that Bob Wade is an honorable man and he hasn't done anything wrong," said Tom Waters of the Save Bob Wade Committee at Wednesday's afternoon press conference at Dunbar High School.

Water's statement was in direct reference to the growing community support for the beleaguered basketball coach at the University of Maryland and to urge the president of the university (Dr. William Kirwan) to take full control of the present situation.

Although it has been reported that the NCAA probably won't make a decision regarding the investigation of the Terp basketball program until August, the Committee is pressing that the matter be resolved as soon as possible.

"We want the Wade situation to come to an appropriate

THE ARTIST REPLIES...

AFRO reader Patricia Judkin questioned why a mural at the MTA's Lexington Market Station to commemorate the many ethnic groups to settle in Baltimore, omitted African-Americans.

The AFRO contactd Patricia Alexander, the mural's artist, who explained that there are two plaques and two sets of murals on the beams over the platform.

The plaque at the Saratoga St. entrance to the station (seen by Judkin) did not include African inspired art, but the first three murals seen from the Lexington St. entrance were inspired by the art of East, West and North African countries.

Alexander, who is white, says her work has been greatly influenced by African art.

The AFRO encourages its readers to write in with their questions and concerns. As the "VOICE OF BLACK AMERICA" we will continue to pursue the answers.
